COSPER MAY FACE FRAUD ALLEGATIONS

Referee Continues Bankruptcy Case to Give Creditors Chance to File Their Charges; 'Bishop' Grilled

Continuing the bankruptcy hearing in the case of "Bishop" Wilbert Le Roy Cosper, D. C., C. P., until December 9 to allow time for an investigation of the disposal of some $63,000, Referee W. J. Hayes yesterday told attorneys for sixty creditors that they would have until that time to file fraud charges, if they so desired.

Hayes declared Cosper a bankrupt, but refused to discharge him from responsibility until the sixty odd parishioners from whom he obtained thousands of dollars have had time to probe into the "degree seller's" affairs.

A galaxy of doctors of divinity, the product of what Referee Hayes termed Cosper's "factory" are listed as creditors. Even the stenographers, telephone operators and door-keepers affixed the dignified title of D. D. after their name or the prefit "Dr." to which they are entitled by virtue of sums paid to the Christian Philosophical Institute head.

ALL KINDS OF "D. D.'S."

There is Dr. Lona Good, who asks $19,000, part of which is for services in the moving picture "Kingdom of Human Hearts," that Cosper values at $150,000 but which failed to pay revenue. Or it is Lona Good, D. D., C. P., Ph. D. And then there are "Doctors" Grace Wood, Eleanor Duffield, Sue M. Moscovich and Myrtle M. Hayes, whose jobs ranged from giving "healing" over the telephone to answering the door.

These Doctors of Divinity, Christian Philosophers and Doctors of Philosophy combine with George Emmons of Alameda, who does not designate what degree he bears, and with some fifty odd others in bringing Cosper's total liabilities up to $33,946. To pay this he has total assets of $2942, he declares.

During the hearing the matter of the disposal of $63,000 by Cosper was taken up.

"I loaned that to the Institute," said Cosper.

"But where did you get it?" Hayes asked him.

"I borrowed it from my parishioners," was the reply.

BORROWED AND LOANED.

"So you borrowed $63,000 from your parishioners and then loaned the money to the Institute, of which you are the controlling factor?" demanded the referee.

"Yes," was the reply.

Hayes resumed questioning Cosper regarding the auctioning off of his $2500 car to a man named Spencer.

Cross-examination disclosed the fact that Spencer had received the money for re-purchase of the car from Cosper.

"But where did you get the money to buy back your car?" asked the referee.

"I borrowed it on my note from members of my flock," was the explanation.

Referee Hayes made it clear to the creditors that he had refused to discharge Cosper from responsibility, and had continued the hearing until December 9 to give them ample time in which to take action against the bishop, should evidence gathered warrant it.

Short glides in the air were made as early as the reign of King Harold of England, by a monk named Elimer.

PUCCINI FUNERAL TO BE IMPRESSIVE

BRUSSELS, Nov. 29.—An impressive funeral, arranged by Belgian authorities in co-operation with the Italian colony, is planned for Giacoma Puccini, world famous operatic composer, who died here today from a heart attack brought on by infection following a throat operation.

The wife of the composer, herself suffering from a throat complication, is expected to arrive here from Italy tomorrow. Puccini's son and daughter were at his bedside when death came. Puccini's recovery had seemed certain after a three-hour radium treatment Tuesday for two small tumors in his throat. His condition took a turn for the worst last night, however, and early today the the apostolic nuncio administered the last sacrament. His body will lie in state up to the time of the funeral and throngs of music lovers will pass the bier. Hundreds of telegrams and cable messages of sympathy were being received here tonight.

Bay Farm Isle Tide Rise Near Record

ALAMEDA, Nov. 29.—Fears expressed by citizens today resulted in a statement being issued by Seymour Arada, bridgetender, that the recent high tides in the vicinity of Bay Farm island are not unusual for this time of the year. Yesterday the waters rose to 6 feet, 3 inches, flooding many lowlands and nearly inundating the roads.

The high water mark yesterday according to Arada was one inch [illegible] when a 75-mile gale lashed the bay waters to the highest point in recent history.

DUTCH TREAT POPULAR FOR DAY OF FETE

Students, Faculty, Alumnae Prepare for Mills College Carnival to Be Held at Hotel Oakland Saturday

A luncheon, bridge tea and dinner dance will be the brilliant functions which will feature Mills College Day at Hotel Oakland on Saturday. The smart set and leaders in education about the bay will find a common cause in rallying to the support of the local women's college, and through an hour's pleasure will assist in financing a new campus residence hall which will be named after the late Ethel Moore, a trustee.

Mills girls in their quaint Dutch costumes of blue and white will give a picturesque note in their role of waitresses and scorers to the series of social affairs, each of which will draw its several hundred guests. The ivory ballroom will be set apart for these events.

Already a long list of reservations have been made for the luncheon, which will be served between the hours of 12 and 2 p. m. Groups of friends desiring to entertain, Dutch treat parties, and representatives of the men's and women's clubs of the city giving practical expression to their interest in Mills, have spoken for tables.

Concert Singer Sues to Divorce Realty Broker

Incompatability Is Cause of Unhappiness, Declares Berkeley Artist.

Los Angeles real estate vs. Berkeley music.

The practical vs. the artistic. As well expect oil and water to mix says Cecilia Mila Nixon Bainbridge, concert singer and musician whose voice has been heard on the concert stages of Europe and New York.

Mrs. Bainbridge appeared yesterday in a new role, that of plaintiff in a suit for divorce against Carleton Reed Bainbridge of Los Angeles.

At her studio home, 1537 Euclid avenue, Berkeley, where she lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Nixon, Mrs. Bainbridge discussed her divorce suit, which was filed in the superior court of Alameda county.

"It's a plain and simple case of incompatibility," said the singer. "He is an attorney. I am an artist. He is a real estate broker. I am a singer."

Mrs. Bainbridge, whose father is a railroad claims agent, has a short complaint. She alleges that Bainbridge has been guilty of cruelty in that he "failed to show the proper affection" for her when she was ill, that he is cold and indifferent and that he has persistently refused to carry any life insurance in her behalf.

The couple maried in San Jose August 16, 1917. They separated last August in Los Angeles. There is no community property and no child, she declares.

Mrs. Bainbridge formerly resided in Berkeley. She has spent four years in Europe and three in New York during which time she appeared in concert most of the time, appearing in many of the leading opera houses of Europe.

DEBUTANTE FIRE VICTIM SUFFOCATED

Autopsy Shows Girl Who Died in Burning S. F. Home Met Death From Inhaling Fire and Smoke

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 29.—Suffocation, folowing a hemorrhage of the lungs caused by inhaling fire, stated examining physicians, caused the death of Miss Marie Virginia Edmonds, 23-year-old Los Angeles society beauty, who lost her life early this morning of the fire which destroyed the home of John F. Sheehan, Jr., 117 Alpine Terrace.

When firemen had gained control of the blaze, which swept through the entire house before it was discovered, the body of Miss Edmonds was found in the guest room. A blanket was drawn over her head.

Miss Edmonds was educated in the fashionable Mt. Vernon Seminary at Washington, D. C., and Miss Semple's school in New York.

CAME TO SEE BIG GAME.

Miss Edmonds came to San Francisco last week to be the guest of her chum, Miss Alice Sheehan, at the Stanford-California game. She had been making her home in Los Angeles with her father, who was prostrated by the news of her death and is unable to come north. The body will be sent to Los Angeles, where the funeral will be held.

The fire in the Sheehan home, when discovered about 6 o'clock, had swept through the house. Mrs. Sheehan, awakened by smoke and flames, aroused her family and they rushed to temporary safety on a rear porch. Mrs. Sheehan made an effort to reach the guest room, where Miss Edmonds was sleeping, but was drievn back at the door by the flames.

CHILDREN ARE SAVED.

Jackie, 13, Betty, 10, and Suzanne, 7, three younger children of the family, were passed from the porch to a window in the home of G. W. Thomas next door. Mr. and Mrs. Sheehan and their eldest daughter, Alice, narrowly escaped death by climbing down vines and pillars in their night clothes.

Nazareth Regoli, 124 Alpine street, a neighbor who tried to assist them with a ladder was badly burned about the hands, and Lieutenant D. F. Feeney, 1250 Twenty-ninth avenue, a fireman attached to engine 27, was badly bruised when a nozzle he was holding, "went wild," and struck him on the leg.

Mrs. Inez Rodoni, 109 Alpine street, who first discovered the fire, tried to arouse the family by breaking through the glass in the front door. She was severely cut, and was taken to St. Joseph's hospital.

JAPAN WATCHING AMERICAN NAVY'S HAWAII DEFENSE

British Papers Also Devote Much Attention to War Game in Pacific.

BY UNIVERSAL SERVICE
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The annual maneuvers of the American fleet are the subject of great interest to others besides Japan. Just now some of the British newspapers are devoting space to the 1925 plans of the American navy.

The "Naval correspondent" of the London Daily News, in a long article discusses the navy program as follows:

"Maneuvers on an unusually extensive scale are to be carried out by the United States navy early in the coming year. The scene of operations is to be the Pacific, and for six weeks the combined fleet will be based upon Hawaii, which would serve as headquarters of the American navy in the event of war with an Asiatic power.

JAPANESE WATCHING.

"The Japanese papers are displaying a keen interest in these maneuvers, the purpose of which was referred to some weeks ago by Admiral Eberle, chief of operations, who said:

"'Next year our plan is to have the combined fleet rendezvous at San Pedro and then proceed to Honolulu.

"'All the ships in the Atlantic will go to the west coast and join the battle fleet, and then go as a body to the Hawaiian Islands, where they will base for six weeks, hold maneuvers and then investigate fleet anchorage facilities in the islands.

"'All depends on whether or not we shall have enough fuel to hold the combined maneuvers at Honolulu. They are the point we really work up to in each year's program.

"ENEMY'S OFFENSIVE."

"According to despatches published in Japan, the maneuvers will open on January 4, on the assumption that diplomatic relations have suddenly been broken off at a period when the American war preparedness is at low ebb. The American Atlantic fleet will be despatched through the Panama Canal in February to join the Pacific ships at San Pedro, the Pacific force having meanwhile kept watch over the Canal zone with aircraft and destroyers to insure the safe passage of reinforcements from the Atlantic.

"At this stage it is to be assumed that the 'enemy' has begun an offensive against Hawaii, and the combined American fleet will steam there at full speed to circumvent the attack. The plan allows for a meeting with the 'enemy' off Honolulu, his defeat in action, and a pursuit to the westward as far as Midway Island, a distance of 3100 miles from San Francisco.

"One Japanese despatch adds: From early in June to the middle of December operations will be continued in Australian waters, on the supposition of a junction with Australia, and will include replenishing operations at sea, this being considered the weak point of the American fleet in time of war."

Another despatch declares Japan to be the objective of these maneuvers, and regards "the open announcement of the scheme for including Australia in the operations" as very daring.

ANTI-JAPANISM.

"Besides testing problems of tactics and strategy, the maneuvers have another purpose, it is added—namely, to emphasize the lack of fast cruisers and the shortage of transport. 'It is also intended,' the despatch concludes, 'to promote antid-Japanism in Australia and New Zealand, and show the power of the United States against Japan.

"There appears to be no justification for these sensational statements. The American maneuvers are being held in the ordinary course of routine, and the selection of Hawaiian waters as the venue cannot imply any menace to Japan, seeing that her coast is nearly 3400 miles distant. As for the alleged 'junction with Australia,' this presumably refers to a visit which part of the American fleet is to make to Australian ports in the course of the summer, but this visit has no connection with the maneuvers, which will have ended months before.

"It need only be added that early in October the Japanese fleet was engaged in grand maneuvers on the other side of the Pacific, practically all effective ships in commission taking part, and that the exercises included some very realistic operations by air craft and submarines, together with a landing in force on the coast of the supposititious enemy."

SCHOOLS TO SEEK POLL TAX MONEY

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 29.—State school forces will make a fight during the legislative session here in January to have funds raised under the newly-enacted poll tax apportioned to the public schools of the state in addition to the regular allotment of $30 per pupil now provided, it was learned today.

The act provides that the poll tax shall go to the schools, but a provision in the constitution states that the legislature must provide "not less than $30 per pupil in average daily attendance." As the law now stands the poll levy would not increase the school apportionment, but would merely serve to relieve the corporations paying for the upkeep of the schools, it is said.

It is estimated that the poll tax will bring in approximately $2,000,000 a year.

Will C. Wood, state superintendent of public instruction, and Mark Keppel, Los Angeles county superintendent, are expected to back the move.

BANDITS FIRE ON S. F. AUTO MAN

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 29.—Louis La Place, automobile man and former San Francisco police officer, had a brush with four automobile bandits in St. Francis Woods early today. Four shots were fired at him in the darkness.

La Place was driving along Portola Drive when the bandit car endeavored to crowd him. He increased his speed to 50 miles an hour. The robbers overtook him and fired four shots as they passed. The bullets hit the machine but missed La Place, who came to a stop. The bandits were going so fast that they could not stop for some distance and La Place seeing their predicament turned into Ulloa street, parked by a tree, left the machine and hid in the bushes. He saw the bandits return but they missed him and his car in the darkness.

GET-RICH-QUICK SWINDLER SAYS VICTIMS TOO EASY

Story So Simple He Couldn't Stop Coin, to Be Plea of Panama "Magnate."

By OLIVE SHERWOOD.
BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

CHICAGO, Nov. 29. —Put on a pretentious front, pose as a financial wizard , promise fabulous profits. The problem then will be not how to become rich but rather how to keep people from forcing their wealth on you.

That is the "get-rich-quick" philosophy of Leo Koretz, greatest of swindlers since Ponzi, who, during the coming week, will face a galaxy of charges of fraud growing out of his great Bayano River Trust of Panama—the fairyland concern organized to market the untold riches of Panama.

So well did Koretz's philosophy work in practice that Koretz had some of the well-known financiers of this metropolis begging him to let them invest. And the financiers now admit that they did as much in order to sink about $2,000,000 of their holdings.

TOOK SAVINGS OF MOTHER AND BROTHERS.

Koretz went after the big game and even enticed his own family to take the savings of his mother and brothers for his venture. He said that his only trouble was to keep people from forcing their savings into his hands and that is the defense he expects to make when forces of the law begin to demand an accounting for his frauds.

He thinks that there was nothing wrong with it legally—if people wanted to bite, why should he be held responsible?

Koretz told of imaginary holdings of huge timberlands along the Bayano river in Panama, of the finding of oil and minerals on the property for which millions had been offered him by a leading oil interest. The story took well, funds began to pour in.

Koretz told a party of the more prominent stockholders to take an investigating trip at his expense. When they reached Panama, he left Chicago. Alligators and swamps were found along the Bayano, which was marked by no Koretz holdings and with no oil.

That was a year ago. After months of luxurious living on the money of others at his Pinehurst lodge near Halifax, N. H., Koretz was located recently, just as he was about to venture on another scheme to appropriate $1,000,000 from wealthy Canadians for a high class fishing club and outing colony.

ITALY TO CANCEL SINCLAIR GRANT

By HIRAM K. MOSERWELL.
Special Wireless to The TRIBUNE and the Chicago Daily News.

ROME, Nov. 29.—It appears probable the concession granted by the decree of last April to the Sinclair Oil Company for exploration and exploitation rights on virtually all Italian land where oil exists, will be cancelled. A parliamentary commission yesterday examined the project, which must be transformed from a secret pact into law before it becomes finally valid. It is understood that the majority of the committee opposed it.

Public criticism of the concession Italian groups claim Italian money and enterprise are perfectly capable of exploiting the nation's oil resources and the Sinclair company does not intend serious exploitation, but only to prevent its rivals from getting Italian oil.

Women in Auto Crash Ask $50,000 Damages

Damages of $50,000 are asked in two suits filed in the superior court yesterday against James A. Graham and his wife. In the first action Josephine Slater is the plaintiff and in the second Margaret Lyons. Each asks $25,000.

The suits grow out of an automobile accident on the Castro Valley road, December 2, 1923, when an auto driven by George Slater and one driven by Graham collided. Mrs. Salter and Margaret Lyons were riding in the Slater car. Both allege injuries of a permanent nature.

MAYOR IN HOME OF SHAKESPEARE TO VISIT OAKLAND

Custodian of Relics Will Be Guest of Niece During Extensive Stay.

William Porter Bullard, who next year will visit his niece, Mrs. William Edward Johnson of Athol avenue, has been elected mayor of Stratford, England, according to word received by Mrs. Johnson this week. The office carries with it the duties of chief magistrate and custodian of Shakespeare's house museum and relics. The Bullard family is widely known throughout England in art cricles, its men being considered among the greatest authorities on antiques. The office of mayor of Stratford is a complimentary one, the honor of guarding Shakespearian treasures being considered ample reward.

It is estimated that over 50,000 Americans visit the Shakespeare House each year. Bullard's duties will include extending hospitality to this great throng of strangers. Some of the valuable pieces of art in the British Museum have been donated by members of the Bullard family.

Oakland has a close relationship with the Bullard family through two pieces of furniture in the children's room of the Free Library at Fourteenth and Grove streets. Several years ago Henry Bullard, father of Mrs. Johnson, purchased all the old seating used during Shakespeare's time in the old parish church. It was made into chairs and settees. Some of the historic furniture found its way to Oakland.

The new mayor of Stratford is planning a tour of America, drawn to this country through his interests in agriculture. He startled England a few years ago by growing from American seed, clover measuring eight feet in height. While in this country he will be the house guest of his niece, Mrs. Johnson. Mrs. Johnson and her husband, the well-known baritone, recently established their residence in this city. Coming to the coast from New York, they made their home for a time in San Jose.

Mayor's Niece

MRS. WILLIAM EDWARD JOHNSON will entertain her uncle, Mayor of Stratford, England, and custodian of Shakespeare's House Museum and Relics, during the coming year when he tours the United States.

Purse Snatching Pair Flee in Auto

While one man waited a short distance away in an automobile, his companion sneaked behind Mrs. G. C. Hughes, 1325 East Twenty-sixth street as she stood waiting for a street car at Twenty-fourth avenue and East Twenty-sixth street, containing $8 and a bank book, snatched her purse and ran back to the machine. The two men escaped before Mrs. Hughes could summon aid or secure the license number.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Vernon W. Van Fleet of Indiana will become chairman of the federal trade commission December 1, succeeding Huston Thompson of Colorado, it was announced tonight.

A Test Every Man Past 40 Should Make

Medical authorities agree that 65% of all men past middle age (many much younger) are afflicted with a disorder of the prostate gland. Aches in feet, legs and back, frequent nightly risings, sciatic pains, are some of the signs—and now, a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science has written a remarkably interesting Free Book that tells of other symptoms and just what they mean. No longer should a man approaching or past the prime of life be content to regard these pains and conditions as inevitable signs of approaching age. Already more than 19,000 men have used the amazing method described in this book to restore their youthful health and vigor—and to restore the prostate gland to its proper functioning. Send immediately for this book. If you will mail your request to A. J. Kirk the Electro Thermal Company, K-2-711 Van Nuys Building Los Angeles, Calif., the concern that is distributing this book for the author—it will be sent to you absolutely free, without obligation. Simply send name and address. But don't delay, for the edition of this book is limited.—Advertisement.

AIR MAIL RATE CUT ASKED ON FLOWERS

HAYWARD, Nov. 29.—Harry Bradford, Hayward postmaster, has opened negotiations with Washington for a reduction of rates in eastern shipments of lower county grown flowers, particularly daffodils, by air line, according to Otto Emerson, grower, who is cooperating with Bradford in the move and who informally represents many of the other floriculturists of this district.

Present charges of 24 cents an ounce to New York and 16 cents to Chicago, says Emerson, make the air shipments impossible, but were the rates cut in half, a profitable trade could be carried on and a heavy eastern demand for the flowers could be filled. Growers of Eden Township, which comprises San Leandro, Hayward, San Lorenzo and Mount Eden, would be especially affected by the reduction.

WOMAN SLAYER, INSANE, IS DENIED SANITY HEARING

SEATTLE, Nov. 29.—Ruth Garrison today lost her fight to escape from the insane ward of the Walla Walla state penitentiary, where she has been confined since her trial five years ago for the murder of Mrs. Douglas Storrs, wife of the man she loved. Presiding Judge Mitchell Gilliam denied her petition for a sanity hearing on the ground that the plea contained no evidence that her mental condition had improved since her commitment.

"I cannot believe," he said, "that the legislature intended that one who had escaped just punishment for a crime by a false plea of insanity would be entitled to a second trial on the same issue."

The Garrison girl's case attracted national attention at the time of her trial because of the cold-blooded nature of her crime.

PROPOSED CHANGE IN IMMIGRATION TO BE CONSIDERED

Raker Will Confer With Senator Jones on Proposed Amendment.

By LEO A. McCLATCHY
SPECIAL BY WIRE TO THE TRIBUNE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Whether to press in the coming short session of congress for action on a proposed constitutional amendment that would deny citizenship to children born in this country of parents who are ineligible to become American citizens, will be the subject of a conference Representative John E. Raker of California, announces he will hold soon with Senator Wesley L. Jones of Washington.

Raker has such a measure pending in the House, and Jones introduced one in the senate.

Because of the congested condition of the House judiciary committee's calendar, Raker thinks it would be advisable to have action started on the senate side, and will make this suggestion to Jones.

A survey of the congressional legislative situation will be made, and in the event a conclusion is reached that it is unlikely any action can be had in this session, the program will be put over until the Sixty-ninth congress.

Raker is particularly anxious to get action in the short session on an amendment to the new immigration law that would require annual registration of all aliens in the United States. His idea is that such a step is necessary to assist authorities in checking up on surreptitious entries.

Under such an amendment, aliens who were unable to produce registration cards would be subject to deportation.

Rather than introducing the amendment himself, as he had originally planned, the California congressman has concluded it would be advisable to have the proposal emanate from the House immigration committee. He is a member of this committee, and proposes to offer the suggestion at its initial meeting.

The registration of all aliens was recommended by President Coolidge in his message to congress last December.

HAYWARD

Chemicals Arrive For Soil Experiment

HAYWARD, Nov. 29.—A project in soil rejuvenation in the Mountain House district with 16 demonstration plots will open formally the first of next month, and continue for several weeks, according to Joseph B. Hammon, assistant farm adviser.

Chemicals, to be injected into the soil in an effort to break up a compact sub-soil, procured for the demonstrations on the plots, include four tons of lime, one-half ton of sulphur, 400 pounds of ammonium sulphate and eight tons o ffertilizer.

The work is purely experimental and the outcome is largely conjecture, states the assistant adviser.

Duck Shooting at Night to Be Stopped

HAYWARD, Nov. 29.—Night duck shooting along the shores of lower San Leandro bay will compel enforcement of a national law that provides for no shooting before sun-rise or after sun-down, according to J. L. Bundock, deputy fish and game commissioner, who is investigating a state law allowing duck shooting a half-hour before sun-rise and a similar period of grace after sun-set, being abused by hunters, Bundock says.

Hayward Pastor To Review Book

Hayward May Ask Extension of Street

HAYWARD, Nov. 29.—With announcement that Oakland is contemplating the extension of Tenth street to the San Leandro limits, and that the latter city is considering the construction of a bridge across the creek and extending the proposed thoroughfare to the southern limits, Hayward residents are advocating continuation of the street to this city.

About three years ago, when the traffic congestion of East Fourteenth street gave promise of greater proportions, it was pointed out that Watkins street, parallel with Castro street, which is a continuation of East Fourteenth street in the Hayward limits, could be cut through to the northern limits joining there with a road that could be established along the five miles of unincorporated area between Hayward and San Leandro.

Officials of the local chamber of commerce are considering a conference with representatives of the San Leandro and Oakland chambers on the matter.

Schools Plan Sales For Christmas Fund

HAYWARD, Nov. 29.—To raise money for the usual Christmas jollifications, including decorated Christmas trees, pupils of the John Gamble and Orchard Ward elementary schools are holding regular candy and food sales, with the assistance and cooperation of teachers and the residents of the districts.

The B street grammar school held a food sale this week that netted a profit, to be added to the Christmas fund.

Christmas programs will be held at the B street school primary department, the intermediate department and the John Gamble school on Thursday, December 11, and at the Pacific Primary and Orchard Ward schools on Friday, December 12. The programs are already being arranged and rehearsed. Parents and friends will be invited.

Novel Excuse By Speeder Brings Him Cut in Fine

HAYWARD, Nov. 29.—M. J. Rego, 371 C street, Hayward, can boast that he has introduced the most novel excuse for speeding that the Hayward court has received in more than a year, and saved $1 thereby. He almost saved an additional $10.

"I was hitting it up, but I had to get that machine home and fill her with oil in the garage, which has no lights, before it was dark. Can't run an automobile without oil, can you?" he asked Judge Jacob Harder.

"That's a new one," replied the judge, "and it's so new, in fact, that I'm tempted to forget about an $11 fine. What time were you arrested?"

"Four-thirty," answered the defendant, innocently.

"To early," said Judge Harder, "If it has been 5:30 I'd have suspended judgment—perhaps. However, I'll knock $1 off the fine. Ten dollars, please."

Traffic Officer Eschews Shows For Road Drama

HAYWARD, Nov. 29.—Human nature in all its phases and all its complications is nowhere better displayed than on the highways, asserts Lewie Eike, veteran traffic officer for southern Alameda county, and that is the reason that he has attended only one show in more than five years—and that one exception was not of his own choosing.

"Why go to shows," says Eike, "when every working day and hour is chock full of comedy and laughs for me.

"I can more to laugh at just studying human nature on the highway than any half dozen of your best vaudeville or movie shows. In fact, shows begin to appear stale after I started in traffic work.

FIRE BARES BOOZE PLANT.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29.—Fire, followed by the explosion of a steam-operated still, disclosed a gigantic moonshine plant here today. Three tubs of wine and 1500 gallons of mash were seized by police. Occupants of the burning house fled to avoid arrest.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.—Advertisement.

MARTINO SEEN AS NEW AMBASSADOR FROM ITALY HERE

By HIRAM K. MODERWELL.
By Radio to The Oakland TRIBUNE and the Chicago Daily News.

ROME, Italy, Nov. 29.—It appears probable that Giacomo de Martino, now Italian ambassador to Japan, will be named ambassador to Washington to succeed Prince Don Gelasio Caetani, who will return immediately to Rome. Although Premier Mussolini has not yet definitely made up his mind, and sometimes makes sudden and unexpected decisions, it is regarded in circles close to the government that De Martino is best suited for the post and is fairly certain to be chosen.

Unlike Prince Caetani, who is regarded as the personal envoy of Mussolini, De Martino is a diplomat by profession, as is the American ambassador to Italy, Henry P. Fletcher. He is a Neapolitan by birth and was chief assistant of Foreign Minister Marquis di San Giuliano. Later he became general secretary in the foreign office and, when Italy declared war on Turkey, he was charge d' affaires in Constantinople. Premier Mitti sent him as ambassador to Berlin and after the world war Premier Giolitti appointed him ambassador to London and Mussolini later sent him to Tokyo.

Thus Sig. De Martino has not been identified with any party or particular policy but he is one of the three or four ablest and experienced of Italian diplomats. His wife, Signora De Martino, is a favorite in Rome society and a woman of exceptional charm.

COUNTY GROWERS PLANT RHUBARB

HAYWARD, Nov. 29.—In anticipation of an active and prosperous season, rhubarb planting and transplanting in lower Alameda County is well under way, and will probably be completed by the middle of next month.

First pickings will commence the latter part of February, continuing for six weeks or two months. Most of the rhubarb will be handled by the Central California Rhubarb Growers' Association, although a large quantity will be shipped to coastal, middle western and eastern markets by private growers.

Diet Important to Fowl, Says Expert

HAYWARD, Nov. 29.—If you want healthy, productive chickens, feed them plenty of greens. Most important of all, feed them fresh inviting greens, and be sure that there is a tempting variety. Chickens, like human beings, want variety in their diet and like things served in an appetizing manner.

W. S. Freeman, poultry man of Castro Valley, makes these assertions. Freeman has practiced what he preaches, and has profited.

The average commercial chicken's diet should be divided into three equal parts, by weight—grain, mash and greens, says Freeman. The greens, whether it be kale, cut barley or alfalfa, acts as a tonic and a medicine.

Blue Bird Bureau

In these days of modern conveniences, automobiles and airplanes, it seems strange that Santa Claus still maintains his old-fashioned method of delivering presents But Santa is an old-fashioned person He has been dashing about in his picturesque equipage for many, many years and knows every house-top and chimney-pot and just how many stockings are to be filled in each house He has enlisted the help of the Blue Bird who hopes there will be no Christmasless homes in the Eastbay district this year Sometimes one is overlooked but it is an accident

Often some Goodfellow asks for the number of a house and the names and ages of all the children living there and agrees to take Santa Claus' place, supplying a Christmas dinner, a bundle of toys or a few articles of clothing—and joy and gladness

Is this to be a happy Christmas for the poor? It all depends upon you, Goodfellows Letters are coming from all sections and all have one theme (with variations) Christmas cheer

Boys write of their little sisters who have no doll Girls ask for playthings for their younger brothers and sisters Mothers ask for toys and clothing for their children often ask for food and sometimes for work Many requests are made for Christmas dinners

Goodfellow if you want a real Christmas thrill, take a basket piled high with substantial food and a few goodies for good measure, to one of the Blue Bird poor families The look of gratitude in the shining eyes of the undernourished children will light a glow in your heart which will endure for a long time It will add a sauce to your own dinner more piquant than any the most efficient chef could prepare

This message to Santa Claus came in the morning mail

Dear Santa Claus

As I am the eldest of the five children I thought I would write to you. First I will tell you that Daddy is sick a great deal He has been hurt twice this year and very sick the last part of October. The Doctor says it is caused from being hurt so much My sister was thrown from a machine in August and is very thin and nervous My brother had diphtheria and muscular paralysis in June but the rest of us are all well Daddy has a lot of expenses and is always worrying how he will meet his bills The baby is only 9 months old and mamma cannot work out We want you to see to all the children without a Daddy or Mamma first and if anything is left for just those who can't afford to have anything I will give you the names of my sisters and brothers Mamma, I know, will be glad to see anyone who would like to come here Mamma wrote last year and I know she feels ashamed to ask again but we will be very thankful for anything or a dinner or groceries I will close now hoping you can give every one some Christmas cheer"

A boy writes

"Dear Sir. Please send us something for Christmas Our families are very poor for our house burned a few months back Please send

This boy wants books of the "Wild West" type

"Dear Blue Bird I want you to send me the book of Tarzan and the Golden Lion and the Life of Buffalo Bill If you haven't these books I hope you will send me something about cowboys in the West. I like to read books very much. The library hasn't these books so I am asking you for them"

From the letters published, Goodfellows you can form a fair estimate of the various 'wants' outlined in the numerous epistles received Can you and will you join the Blue Bird in solving the problem of making the supply meet the demand? Just a little amount or a request for the name of a needy family to whom you will be Santa Claus, will lighten the load upon the wings of the Blue Bird. The Goodfellows coupon is published every day. Use it or phone to the Blue Bird Bureau

THE FARM COMMISSION.

A considerable measure of success is promised to President Coolidge's plan to approach a solution of agricultural problems in a non-partisan and judicial manner. The commission appointed to study those problems has set various governmental agencies to work assembling data and is awaiting completion of this detail work. Its recess will be over in January.

With agricultural conditions restored in large degree and with no pressure of party politics to hamper it, the work of the President's committee should go forward without interruption and to important results. There is no longer the need for desperate haste and immediate remedies in the wheat area.

The committee, upon which California is represented, is not restricted in any way. It has authority to examine into the merits of all proposals for farm relief made during the last session of Congress, to inquire into the workings of existing laws, and to study the problem of cooperative marketing. Without question its findings will influence legislation and, in all likelihood, will have the backing of the administration.

It may well be that out of this calm and ordered inquiry will come one of the best programs for the betterment of agriculture that has ever been advanced. Heretofore remedies have been put forward desperately and by men with purely sectional vision. This body of experts has time to study the problems in their entirety. It is composed of men of practical farm and marketing experience and is entirely free of politics.

FOREST MEN TO MEET.

If the forests of the Pacific Coast, and the whole country, are to be protected by the generous provisions of the Clarke-McNary bill, passed by the last Congress, the various states must be aroused to make provision for fighting fires which shall at least match that promised by the Government. When the American Forestry Association meets in Chicago in January an entire session will be devoted especially to the task of developing more extensive and efficient fire protection for the forests of the Nation.

Because the Clarke-McNary bill authorizes the Government to spend $2,500,000 for fire prevention there is a widespread belief that Federal departments will relieve states of the burdens and expenses in this connection. Such is not the case, for the bill makes it plain the Government will spend nothing in states which do not provide a sum equal to that sought from Uncle Sam.

Until the states themselves develop more efficient fire protective organizations and provide more money for the work, the full amount of the cooperative fund available from the Government cannot be forthcoming. It is considered probable that the amount actually to be appropriated next year will be less than $1,000,000 and because a large number of the states will not do their share.

The forest men have announced that one of the main purposes of the convention will be to arouse the lagging states and thus make available the full Federal appropriation. That being done, there will be expended $5,000,000 for forest protection, a sum which is said to be needed to assure the Nation a future supply of timber.

Another object of the convention will be to secure more public forests for the East, the White and Appalachian mountains, the Lake states, and the South.

LONDON'S RAT WEEK.

The vogue for special weeks and days has penetrated even staid old London. A "Rat Week" has just been held there and from all accounts it was rough sledding—for the rats. Three million of them were killed in the campaign. As it had been estimated that rodents cost the city $5,000,000 in damage annually, the casualty list is of real significance.

The efforts of the city authorities in the cleanup were heartily supported by the press. One enthusiastic reporter declared he had witnessed on moonlight nights whole companies of rats frolicking through Piccadilly, while one hospital manager reported he had discovered many entering his building along electric light wires stretched across the street.

Here in California and Oakland it is especially important that there be no let-up in the war on these disease spreaders. Their presence entails not only a great economic loss but a constant menace to health.

RECORD SUGAR YEAR.

Illustrating again the close connection between counties and benefits to be derived in the Bay section because of the enterprise and prosperity of the Delta and valley counties, is the record run of sugar at Alvarado. The plant there this year sliced 86,000 tons of beets which produced 241,000 bags of sugar, the largest year in the plant's fifty three years of operation. At the same time the Tracy plant produced 200,000 bags of sugar.

The Delta section has demonstrated to the State and the world that it is adapted to the raising of sugar beets, for the crop production there this year exceeds all former figures. One company, near Clarksburg, harvested thirty-six tons to the acre on a fifty acre tract, establishing what is believed to be a record for the United States, if not for the world. Another grower, in a 250 acre tract, harvested twenty-seven tons to the acre, netting over $200 to the acre. It has also been shown, according to Harry Hammond, the Byron editor and expert, that the accepted theory that sugar beets will not do well on pure peat soil is erroneous. On soil of this kind near Stockton one farmer secured eighteen tons to the acre and his beets tested 18 3 sugar content, and 87 per cent pure, a remarkable showing.

The annual consumption of sugar amounts to five million tons, a million of which comes from Louisiana cane and another million from Hawaii and Porto Rico. We have been importing three million tons, mostly from Cuba, so the market for the California product is held to be assured for the future. With a Republican tariff effective the sugar growers in this neighborhood are reaping a rich harvest from which the whole of California benefits.

THE CROSS-WORD CRAZE.

New York theaters have complained that the craze for cross-word puzzles is interfering with their business and even the radio orator is conscious of some apprehension lest some of the thousands who should be listening are working with pencils and dictionaries. Men have stood up boldly to denounce the puzzle as foolish, arguments occasioned by persistent questioning have disturbed the family circles, and street car passengers have been carried beyond their corners, all because of the checkerboard patterns and the search for words.

Of course, the cross-word puzzle comes in for its share of jokes. There are some valid reasons, however, for its popularity and the person who has given in to the appeal has no cause for embarrassment. Just as a stamp collection will aid the individual to a knowledge of geography, so will the cross word puzzle give him a wider acquaintance with words. It may be that the average man has no conscious desire to be acquainted with the scientific name of the three-toed sloth, but it won't hurt him when he finds it out.

George Varnell, referee of the memorable Stanford-California grid classic Saturday, says he believes every man on both squads lost from eight to ten pounds, so hard did they fight, and so intense was the heat in the bowl in the first stages of the game. Prima donnas who must leave for the spas of Europe to reduce will no doubt be filled with envy when they hear this news.

"Thousands of California Autoists Dodging Taxes." And some dodge pedestrians.

Seemingly, an effort was made to make light of San Francisco's electroliers.

BUILDING UP AUSTRIA.

Having had their ears filled with tales of Austria's woes since the world war, other nations will be relieved to hear of the campaign which the Austrian government is conducting in an effort to build up the productive capacity of the people and make the republic more nearly self-sustaining than it is at present. Austria, with a tiny territory, largely mountainous, is confronted with the task of finding food and clothing for six million inhabitants, most of them city dwellers. The problem is not easy of solution.

For some time, the attention of the Austrian government has been concentrated on city and town industries. Arrangements have been made with neighboring nations, after much bickering, for the purchase of raw materials and their manufacture in Austria. The Austrians also have proved capable as traders and have had the advantage of geographical position at the meeting of Europe's great highways, for the conduct of that group of activities.

Efforts have been made from time to time to improve agricultural conditions, with good effect, but until the present there had been no systematic attempt to entice town and city dwellers out into the country to settle where they can become self-supporting. As a part of the land settlement movement now under way, a small museum has been opened in Vienna to show by illustration how fruit is grown, how bees are cared for, how poultry is made to return a good living to the owner, and how a comfortable cottage may be constructed at small expense and with considerable artistic taste, as a home for city dwellers tired of paying rent.

To an American, with real estate campaigns and "back-to-the-land" movements more or less familiar, there may be nothing particularly startling in the Austrian land settlement drive. But the reversal of cityward migration in so old a land as Austria is a distinct novelty, and the effect of the campaign will be watched with great interest.—Rochester Herald.

NATIONAL MEN and AFFAIRS

By ROBERT T. SMALL.

(Copyright, 1924, by the Consolidated Press Association.)

Now that most of the Pacific coast north of the Tehachipi is either gnashing its teeth or smiting sardonically at the selection of the name Los Angeles for the ZR-3—our latest and most unbecoming Zeppelin—people are telling anew some of the stories that illustrate the boosting, the never-say-die spirit of the angels of Los Angeles.

One of the best of these is related by Royal D. Mead, sometimes of Honolulu, but more often recently of Washington, D. C. Mr. Mead tells of the man from Los Angeles visiting the Hawaiian Islands and refusing absolutely to be impressed by any of the wonderful things he saw there. There was absolutely nothing in the beautiful Pacific paradise which could compare in any way with the lamp posts of Los Angeles.

Finally the host of the booster vowed by the beach of Waikiki that he would make the visitor surrender. He put him on a boat and took him to the island of Hawaii to see the world famous volcano Kilauea. The two trudged up to the crater and looked down upon the steaming molten mass of lava which has been bubbling and boiling through the centuries. The man from southern California at last seemed impressed. The host had a triumphant note in his voice.

"Well, now old man," he exclaimed, "you can't say that you have anything like that in Los Angeles, eh what?"

The visitor shook his head and pondered for a moment.

"No," he said, "but I'll tell you what we have got; we've got a fire department that would put this thing out in twenty minutes."

The cities on the coast that do not think as much of Los Angeles as does Secretary Wilbur, wouldn't mind it so much if the Zeppelin merely was called "Los Angeles," meaning "the angels," but when it is constantly referred to as "the Los Angeles," signifying that the name is taken wholly from the city there is a disposition to rise up on the hind legs and howl.

Thomas W. Lawson, of "frenzied finance" fame, who lies ill unto death in a Bar Harbor, Maine hospital, was in his day, the greatest exponent and beneficiary of publicity that the world has ever known. P. T. Barnum was a piker beside him. In the midst of his attacks upon Standard Oil, Amalgamated Copper and Wall Street in general, Sir Thomas Lipton issued one of his challenges for a race for America's cup. A coterie of Wall Street magnates, members of the New York Yacht club, formed the usual syndicate to build a defending yacht.

Tom Lawson decided he would build one, too. He spared no expense and when the designers and constructors turned over to him the Independence she was as fine and graceful a yacht as ever touched salt water.

Then came the squabble that Lawson had been waiting for. The syndicate vowed they would not permit the Independence to compete in elimination trials as a defender. They intimated that Tom Lawson did not "belong" in the best yachting circles. Lawson ranted and raved and gave out statements. He even inserted advertisements in the papers stating his contentions.

"Tom," he said, "I believe you have convinced the committee. I think they are going to give your yacht a chance."

"Give, hell," replied Lawson, "you tell the committee with my compliments they can all go to the devil. Do they want to spoil my story?"

After a slight rebuff at the polls in New York state, young Col. Theodore Roosevelt has started once more in his father's footsteps by going to Louisiana on a hunting trip as the guest of Col. John M. Parker. It was down in Louisiana, or perhaps it was Mississippi, where the elder colonel hunted bears so assiduously and spectacularly, that the famous "Teddy bears" came into existence.

Young T. R. says he has no particular plans for the near future. He doesn't seem to want to go back to any job in the government until he is elected to one. Perhaps he will go hunting in Africa for big game next spring and then save the rest of his ammunition for another try at the governorship.

Raymond T. Baker, director of the mint under President Wilson, and [illegible] United States senate from Nevada two years hence, is back in Washington after a long stay in his native west. Always one of the best dressed men in the capital, Ray is particularly effulgent these days in an array of autumn colors that would send the Prince of Wales back to his haberdasher's in Piccadilly downhearted and done completely in. Ray's democracy is unsullied. He says that Coolidge wave almost swept Nevada over the Sierras and into the Pacific ocean, but he and the rest of the boys will be rallying around the flag again two long years from now.

HOME FOR BACHELOR PROFS.

The bachelor members of Washington University faculty are rejoicing, of course, in the news that a clubhouse is to be built for them. Those luckless Wrights, it seems, have been hard put to it to find tolerable living quarters. Naturally, then, the prospect of a campus home intrigues them. It is a fair question, though, whether this Gothic pile will prove a blessing or an irreparable loss.

The danger is that the comfort complex may get those chaps. The need for the ministering angel may elude them. The vision of the indispensable she (or should it be her?) may never cross their threshold. Drifting down stream gabbily and selfishly they may miss the one adventure that glorifies the voyage.

Do we hear suppressed giggling at these foolish fears? Let us hope so. Nothing can please us more at this juncture than to turn the bachelor members of the faculty over to the co-eds.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

An Old Sea Chest

The real deep sea sailor of two generations back usually took great pride in his sea chest, and many were the hours spent in loving labor with crude tools decorating cover and sides. Some of these boxes display wonderful taste in design and skill in execution, and fortunate indeed is the collector of furnishings who, having the proper setting, can add to his treasures one of these romance-filled boxes.

Unique among such chests is one now being shown in San Francisco. This chest was designed by Captain Edgar Wakeman, well known in the early history of San Francisco, and fashioned for him by a master workman, an old Norwegian ship's carpenter who spent many months in the elaborate hand carving and the skillful inlaying with silver, ivory and mother-of-pearl. The chest is mahogany, large in size, the cover having been made from a mahogany plank some five feet long, and the elaborate carving and inlay include an encircling silver cable, a silver anchor at each corner, the leaves of the laurel, stars, an American eagle and a flag.

For many years the personality of Captain Wakeman was closely associated with all that was romantic and adventurous in the young and growing community of San Francisco. His coming was through his "running away with a steamboat" for its owner, of course, the property having been seized by the sheriff. But the discharge of the debt, with the future fortunes of the owner, turned upon getting the New World promptly into California waters. Captain Ed Wakeman was adjudged the one man in New York fitted for so delicate and daring an enterprise.

Arriving here, after having brought so small a craft around the Horn, Captain Wakeman took a prominent part in the actions of the first Vigilance Committee. He was soon indicted as "the leading Vigilante," only half a dozen other names being known. But when these few names led by that of Captain Wakeman, were published in the morning newspaper the whole personnel of that famous tribunal hastened to make itself known, to prove that it was indeed the responsible citizenship of the community which had undertaken to change the whole political atmosphere.

Captain Wakeman thereafter figured as the "Commodore of San Francisco Bay," with a flotilla of boats under his command, and promptly and decisively exiled or returned to their native countries a great number of lawless characters who had come here, not to seek gold in the mountains, but to prey upon their fellow men.

A remarkable public dinner was tendered Captain Wakeman when, immediately following his Vigilante experiences, he sailed away from the port. During this dinner he presented, as a mark of public gratitude, with a large silk flag, a big silver speaking trumpet, a gold watch on a long chain, and a cluster diamond pin. Some years afterward Frank Pixley in his "Argonaut" commented on this dinner, with its gifts and its gathering of enthusiastic early San Franciscans, as something belonging peculiarly to California when it was young—something which could never be exactly duplicated.—Pacific Marine Review.

Ancient America

[illegible] tional Geographic Society's expedition to Pueblo Bonito, the pre-Columbian "apartment house" of Chaco Canyon, New Mexico, has brought back to Washington an amazing array of exquisite art objects and domestic utensils which shed new light on an early metropolis of Indian America.

Perhaps the most beautiful piece in the collection is a turquoise necklace of 2500 pieces and four pendants—the only complete specimen of such a necklace known. The method by which the Indians ground down the tiny pieces, and bored them out to be strung on sinews, has won the admiration of modern jewelers who have seen it. The four pendants are remarkable specimens of turquoise, deep blue, and with them, Mr. Judd said, he could have purchased every Indian horse in San Juan county.

Other unique objects d'art are jet rings, perfectly rounded, on which are mounted tiny carved turquoise birds. The mounting was done with pine gum, the adhesive of the American ancients, which lasted through the ages the rings lay buried in the pueblo ruins.

To get these, and other tiny pieces, the Geographic explorers this summer sifted tons of debris, after building a miniature railroad and set mule-drawn steel dump cars to work hauling out the rubbish.

Recovered by this tedious process are some of the closest woven and finest specimens of Indian basketry yet discovered. To preserve these required the utmost dexterity, for often upon exposure to the air the specimens crumble. The hope of preserving them lay in waxing them immediately upon their exposure.

Historically one of the important finds is a double basket, the like of which has hitherto been unknown in ruins other than cliff-dwellings, and the use of which has not yet been determined. It may furnish another clue to piece out further the habits, customs and religious beliefs of these aborigines. Although they left no written words, nor even any pictograph records that can be deciphered, they attained a civilization as interesting as the early cultures along the Nile and in Mesopotamia, yet distinctive from all Old World people. Already the daily life of the Bonito dwellers has been pieced out patiently in great detail.

"That object looks like a 'vanity box,'" remarked one geographer who viewed the collections.

"Not only that, but here is a bit of the rouge the Bonitans used," replied Mr. Judd, and he displayed a lump of reddish clay, which still will color the flesh. These "makeup" devices were used by the Bonitan men, however, rather than their women, and they served principally for the beautification of participants in their dramatic religious ceremonies.

Pipes also are in the collection. Some of these were "pleasure pipes" resembling very much the short, large-bowl English models. Others resemble cigar holders, with flaring bowls, and these were used to "make clouds" in the Bonitan's kivas, or worship chambers.

PERSONAL HEALTH SERVICE

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

ADVANCED STUDY OF ACNE.

Since most regular boys and girls have their full quota of pimples at the very time when they are most vain and sensitive about appearances, I flatter myself that the three preceding talks in this series of four on the subject of blackheads or whiteheads and pimples have had the rapt attention of that class of readers in whose interest I am chiefly concerned, the young 'uns. Now listen and you'll know pimples from papule to pustule. We finished off No. 3 talk by giving you some "white lotion" to dab on at night. "White lotion" is a mixture of a dram of zinc sulphate, a dram of sulphurated potassium, and 4 ounces of rose water. You shake it up and dab it on with the fingers, allow it to dry on the skin, and wash it off next morning with cold water.

This "white lotion" is good medicine for seborrhea (excessive oiliness) of the skin, for red nose associated with such oiliness, for excessive blackheads and for pimples. In some cases it may be applied two or three times daily. In any case it must induce mild irritation of the skin in order to effect the desired benefit. In no case should it be continued after it has set up any considerable chapping or irritation.

A modern remedy which is still more effective but which requires the skill of the physician to apply is X-ray exposure. When acne persists in spite of the simpler remedies then the victims should have the benefit of a course of X-ray treatments at the hands of a physician who understands the use of the ray.

Formerly I have recommended the bacterin (so called bacterial vaccine) treatment in chronic low grade acne, but patients who have submitted to this treatment seem to find it disappointing in too many instances. Probably the bacterin treatment is best for certain cases in which obstinate indolent "boils" or overgrown pimples are a marked feature, and then the bacterin should be prepared by the bacteriologist from the strains of germs present in the pimples, an autogenous bacterin, rather than a ready made stock article, in other words. All this the physician attends to; the patient should not attempt to seek out a bacteriologist. Some of the best skin specialists have discarded the bacterin treatment after prolonged trial; some have obtained very satisfactory results from autogenous bacterins. Perhaps much of the failure of "vaccines" is due to abuse of the method—the blind use of ready-made shotgun preparations without particular regard to the specific bacteria in the individual case.

How the X-ray helps acne is a question of some interest. X-ray treatment diminishes the functional activity of the sebaceous or oil glands, and that, as we mentioned in an earlier talk, is an important factor in acne. In short, acne is virtually an accidental effect of the seborrhea of youth. It happens when certain of the overdeveloped and overactive oil glands or their excretory ducts became infected with pus producing types of bacteria. Oily conditions of skin and scalp are the rule in youth, and as for the skin, the oiliness is commonly exaggerated by the ill advised use of various creams which the dumbbells imagine they must use for the complexion.

Sulphur is another famous local remedy for excessive oiliness. Resorcin is second to sulphur for the same purpose.

POET'S CORNER

THE RESOLUTE SOUL.

The world makes way for the resolute soul,
For the one who knows that he can
By faithful effort arrive at the goal
Of his preconceived, visualized plan.
For the one who has faith in his God-given power
To think, and to live his thought;
For the one who concentrates every hour
'Till his plan is finally wrought.

The resolute soul accepts no defeat,
But steadily ploughs ahead
And makes a path wherein other feet
May follow and safely tread.
He may meet discouragement's subtle pain
Or that terror—loneliness—
But ever he pushes on again
'Till his goal he finally press.

EVE BRAZIER.

A DAILY DON'T.

Have you a trouble shelf? Then use it!
Don't nag at God for every little care,
Or whine because it's raining pitchforks,
Or crops be ruined because the days are fair.

He gave you power to plan and think;
Get in and hustle for your daily bread;
Be thankful you can earn your food and drink,
And stretch your tired limbs upon a bed.

Don't stumble on—but walk with God!
And plan with Him through all your days.
Don't break—but bend beneath the rod,
And make the Golden Rule your hymn of praise.

CALIFORNIA TREE IN NEW YORK.

While it not generally considered hardy, north of Philadelphia, W. C. Muenscher, in American Forests and Forest Life, tells of a California big tree almost 100 years old in Aurora, New York. This sequoia tree is at least sixty feet high and the base of its tapering trunk is four feet in diameter. The lower branches, for a distance of over thirty feet up the trunk have all been cut off. The upper branches are in a good condition and are covered with dark green leaves. With the aid of field glasses numerous well-developed cones were observed in the top of the tree. None of the cones that were picked up under the tree contained fertile seeds. The cones on the tree were inaccessible, so they could not be examined for seeds.

According to statements by the present owner of the land upon which this tree grows, it was brought from California by an old sea captain between 1820 and 1830. In 1850 this property was purchased by the father of the present owner, who was much interested in trees and took special care of the sequoia. The soil about this tree was not plowed, but it was frequently fertilized with manure. The tree has always been hardy and never suffered from the cold winters until the severe winter of 1917-1918, when most of the lower branches were killed.

Bank Vaults in Solid Rock.

The largest foundation job for an office building in the history of New York was on the new Federal Reserve Bank building that has just been occupied. The basement was excavated five full stories below the street in solid rock, the building resting on ninety-nine concrete pillars and piers located inside the foundation walls.

The most interesting part of the building is the vaults for money and securities, these being located in huge recesses cut out of the solid rock on three floors below the street, each vault being large enough to make a 12-room apartment.

The vaults are protected by six revolving steel doors, the main doors being ten feet thick and weighing 230 tons each, while the five other doors are eight feet thick and weigh 189 tons each, the measure of safety and protection being the greatest ever taken in bank construction in the world, making it practically impossible for thieves to reach the securities.—Ohio State Journal.

PRESIDENT EBERT CALLED UPSTART, TURNCOAT, SNOB

Harden Excoriates Germany Chief as Sycophant to Monarchists.

By MAXIMILIAN HARDEN.
Germany's Foremost Publicist
BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—Germany, in the last six years, has had a republican constitution, but it does not yet comprehend the duty of holding it sacred. Only this week Chancellor Marx declared that it was incomprehensible that President Ebert should be drawn into the election, saying that such a maneuver was inconceivable in any country.

Mark Twain, who said the chief advantage of a democracy was in being able to call the president a donkey without being punished, would laugh in his tomb, while Woodrow Wilson would smile bitterly, and President Coolidge and former Presidents Millerand and Obregon could prove the contrary by their own experience.

CALLED "UPSTART"

What should be astonishing is not that an occasional stray shot hits President Ebert, but that this powerful official is almost never mentioned or is utterly forgotten. This proves that he is what the Americans call "old stuff."

This upstart socialist burns today with the worshipped yesterday, and he will worship tomorrow what he burned yesterday. He is the son of the Catholic president of Heidelburg University, but he never went to public school, and after practicing the profession of saddlery, he entered the profession of provincial socialist paper editor, and then ran a lodging house at Bremerhaven and organized strikes. He was elected to parliament as a social democrat and when the German army collapsed in 1918 the imperial government seized upon him as a make-shift.

Wilhelm saw what kind of a man he was and said

"I shall be happy to work with Herr Ebert."

GIVEN A PALACE.

But Ebert was too late to save the monarchy and after the pseudo-revolution, which he vainly tried to prevent, he became the president's commissary and in 1919 the national assembly elected him provisional president. After the constitution, the people were to elect a permanent president. But the election never was held. New laws were substituted and Ebert remained as president, though he never was popularly elected.

He was given one of the most handsome palaces in Berlin and a small staff of courtiers taught him and his wife how to behave in society, how to move, eat, receive visitors, pronounce foreign words, wear a top hat, evening dress and furs, use liquors and cigars with a smile. Six years is a long apprenticeship. The Eberts now motor and hunt (some say in quite the kaiser's style) and he has become a pious Catholic, although he was formerly diffident.

ALOOF FROM PEOPLE.

Not the slightest trace of social democratism. Ebert no longer comes in direct contact with workmen, though enlightened monarchs do, and as early as 1919 he greeted the returning troops as "our defeated army." He punished strikes, press indiscretions and small revolutionary plots with dictatorial harshness and thus he became a firm supporter of national reaction.

Like his predecessor, Imperator Rex, Ebert is sometimes flattered abroad, even by Americans. But workmen hate a turncoat and the nationalists have abandoned him because he refused to take them into the government and because he knows he will not get a majority at next summer's election, he has refused to run.

tomorrow? It is sufficient to know that during his six years as a republican president, he has acted in such a way that any future kaiser would be delighted to offer him the position of chancellor.

Will Rogers Explains How He Saves $80,000 in Income Tax

By JANE COMPTON
BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Will Rogers, famed maker of laughs, got another loud hee-haw out of little old New York today.

Will got the laugh on the income tax. For with the publication of figures that have worn the brains of many good Americans comes the word that Will cleans some $70,000 a year for writing jokes for the newspapers and $1000 a week for at least thirty weeks per annum for passing laughs from Flo Ziegfeld's audiences—and pays less than $6000 income tax.

Business men who read bulletins quoting Will's income tax—bankers and investment men from Wall street—held their sides and groaned while Will laughed at each as he met them. If Will really had an income of $200,000 a year, his tax return should have been $86,640. If it was $150,000, it should have been $58,140.

And that is where the laugh comes in.

INCORPORATES HIMSELF

Will Rogers is a company. He loses tremendous sums through depreciation, and he charges for undivided dividends.

"Will Rogers, Inc."—that is what he calls his act. Mrs. Rogers is the remainder of the corporation and pays an income tax that far exceeds the $5966 he offered to Uncle Sam for the privilege of amusing his relatives last year.

"There is no trick to bringing down an income tax if you go at it right," said Rogers to the writer tonight as he dodged group after group of Follies beauties tripping through the wings at the New Amsterdam. "I have simply taken a leaf out of the book of those financiers who profess to be so puzzled at my income tax return.

SAVING HIS BRAIN

"My brain would be a scrambled mass if I should try to figure out what the multi-millionaire's tax would be if they didn't charge for incorporation, depreciation and undivided dividends. I used the same idea."

Poor Will—he has a tough time with depreciation. You know his jokes are not half as good the second time they are heard as they were the first, and they are almost nothing in a full year's time compared to their early value. He has to count some 25 per cent off the company's income on that account. But worst of all is the trouble with undivided dividends. Rogers hardly gets a cent for all his efforts so he said. Why, more than half of the money has to go back into making the act better and better. He gets no dividends from it at all, well hardly none, that is. And the remainder of the corporation requires half of the pitiful bit there is.

"Incidentally," said Rogers, "I bought a lot of land in California and I am paying a lot of interest on that and paying to keep it up. You know that takes a slice out of any man's income."

Will is a good comedian, but he has no license to call himself a newspaper reporter. He is too good a business man.

Paris Peps Up Tea Party; Women Don Pajama Negligee

PARIS, Nov. 29. — The pajama negligee has superseded the tea-gown. It is now adopted in Paris on all occasions where the tea-gown was formerly worn. The pajama is usually made of the finest material and the softest colors. In one model brocade was used in shades of green and mauve, with bands of plain green silk. The pajama looked at first like an afternoon frock. The sleeves of the jacket were extremely long and voluminous. Another pajama negligee was of cherry and jay blue silk, and particularly becoming to a dark-haired mannequin who displayed it. Fashion makers regard the pajama negligee as one more step in the movement towards greater masculinity of dress. "There has never been a season," said a Bond street dressmaker to a Daily Express representative, "when there was so little scope for individuality of style or for dress artists to express themselves in their creations. Tailored suits look like men's suits, hats look like men's hats, shoes look like men's shoes—and now we have the pajama negligee."

SUBSTITUTE FOR COCAIN FOUND AT HEIDELBERG

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—A synthetic alkaloid anaesthetic to which its discoverer, Dr. Gottlieb of Heidelberg, has given the name "psikain," is being tried out in various German hospitals. Its anaesthetic working is said to be superior to that of cocain, and the after results are minimal.

Psikain can not merely replace cocain completely, but it is also unusable by the cocainists. The hope is expressed that a way may have been found here of eventually stopping the manufacture of cocain altogether.

Reds Flood Peking With War Leaflets

By JOSEPH ELDRIDGE.
(Special Cable to The Oakland TRIBUNE and The Chicago Daily News.)

PEKING, Nov. 29.—Since Tuan Chi-Jui assumed the office of president of China and appointment of a provisional cabinet from which are excluded Bolshevik sympathizers of the so-called governing cabinet, Soviet propaganda in Peking has become much intensified. Leaflets purporting to come from patriotic Chinese societies are being distributed daily, advocating abolition of all unequad treaties with the powers and stating that the true enemy of China is imperialism.

Typical of this propaganda is a manifesto issued by an anti-imperialism alliance society formed last summer by a group of notorious Bolshevik members of parliament. But a more inflammatory leaflet emanates from the university.

STEAM HEAT FOR LENIN'S MUMMY BEING INSTALLED

RIGA, Nov. 29.—The tomb of Lenin, the Bolshevist dictator, who died in January last and is buried in a huge mausoleum in Red square, Moscow, is to be closed for a fortnight, says the Soviet newspaper Pravda. 30,000 Bachelors Wail As Bulgaria Puts Tax On Them

SOFIA, Nov. 29.—Thirty thousand Bulgarian bachelors are cursing the shade of Stambolisky.

The government has revived a Stambolisky government measure taxing bachelors, declaring the the law is legal and that it will go into effect on January 1, 1925.

There are 100,000 fewer females than males in Bulgaria, so the bachelors are complaining that they have no way of escaping the tax by turning benedicts.

The government's answer is that there are surplus women in neighboring states, and there is no objection to importation of wives.

Typhoid-Carrying Cook, Pensioned, Infects 27 in All

ABERDEEN, Nov. 29. — Dr. Watt, medical officer of health for Aberdeenshire, tells the story of a cook who was responsible for 27 cases of typhoid fever. She was employed at various farms. Whenever she had the handling or cooking of food, it became contaminated with the germs which had remained in her body after an attack of fever in her youth.

Dr. Watt finally persuaded the local authorities to offer the woman the equivalent of the old-age pension on condition that she would not accept employment of the kind she had before. She agreed to this but could not obtain work that did not involve the handling of food. After a time, being used to an active life, she became dissatisfied. In due course the doctor was notified of a case of typhoid at a farm three miles from the town where she lived. No sooner had he began to make the usual inquiries than he found that this woman had been temporarily engaged in the kitchen.

POLICE PROTECT BLACKMAILER OF RAJAH, BIRD SAYS

Prince Revealed as British Secret Service Agent Among Moslems.

By WILLIAM BIRD.
BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

LONDON, Nov. 29.—When some day the whole story of the Midland Bank case comes out, it will prove to be an important chapter in the history of the British Empire.

The mysterious "Mr. A" is an Oriental potentate who has been extremely useful for British propaganda among Great Britain's Moslem subjects. For this reason the whole power of the British government's diplomacy has been exerted to save him from exposure.

The famous "secret questions" which were so delicate they could only be transmitted to the jury in writing were suppressed not so much on account of their delicacy as because their publication would make the case more political than civil.

NEWTON "PROTECTED"

The notorious Newton, who was described in open court as "the greatest scoundrel unhung," is a resident of Paris and was paid $15,000 to go to London to testify. The money was paid him by the Midland bank, but at the government's behest. It was said that Newton risked being arrested for blackmail but the writer has talked with high Britis police authorities and learns that Newton had been assured immunity, provided he remains to testify against the other conspirators, who doubtless will be arrested within the next few days.

The British government has spent millions of pounds, according to trustworthy information, in building up "Mr A" as one of Egypt's foremost black gentlemen and when the present scandal broke, it was feared that all this effort had been wasted. That and that alone, explains all the secrecy surrounding the trial and the extraordinary procedure of having one of the principal characters mentioned by initial only and of having one of the criminal questions put to the jury in writing, to say nothing of granting immunity to "the greatest scoundrel yet unhung."

(Copyright 1924 by The Oakland TRIBUNE.)

BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

LONDON, Nov. 29.—No event in the law courts in many years has created such a sensation as the great blackmailing case which was decided this week.

The mystery of the identity of "Mr. A," for reasons of state, has been successfully preserved in the public press, but the name is pretty generally known in informed circles and probably it is known by this time all over America.

The question most discussed is: "What will follow? Can a criminal prosecution be initiated against the gang of conspirators by the public prosecutor in the absence of "Mr. A?"

Public feeling certainly demands that the law shall not be unequal to deal with the most astonishing company of rascals who ever have been exposed in British law courts.

The fact that the authorities have long been in possession of the details of this terrible scandal without taking any action is the subject of a good deal of comment.

Berlin Danseuse Slaps Policeman; Her Head Aches

BERLIN, Nov. 29. — The Berlin policeman is no believer in misplaced gallantry. A young woman dancer had a sharp dispute with a taxicab chauffeur, and a policeman appeared to mediate. The dancer, who had just slapped the chauffeur's face, impartially did the same for the policeman.

Whereupon, says the local newspapers' report, "the officer made use of his club, dealing the temperamental lady a blow that induced her to cease her attacks."

LONDON WILL BROOK NO MEDDLING ON NILE, FAMED EDITOR WARNS

By A. G. GARDINER,
England's Greatest Liberal Editor.
By Special Leased Wire to The TRIBUNE.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Interest in the Egyptian situation has been greatly intensified by the arrests following the discovery of a plot to murder Lord Allenby. Open repudiation of the Ziwar ministry's attitude of surrender by the nationalists increases the gravity of the internal situation and tends to modify the criticism here of the action taken by the British government.

That criticism does not concern itself with the indemnity and the withdrawal of Egyptian troops from the Sudan, but is directed mainly at the article in the ultimatum relating to the Nile. This is considered to be calculated to create popular alarm on the most vital subject of Egyptian politics and tends to make the Egyptian populace sympathize with the extremists.

RIVER IS VITAL.

No British government can contemplate any policy other than a fair and equitable distribution of the waters of the Nile between England and the Sudan. The river is equally the life blood of both countries and there is no reason to fear a lack of abundant water for both but the Egyptians naturally are suspicious of schemes of development in the Sudan, which may diminish their supply.

Ramsay MacDonald's labor government had left the situation in a fair way for an equitable settlement. It had taken the view that the resources of the Nile and allocation of the water supply was entirely a technical and judicial question and that it must be left to the decision of an impartial expert committee which was interested in neither Egypt nor the Sudan.

DISTRUST CREATED.

The writer understands this view was endorsed by Austen Chamberlain when he succeeded to the foreign office. No doubt he will adhere to that policy, but introduction of the question in the ultimatum in a form easily construed into a menace, inevitably creates distrust in the British government's intentions in this vital matter and Chamberlain is being called on to disabuse the public mind on the subject.

The drastic policy adopted by the government has been much criticized, especially in France, where the press is talking more and more about the league of nations than ever before.

It is remarkable to observe the respect and enthusiasm for the league which is manifested by different nations when some other nation needs to be called to order. Nations are very much like individuals. They are acutely conscious of each other's iniquities and are strangely insensible of their own.

LEAGUE FOES IN POWER.

Will the question of the ultimatum be raised in the league? The writer understands that if it is raised the position of the foreign office will be that it is a domestic question and that it will not agree to submit that point to the court for a decision. That course certainly would represent the temper of the present government. Apart from Prime Minister Baldwin and Lord Robert Cecil, its leading members, Birkenhead, Churchill, Amery Johnson, Hicks and Worthington Evans are either coldly indifferent or are frankly hostile to the whole conception of the league.

This fact constitutes the most regrettable consequence of the late election. It has substituted a distinctly imperialistic ministry for one of strong liberal tendencies at the most crucial moment when a more reasonable government is in power in France and when, therefore, the possibility of a common pursuit of an enlightened external policy seemed particularly favorable.

It will be interesting to await the course of events in regard to the course of Lord Robert Cecil, whose delegation to the league is his main interest in public life and who is not likely to long survive any tendency on the part of the present government to put that tendency into the back ground.

TARDIEU BIDS PARIS AID BRITISH OR PERISH

By ANDRE TARDIEU,
Former French High Commissioner to the United States.
By Special Leased Wire to The TRIBUNE.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—What has happened this week in Egypt is vastly more important than is generally realized yet. The murder of Major General Sir Lee Stack and its consequences have been discussed thus far only from a European political viewpoint but it is really a tremendous world problem that is now opening up with Nineteenth Century colonial empires at grips with Moscow and Angora.

The political aspect is perfectly clear, although the French press unfortunately is carrying on an absurd anti-British campaign. The League of Nations has nothing to do with the question and will only burn its fingers if it interferes. The so-called Landowne-Delcasse agreement in 1904 gave Great Britain a free hand in Egypt and France in Morocco. Therefore, France's duty is to do nothing to embarrass London in dealing with the question, since France is having similar difficulties in North Africa, notably Tunis, where it has the so-called "Young Tunis" movement.

MOSCOW BLAMED.

As in Egypt, the movement began by demands for certain local reforms, but it soon developed into a campaign for complete seperation and extremists talk of open rebellion. And in Tunis, as in Egypt, these extremists are in close touch with Angora and Moscow. Angora furnished the plan of Moslem independence; Moscow supplies the notion of revolution and both these ideas are combined in a general campaign against Europeans.

Thus the French are in the same boat as the British and even if the treaty of 1904 did not exist, the common interests of the two nations should require a common policy.

The Moslems of North Africa forget the anarchy which their countries suffered before the Europeans came, bringing to them order and prosperity. It is this very prosperity created by Europeans that the natives now give as the reason for throwing out the Europeans. Moscow has a special budget for North African propaganda which figures heavily in the present state of mind of local populations.

And just while all this agitation is coming to a head, an unfortunate coincidence makes the French government decide to turn over to the Soviets Wrangel's fleet interned at Bizerta. A Soviet commission is coming now to Bizerta to take over the fleet and it will use the opportunity to spread useful propaganda along the lines of the famous Zinoviev letter. Admiral Exelmans, commanding the French fleet in Tunisian waters, has even demanded to be relieved of his post rather than receive this mission which he regards as dangerous.

In short, the British now are playing the last act of the play, while the French are playing the first act, but it is the same play, with the same authors and the same actors.

FIRST GREAT BATTLE.

Thus European colonization, which has done great things in the past and might do even greater things in the future, comes back to the work in the road. Consider what is happening in China, India, Persia and Irak—the same menace shows its head. Let Islamism win in Africa and Bolshevism in Asia and propaganda will be turned on Europe itself with the Third internationale immensely strengthened by its colonial success.

It is the first great battle between the old bourgeoise European regime and the new dictatorship of the proletariat. How small are our petty national and international problems in comparison.

Liver Trouble Now a Known Cause of Premature Old Age

Medical science knows that poisonous waste in our bodies would actually cause death in a few days if not eliminated by Nature's processes. Because it destroys these deadly poisons, the liver is our most important organ—the body's wonderful purifier.

The liver prevents the formation of body poisons that cause diseases of the heart, kidneys, blood vessels and are chiefly responsible for premature old age.

When the liver becomes weak, the poisons are sucked up by the blood and health is broken down. Physicians know that the liver cannot be regulated by drugs, but a safe Nature substance has been discovered which will at once increase the vital bile supply. The discovery is purified ox gall.

Get from your druggist a package of Dioxol. Each tablet contains ten drops of purified ox gall. In 24 hours the poison toxins will be removed. Your liver will be regulated. Blood purification will begin. Sallow skin will clear. You will feel so much better you will know you have found the cause of your ill health. Dioxol tablets are harmless, tasteless and cost less than two cents each.

These genuine ox gall tablets are prepared only under the name "Dioxol." If any tablet is offered you under another name, refuse it. Accept only Dioxol in the original, genuine package.—Advertisement.

UNWED GIRLS OF PARIS GIVE AWAY KISSES ALL DAY

French Celebrate Thanksgiving in a Way Unknown to Pilgrim Papas.

By JESSIE HENDERSON
(Creator of Seven Days in Lil' Ol' New York.)
BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Had Parisians, instead of Pilgrims, hopped ashore at Plymouth Rock, how different both France and New England might be today!

But, regrets aside, France did celebrate Thanksgiving this week, though differently from the celebration at the Ritz by homesick Americans and not based on the principles which led Elder Brewster and his earnest little band to settle at Cape Cod.

It was officially called "Saint Catherine's Day, the glorious fete of midinettes from the workrooms of the great couturieres. Most Americans here spent the day in massed crowds along the Rue de La Paix, watching the midinettes raising cain and evening at Mont Parnasse at a big dance given in recognition of the fact that, without midinettes, Paris no longer would be the world's fashion arbiter.

KISSES FREE!

Saint Catherine's Day is to the sewing girls of the world's most famous street something like the Mardi Gras and the Tammany picknic rolled into one. Saint Catherine was a martyr who renounced her royal crown rather than marry a man picked out for her by French statesmen. The midinette who reaches the age of 25 without attracting matrimony is privileged this day to don a fantastic costume and paper bonnet and, thus attired, she may be kissed by any man who can catch her.

It is, you see, a splendid combination of Hallowe'en and the old fashioned game of post office.

Afar was heard the shrill screams of lucky midinettes who failed to elude their pursuers and were kissed enthusiastically and resonantly before cheering crowds. Others were packed in taxi cabs and chased by other taxi cabs full of ardent youths.

DRESSED TO SCALP.

Each dressmaker clothed his midinettes in distinctive costumes, Louis XIV, Watteau Shepherds, sailors and Pierettes. The Frenchiest of all were American Indians daintily clad in striped silk shawls and pink chiffon plumes. Try to imagine a Sioux going scalping thus attired!

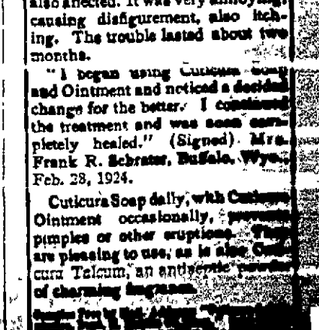
All the big dressmakers kept open house and champagne flowed like grape juice. Cavier was more common than peanuts at a circus and the balconies along the Rue de la Paix were a moving flower garden of color as the girls thronged thither on every floor to toast the cheering throngs below.

On other days there is no quieter, no more demure girl than the midinette, but on Saint Catherine's Day, la, la, la, she naturally lets herself go slam. Yes, it is quite different from the first Thanksgiving Day at Plymouth, Mass.

(Copyright, 1924, by The Oakland TRIBUNE.)

Recently 21,000 letters, each thought to contain a dollar bill addressed to a fake company were returned to the senders by the postoffice authorities.

SUFFERING FROM FEVERISH COLD?



If the children are feverish, fretful from a head cold or catarrh with nostrils clogged and head all stuffed-up, just apply a little pure, antiseptic cream into the nostril. It penetrates through every air passage, soothing and healing swollen, inflamed membrane and they obtain instant relief.

Try this. Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Nothing clears the head so quickly. Count fifty. All the stuffiness, dryness, struggling for breath will be gone. This is so much better than drugging children that every mother should use Ely's Cream Balm.—Advertisement.

Eczema Broke Out In Small Pimples Cuticura Healed

"I was troubled with eczema which broke out in small pimples on my face. When I scratched the breaking out or went near the hot stove water would come from it and as it touched other parts of my face the eczema spread. My scalp was also affected. It was very annoying, causing disfigurement, also itching. The trouble lasted about two months.

"I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and noticed a decided change for the better. I continued the treatment and was soon completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Frank R. Schrater, Buffalo, Wyo., Feb. 28, 1924.

Cuticura Soap daily, with Cuticura Ointment occasionally, prevents pimples or other eruptions. They are pleasing to use, as is also Cuticura Talcum, an antiseptic powder of charming fragrance.

ARTS AND CRAFTS SCHOOL TO SHOW WORKS AT HOTEL

Sketches by Noted Artists to Be Among Objects on Exhibition.

By GEORGIA BORDWELL.

Tomorrow afternoon at one o'clock the ball room of the Hotel Oakland will be thrown open to the public in behalf of the California School of Arts and Crafts. There will be an exhibition of oils, watercolor, pastels, charcoal drawings, etchings and lithographs, by some of California's best known artists, sketches by the students of the school, the artists of the future, and examples of all the crafts taught at the school.

Demonstrations of weaving, pottery making, and metal work will be given during the entire show, which continues through Monday afternoon and evening and all day and evening Tuesday. Fifty boys and girls in the costumes of the artisans and craftsmen of the Middle Ages will conduct a Christmas Sale of the pictures and articles exhibited. This sale is for the benefit of the school.

SCHOOL TO MOVE.

The California School of Arts and Crafts, under the leadership of Frederick H Meyer, began its career in Berkeley with a capital of forty-seven dollars according to Meyer, who is still the head of the school. Through years of self-sacrifice on the part of artists who helped him establish the classes and taught for an absurdly low salary, Meyer said that the school has grown in size and attainment until it has become necessary to move into more commodious quarters and place itself in a building suitable to its needs. Therefore property has been acquired on Broadway at the intersection of College avenue and the school hopes to move about June 1, that incoming classes may not be hampered by lack of class rooms and facilities for working. The Christmas Sale proceeds will go toward the moving.

Alumni, teachers, artist friends and patrons of art have come to the assistance of the students who are arranging the exhibition and sale. Valuable paintings have been contributed which will be sold far below the usual prices This is possible since there is no expense attached to the exhibition as far as the school is concerned. All overhead is being contributed by friends of the school.

From Monterey, where she lives in a beautiful Spanish studio, Lucy Pierce has sent two water colors, one called Fishermen at Home, the other a study of camelias. Miss Pierce is fast becoming one of the important painters of the west, according to critics who have seen her recent work.

THREE DIXON SKETCHES.

Maynard Dixon contributed three sketches which have never before been shown and which are considered by the school as one of its most interesting contributions .

There will be original Christmas cards for sale, and numberless things suitable for Christmas gifts, according to the students. They issue an invitation to the public to attend the exhibition, see the work done by them during the year and enjoy the pictures which have been donated. The public, say the students, will not be urged to buy.

Everything will be for sale, but visitors and spectators will be as welcome as purchasers. Monday and Tuesday, in the ballroom of the Hotel Oakland.

Wandering Minstrels, With Medieval Melodies

STUDENTS TO SELL CHRISTMAS SEALS

School children of Oakland will launch an intensive campaign Wednesday to sell Christmas Seals. Del Valle Farm, near Livermore, maintained by the Tuberculosis Association of Alameda county, which will receive the benefit of the 1924 sticker sale, is founded to restore to normal condition students in the schools of the county. The part which the children of Oakland will play in the holiday drive is their contribution to the public health movement

Mrs Elizabeth Madison is chairman of the school distribution. Assisting her on the special committee arranging this division of the annual Christmas Seal sale are Mrs. Fred M. Hunter, Mrs. Vance McClymonds, Mrs. Walter Dean, Mrs. I. D. Martin, Miss Emma Kane, principals of the local schools and members of the teaching staffs are to co-operate. Honors will be awarded the child in each class accomplishing the greatest number of penny sales.

NURSES SELECT PATIENTS.

School nurses select the children suffering from malnutrition, and whose condition shows a pre-disposition toward tuberculosis. These small folk are examined by physicians of the health centers. As vacancies occur in the Livermore preventorium, they are sent to Del Valle Farm to build up their systems that a resistance may be offered against the disease. A child who has contracted tuberculosis is not admitted to the institution, but is cared for in the children's department of Arroyo Sanitorium. No child has yet failed to respond to the practical treatment of out-of-door living, substantial food, rest and recreation which is prescribed at the preventorium They are taught hygiene, sanitation and the principles of proper diet while in the institution.

With the completion of the first unit of buildings at Livermore from the proceeds of the 1923 Christmas Seal sale, dormitories and an open air school were provided for the accommodation of 50 young patients. The profits from this year's campaign has been appropriated by the Tuberculosis Association to a fund which will finance the erection of a service building.

TEN MILLION SEALS.

Ten million seals have been distributed in Alameda county, representing one sixth of the number of penny stickers which are being sold in California. The substantial decrease in mortality in Alameda county since the tuberculosis association began its active work, is witness to the success of the movement. Seven thousand children die annually in the United States from tuberculosis. Approximately 70 per cent of those afflicted with the disease contract it before they are 14 according to the authorities.

Every penny which purchases a Christmas Seal is a check to the spread of the white plague, the campaign leaders, are pointing out

Seal Sale Leader

MRS. ELIZABETH MADISON is chairman of the Christmas Seal sale in the public schools of Oakland which will be launched on Wednesday, continuing through Saturday.

BERKELEY GIRL TO WED CONTRACTOR

BERKELEY, Nov. 29.—Returning from two years' absence in the east, Miss Audrey Kelley, member of a pioneer Berkeley family, has surprised her friends by announcing her engagement to John Rohde, Berkeley contractor.

Swanson said if Senator Borah, new Republican chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee attempts to pass his resolution calling for Russian recognition, a motion will be made to refer the matter to Borah's Russian investigating committee.

This investigation has been dropped, Borah has indicated, but those opposed to Russian recognition will see that it is reopened if any attempt is made to obtain action on the floor of the Senate, Swanson warned.

SAN LEANDRANS URGE EXTENSION OF TENTH STREET

Plan Under Way for Industrial Thoroughfare to Connect With Oakland.

SAN LEANDRO, Nov. 29.—August Theyson, president of the Davis Street Improvement club of San Leandro, is circulating a petition among the property owners of Park street in this city to have them extend that street to connect with Tenth street at the Oakland city limits.

Theyson points out that Park street, which should be extended to the new Oakland thoroughfare, the finished road would be an 80-foot boulevard and do much to relieve the traffic congestion now prevalent on East Fourteenth street.

Tenth street would enter San Leandro in the heart of the industrial zone and would prove a great boon to the shipping men who have their warehouses in the vicinity of the Southern Pacific and Western Pacific railroad freight depots.

Assisting Theyson in listing the necessary right of way for the extension of the Park street-Tenth street lateral, is C. L. Best, manufacturer and large property owner. Theyson is working with the good roads committee of the San Leandro Chamber of Commerce and the Retail Merchants' association. Both of these organizations have approved his plans.

In the event that the Tenth street project goes through, the next move would be the widening and paving of Washington avenue, running south to San Lorenzo which would give San Leandro another exit in the way of a boulevard running parallel to East Fourteenth street, connecting with the lower San Jose road at a point between San Lorenzo and Mt. Eden. This improvement is being boosted by Judge William J. Cannon, Supervisor Charles W. Heyer of the second district, and City Commissioner Howard Bronstein.

The good roads committee of the San Leandro Chamber of Commerce has been assured of the cooperation of Supervisor Heyer in this matter, and also is being assisted by Senator E. H. Christian, who will seek aid from the California state highway commission.

Students Wear Lilac Trousers at Oxford

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Oxford and Cambridge, who set the fashion for silver-gray flannel trousers, are now given a fresh lead in the men's wear world by making a great run on flannel trousers in shades of lilac, khaki, brown, biscuit, and even light green.

Some of these are certainly a trifle extravagant in hue, but at the same time there is no mistaking the fact that shades of brown and biscuit will be prominent next spring and summer.

ACTIVITIES AMONG NEGROES

By Delilah L. Beasley

Among the blessings the colored citizens of Oakland had reasons for celebrating Thanksgiving Day was of a real active Colored Women's Christian Association. The program for the coming year just sent out by the Linden street branch Y. W. C. A. is one as complete as any similar organization in the country. It comprises activities in health, education and general educational classes. The last named will appeal to all women. These classes will be in dressmaking, millinery, gift and lamp shade making, hygiene and beauty culture, culinary classes, and a community course for both men and women. This class will specialize in Negro history, and will be under the supervision of Rev. Albert Scott. The slogan of the association is "Expansion is the very life blood of modern enterprise. This is your golden opportunity. Be ready for it. Take hold of it, for opportunity will not linger when later on you tardily decide to start a belated education."

The executive board, Northern California State Federation of Colored Women's Clubs, will hold a public meeting on the afternoon of December 3 in the parlors of the Linden street branch Y. W. C. A. Prominent speakers will be present. The public will be welcome.

The Eta chapter of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, located in New York City, is making extensive preparations for the entertainment of the national body, which will hold its seventeenth annual convention in that city the last week of December. Norman L. McGhee, the national secretary of the organization, has been quoted in the "Negro World" as having said:

"Each year negro college fraternities and sororities are proving definite forces for good in student life, and in their relations to their communities. During the past few years important movements have been inaugurated and promoted with great success. Among these movements are 'Go to high school,' 'Go to college' campaigns by the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, which received the high commendation of the late President Harding, and a large number of college presidents and other important leaders. The movements to encourage reading of literature of negro authors are fostered by the Omega Psi Phi fraternity, and the 'Guide Right' movement of the Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity, the educational movements promoted by the Alpha Kappa Alpha and the Delta Sigma Theta sororities. In addition various scholarships have been provided for worthy students by these organizations."

The University of California has active chapters of these fraternities and sororities. Last year they were honored by having delegates to the national conventions return with national offices of importance. These officers, together with others, will attend the coming meeting in New York City.

The eighth annual convocation of the Howard University School of Religion was recently held in Washington, D. C. The three days were devoted to "Christian Ministry," according to the "Negro World," which said: "The African field was presented by an eminent educator, Dr. James H. Dillard of Charlottsville, Va., who is a member of the General Education Board; by a leading scientist, Dr. H. L. Shantz, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and by a missionary bishop, the Rt. Rev. Mathews W. Clair, of the Methodist Episcopal church, each of whom has recently visited Africa. The vast natural resources and the great possibilities of the people were set forth as challenges to America to provide leadership of the right sort.

"The home field was the subject of three addresses by Bishop George C. Clement, of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion church. The practical problems confronting the minister in the rural and urban church were considered with sympathetic insight, and candid criticism, so that all were made to feel that the function of the ministry is the most important, most challenging and the most rewarding of all. Great emphasis was placed on the necessity for the proper intellectual training. Great interest was aroused at the round table discussions conducted by Dr. Robert L. Kelly, of New York, director of the recent survey of the fifty-two Negro theological seminaries in this country. The convocation sermon was preached by Rev. W. S. Abernethy, D. D., of the Calvary Baptist church, pastor of the late President Harding. The splendid addresses given at the University chapel by Colonel John T. Axton, chief of chaplains of the U. S. Army, by Dr. Williams Pickens of the N. A. A. C. P., New York, and by Bishop Reverdy C. Ransom of the African Methodist Episcopal church, were received by students and members of the convocation with great enthusiasm."

Death has exacted a heavy toll of friends of the negro race during the past month. On the list have been the mother of Miss Eva Bowles and Mrs. Cordelia Winn, national Y. W. C. A. workers among the colored organizations; Chester Bush of Little Rock, Ark., a son of the late John Bush, founder of the Mosaice Temple; Mrs. Harding, the widow of the late President Harding; Mrs. Harry Daugherty, wife of Harry Daugherty, and in the loss by the immediate community of Mrs. Estell Hudson, the wife of Attorney Hudson, consul for Liberia at San Francisco. Mrs. Hudson was the first colored Christian Science practitioner in Northern California, and enjoyed a large practice in Berkeley. She was modest and unassuming and much beloved by all who knew her.

Roland Hayes, negro tenor, has recently returned to America and opened the musical season in Boston. His success in America equals the distinction he won abroad. He gave a recital inCarnegia Hall, in New York City, November 28, and the papers published a few of those who had purchased boxes. They were Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Louis Slade, Mrs. Henry Clay Adams, Paul D. Cravath, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Lee, George Foster Peabody, Miss Louise Brooks of Boston, Mrs. Arthur Sach, Adolph Och, Mrs. Henry Villard and others. The recital was a benefit for Fisk University, where Hays studied the first four years of his musical career. He recently gave a recital in Richmond, Va., where all thought of the color question was forgotten, so eager were people to hear him sing.

Professor Franz Boaz, one of the most noted anthropologists of the country and dean of the department of anthropology of Columbia University, spoke last Sunday afternoon before the colored Y. W. C. A. of New York City on the subject "The Folk Literature of Africa." A musical program was rendered on the occasion by singers of the various branches of the "Y."

Tuskege Institute held its fourteenth annual chrysanthemum exhibit on Armistice Day. More than 500 prize chrysanthemums were on exhibit. It had been considered a poor year for growers, but it has been stated that the flowers this year were considered splendid. Warren Logan, retired treasurer of the institution, announced the prize awards, all of which were money. To Mrs. M. J. Daniels, of Greenwood, Ala., went the founder's award. Mrs. Lula Johnsoon received the principal's prize. The third, fourth and fifth awards were made to Mrs. Lelia Carlyle, George Wood and Annie Archer respectively.

STATE TREASURER MAKES PROFIT ON COTTON IN SUTTER

Bale to Acre Produced by Official Refuting Old Theory of Production.

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 29.—Reporting on extensive experiments which he has conducted in raising cotton in the Sacramento valley, State Treasurer Charles C. Johnson announces that the crop on his ranch near Nicolaus, Sutter county, will average more than a bale to the acre.

His investigation, the state official said, has completely exploded the theory that the quality of cotton depends upon the hot nights of the south.

"The result of my experiment in raising staple cotton in the Sacramento valley has been very gratifying.

"The cotton produced was a very high grade and of a volume which makes cotton growing in the Sacramento valley profitable. Contrary to the general belief, my effort has established the fact that the quality of cotton does not depend upon hot nights of the south. The temperature of the Sacramento valley is ideal, and the cool nights of September and October give the plant an opportunity to rejuvenate instead of wilting, and materially strengthen the staple.

"I planted 100 acres and the yield will average more than a bale to the acre. While this may appear to be a very high production, yet I am firmly of the opinion that the valley, with its excellent soil and water conditions, will produce much larger crops.

"Heavy soil requires comparparatively little water, while the sandy soil absorbs, and consequently demands more irrigation. The cotton produced required only two irrigations, as against six to ten irrigations elsewhere. The quantity of water required depends entirely upon the character of the soil.

"It is my belief that the experiment has given us the beginning of a new industry in the Sacramento valley and that Northern California will probably become one of the great cotton centers of the state.

"A number of authorities on cotton raising have watched the experiment with a great deal of interest and are elated over what they term an entirely successful experiment"

A PIMPLY SKIN NEEDS SULPHUR

Any breaking out of the skin on face, neck, arms or body is overcome quickly by applying Mentho-Sulphur. The pimples seem to dry right up and go away, declares a noted skin specialist.

Nothing has ever been found to take the place of sulphur as a pimple remover. It is harmless and inexpensive. Just ask any druggist for a small jar or Rowles Mentho-Sulphur and use it like cold cream.—Advertisement.

BERKELEY SCHOOL BOARD TO EXTEND WARM MILK PLAN

Nutrition Program Big Aid to Pupils' Health, Says Supervisor.

BERKELEY, Nov. 29.—Working on the theory that warm food and plenty of milk make better scholars, the Berkeley school department is seeking to extend its present "nutrition program" to every classroom in the college city.

Miss Bertha Prentiss, supervisor of home economics, in summarizing activities along this line for the recent "Education Week" program in the college city, has the following to say about food and studies:

"It is a well-etsablished fact that health is basic in the education of our children and in recognition of this the Home Economics Department co-operates with the health education program of the Berkeley Schools by promoting and directing the serving of mid-morning milk, hot noon lunches and by nutrition classes.

"Some of the values of these activities have been expressed by teachers, mothers and health workers as follows:

"The lunchrooms save many children from eating their lunch too rapidly and when fatigued.

"When children return to school after recovering from a long illness the nurses recommend the hot noon lunch at school to save their strength. Teachers find that the children work much better in the afternoon after having the hot noon lunch.

All of the Berkeley schools provide the mid-morning milk for any child whose parents wish to pay for milk service.."

HARDEN DECRIES BERLIN SPEECH OF ZR-3 CHIEF

By MAXIMILIAN HARDEN.
By Radio to The Oakland TRIBUNE and the Chicago Daily News.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—The well-intentioned but unfortunate after-dinner speech og Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the ZR-3 on her flight to America, shows he does not comprehend the political atmosphere as well as he did the ethereal atmosphere during the Zeppelin's voyage.

Dr. Eckener's attempt to represent Americans as longing for German friendship reminds us that rich man who might say he loves the poor, but if the poor man says so, he may be suspected of begging.

The speech to which Maximilian Harden refers probably was the one Dr. Eckened delivered at Bremen in which he said he had asked the audience in a big meeting at Chicago whether their enthusiasm was a mere personal tribute to the ZR-3's crew or a demonstration of friendship toward Germany, adding that he assumed it was the latter.

"Thereup they applauded for fully five minutes,' he said.

NANSEN TO MAKE FLIGHT TO POLE

By CHRISTIAN HUSUM.
By Radio to The Oakland TRIBUNE and the Chicago Daily News.

CHRISTIANIA, Nov. 28.—The explorer Nansen has officially announced he is willing to act as leader of a polar expedition but asserts he has no intention of competing with Roald Amundsen, whose plans for a flight over the pole have been under way for some time.

"This is no race for the pole," Nansen told the correspondent. "Compared with a scientific investigation such an idea plays a minor role. Our plans necessitate lengthy preparation which will not be completed before 1927."

Nansen expressed the conviction that it is possible safely to fly to the pole in a Zeppelin.

U. S. CONSULATES IN EUROPE HALT RUSH TO AMERICA

Overseas Idle Would Flood This Country if Vises Could Be Obtained.

By A. R. BECKER.
Special Cable to The Oakland TRIBUNE and the Chicago Daily News.

VIENNA, Nov. 22.—Although economic conditions are slowly improving in Europe, thousands of persons would go to the United States if the "limitations" imposed by the American government did not prevent it.

In Vienna, alone, there are 90,000 unemployed who are applicants for vises. They have learned their efforts are futile and the pressure on the consulates has relaxed.

American congressmen are still writing, requesting privileges for their proteges. Some of the consulates are receiving hundreds of such letters monthly, and one consul has a standard form ready for reply with the exception of the address.

The letter explains that the law cannot be violated.

One American congressman, while traveling abroad, brought his cousins into the European consulate, requested a vise and was indignant when rejected. But he left in a good humor when it was explained that the consul could not make exceptions even for a congressman who had helped to make the law.

The steamship companies are hard hit by the drop in steerage trade and several have combined to save expenses.

CHAPTER 42.

From sordid romance to sordid reality! A swift transition from the froth about the brim to the dregs at the bottom of the cup. Jenny sat up with a jerk.

"In jail!" she echoed. "What for?"

"Ma has gone down to find out. She was all white and trembly. For you know that after all a mother is a mother and don't turn from the black sheep when he really needs her. Willie ain't given us much cause to go into raptures of pride or ecstacies of delight at the mention of his name, but he is my brother. I hope it's nothing serious."

"Just being in jail is serious," Jenny shivered.

"Not to Willie. Remember that time they threw him in for starting a rough house over a girl at a dance? And he was only bluffing, too. Willie won't fight. He's too yellow. But he got a shiner and two days in jail out of that mix up. And him saying that I bring disgrace on the family after that. He ain't got no sense of humor at all. But I hope nothing worse than being dragged into a fight this time. You've got to drag Willie into one. Maybe it's bootlegging."

"They send 'em to prison for that don't, they?" Jenny shivered again.

"You should care! Remember he swiped your fifty dollars—our fifty dollars."

"I don't want revenge," dully. Her knees were shaking. "He's my brother."

"I wouldn't boast about it." Vivie drew a golden ringlet down until it reached the tip of her adorable shell tinted nose. "Gosh! My hair is getting long. I need a clip. Another seventy-five cents. Lord! It sure costs money to live. Suffering cats, Jen, what are you shaking about? You are shivering as if it isn't spring and the sun shining like a great golden ball."

"I wouldn't want anyone to go to prison." More to herself than her sister.

"Oh, I guess nobody gets a kick outa seeing any of their folks penned up, but the pens are full just the same. Brr! You make me cold to look at you. I never knew that you were crazy about Willie."

"My brother—prison—a convict" in dull monotones and to herself.

"Oh, forget it. Maybe he's just got another shiner, Jen, old dear. Can you let me have seventy-five cents for a bob?"

Jenny opened her purse mechanically. It contained only a dollar. Mute evidence of her husband's control of the purse strings since the incident of the fifty dollars that had been the result of Jenny's conniving and acquired cunning. She took out the dollar. Handed it to her sister.

"A cartwheel," gushed Vivie. "Can I keep the change?"

Jenny only repeated as if unaware of the presence of another person in the world save herself. "I wouldn't see anyone go to prison if I could prevent it."

Just then Mrs. McCaskie came up the walk. Several of her neighbors, also sunning themselves on their front porches, spoke as she passed, but she did not seem to notice.

"Humph!" thought the little waspish woman who lived next door. "One of the McCaskies is in trouble again. They are a disgrace to the ward."

Off further contamination she got up and went inside and closed the door loudly behind her.

Mrs. McCaskie wore her rusty black dress. It was a relic. She wore it to funerals, to weddings—and to jail. She wore it because she had no other of presentable appearance.

Jenny saw her first. Leaped up to meet her.

"Is it anything serious, Ma?" offering her arm to lean on. Mrs. McCaskie looked worn and dragged out.

"Willie says it's some sort of a frame-up," she answered dully. She too, sat down on the steps, between her two girls.

"Of course. He would!" Vivie trailed her fingers lovingly through her hair. It was dry now. Warm from the heat of the sun. Soft as the downy covering of an infant's head. She loved to feel of it.

"What's the charge?" Jenny ran her fingers through her hair, too. But she did so nervously. She was not conscious of the soft silken feel of it at all. She pushed her hat back from her forhead a little. She did that because her head ached. An aftermath of her quarrel with her husband. And now this—!

"There's several," answered Mrs. McCaskie.

"Serious?" Jenny drew the [illegible] her sister closer to her. She wanted to comfort her. She knew no other way.

"'Twill be if the officer dies."

"Dies!" It came from the lips of both Jenny and Vivie. Vivie forgot for a moment the soft caressing feel of her hair.

"Willie is in a nasty scrape," went on Mrs. McCaskie. "Some prohibition officers raided the place where he's been hangin' out with a gang of bootleggers. One was hurt. Willie didn't even own no gun. Says that he can prove it. But he's mixed up in the mess. I shouldn't have made him leave home that time." She began to rock back and forth. Jenny tried to hold her still by slipping her arms about her.

"Don't take on, Ma," she said.

"He's my son. My boy." Mrs. McCaskie was talking to herself. "You can't raise kids decent in the kind of a rat hole we've always lived in. When Willie was a little boy he was a nice little fellow. Boasted a little, that's all. I guess it's my fault that he didn't grow up different. But I did my best, my best."

"Now, Ma, you can't change the spots on a leopard." Vivie trying to comfort in a clumsy fashion. "Folks always said Willie would end up in prison."

"My son. I thought when he grew up that I'd have cause to be proud of him. But I mustn't blame him. It's me—" the eternal mother speaking. "I have failed in something. That's all. I've just failed some way." And then she began to cry. Tears splushed on the bosom of the black dress. The first tears that had fallen upon it since the father was taken from the family. Willie, the braggart, the insolent, the worthless, the lazy ne'er-do-well—but her son was in trouble and she, as is the fashion of mothers since the world began, wept for him. "I—I—don't want him to go to prison," she said wretchedly.

"He won't!" Jenny's head went up high. The barnacles had found anchorage again. Her family called upon her for help. Ah, she had never failed them yet. "But what is the first thing to be done. Get a lawyer?"

"They cost money." Vivie laughed. It did not sound like the tinkle of a tiny silver bell this time.

"My husband has it."

"He would never give one cent to help Willie out of a scrape. He despises me but he hates Willie."

"He hates no one. Captain Twilleger ain't that sort of a man." Proudly.

"Oho! You are getting to like him."

"I like my folks. Why I should. God only knows, but I do. I would die for 'em, lie for 'em, crawl on my knees and beg for 'em—and even steal for 'em. I don't understand it. Is it love or is it just that the sense of the duty I owe to 'em has been pounded into me so hard? Anyway, there is something inside me that tugs so hard at me that I can never desert 'em when they need me—not even my brother who stole the money that I nearly died to earn. Now, Ma, what must be done first to help him? Tell me."

Mrs. McCaskie glanced up wistfully.

"Well, he hates like everything to lay in jail all night, Jen. You know how—particular Willie is—about his associates."

"Oh—hell, eh?" Jenny laughed, too. Neither did it sound like the tinkle of a tiny silver bell. But like some brazen, harsh toned metallic thing. "That's easily managed."

"How?" whispered Vivie.

"How? My husband. I can make him just like putty if I try. I am going to try."

She smiled. It matched the laugh. She got up and walked off in the direction of the Estuary.

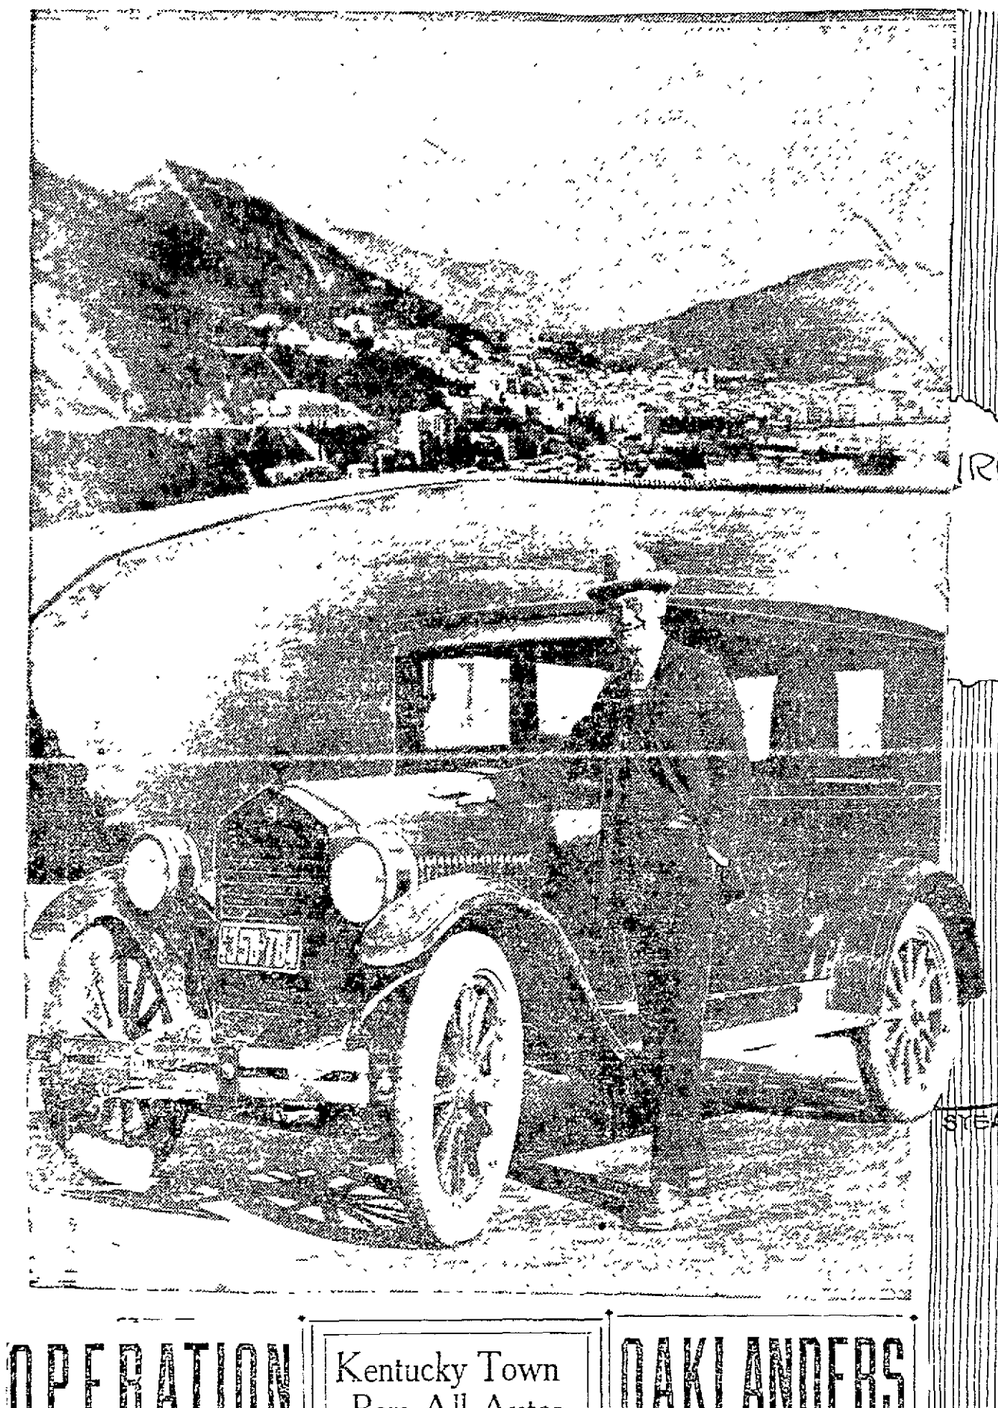
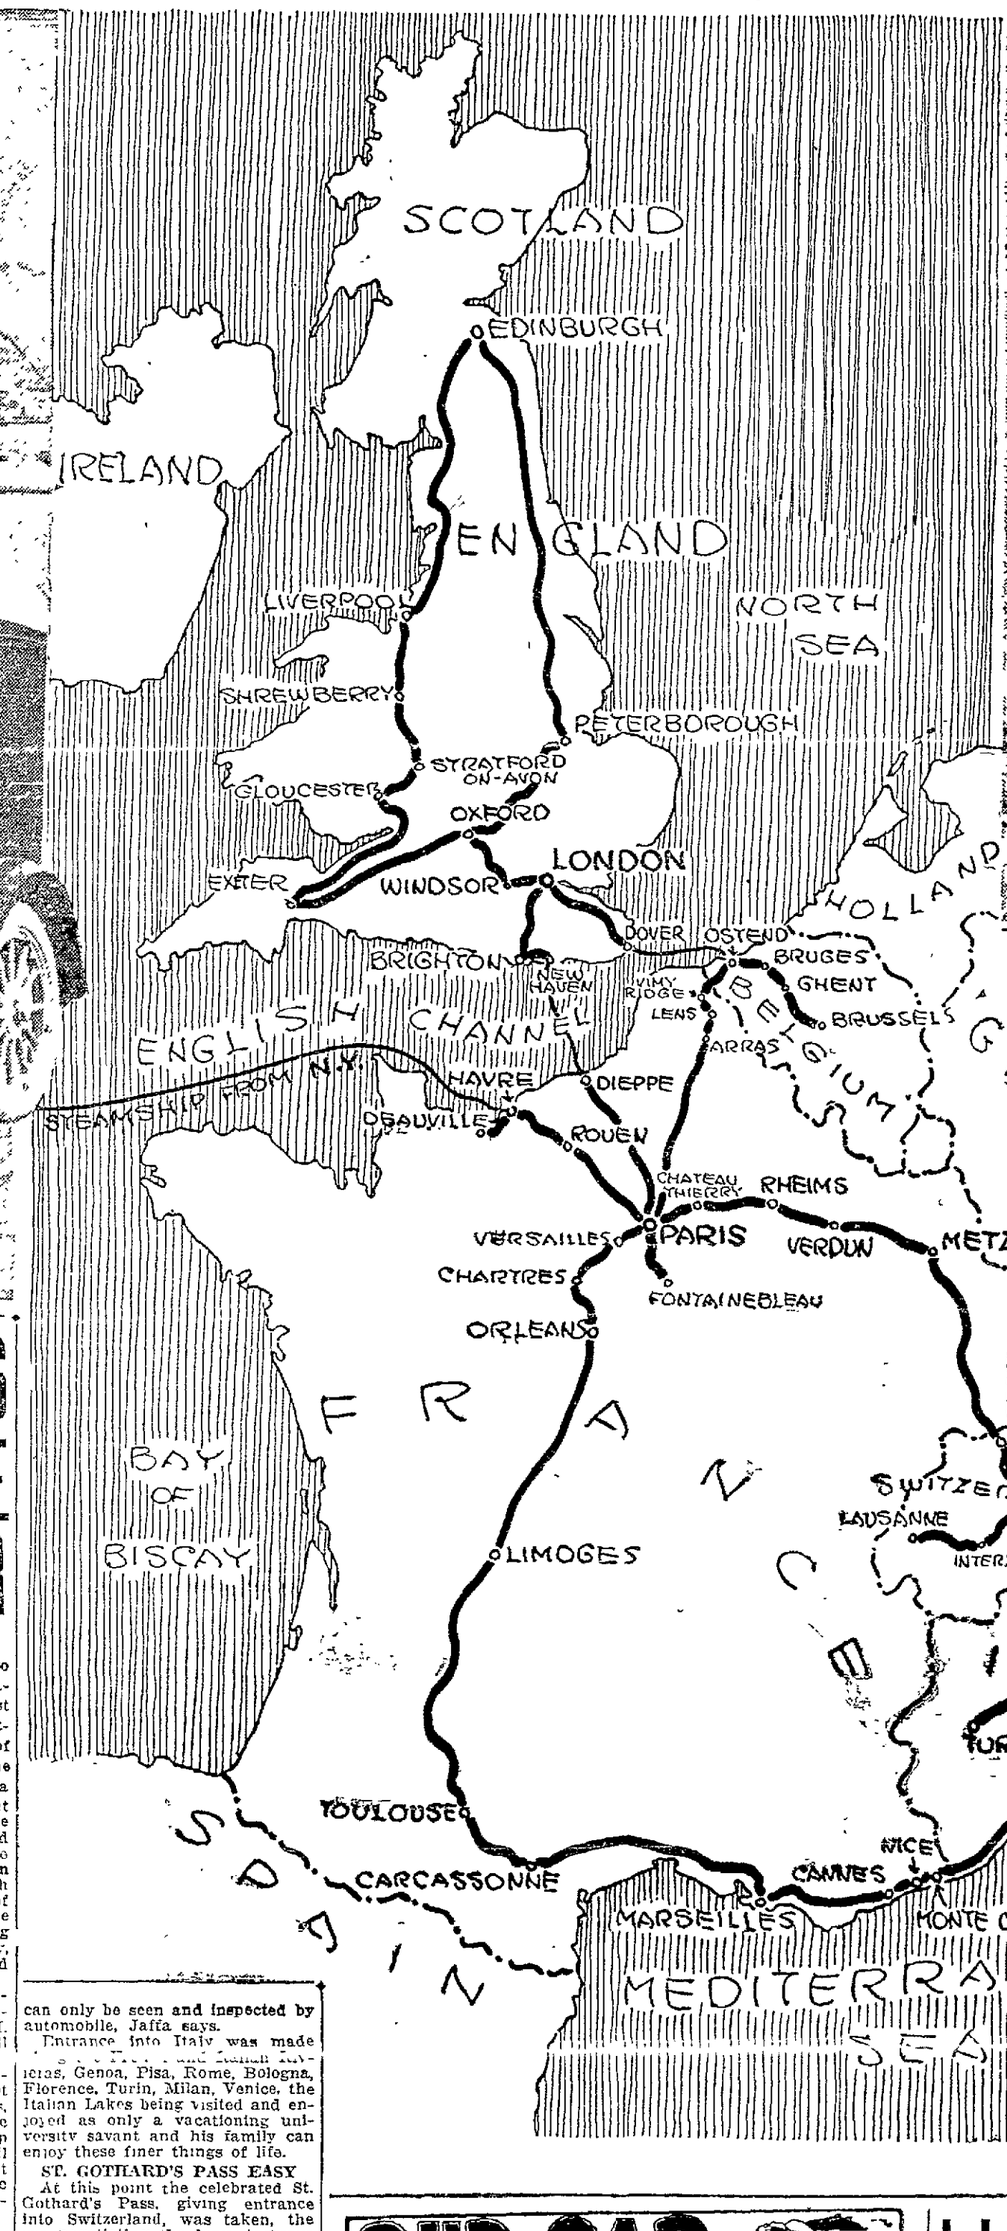
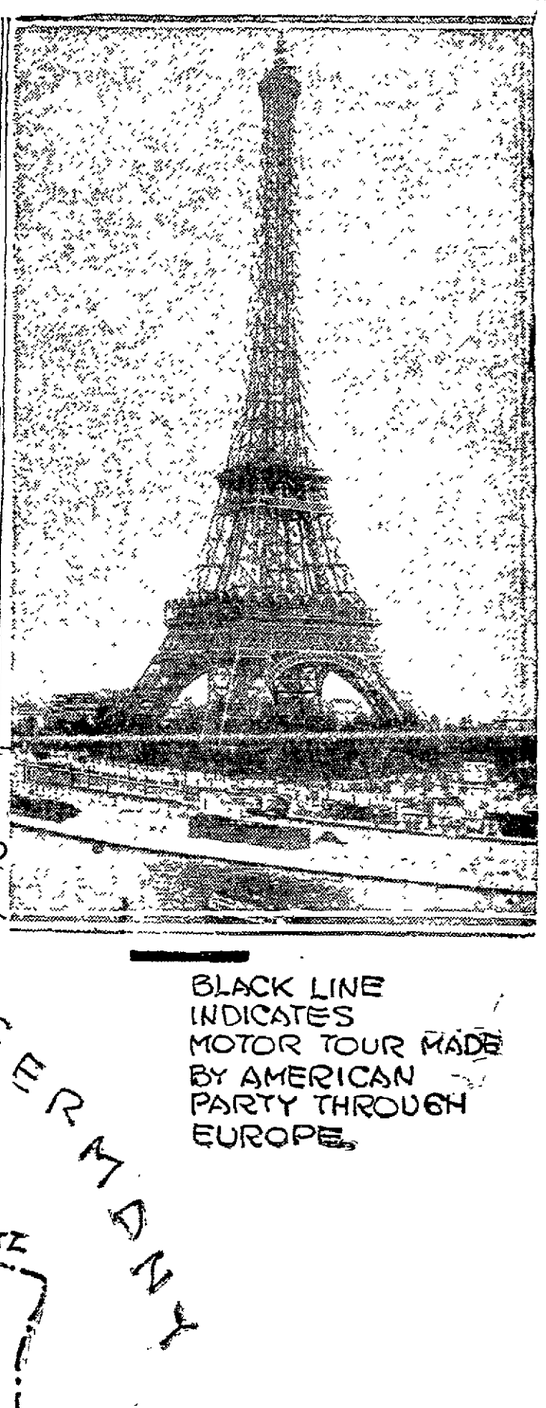
BOULEVARD STOP PLAN URGED FOR OAKLAND THOROUGHFARES

Ideal Tour of Europe Is Via Motor Car—Delays Reduced to Minimum.

Professor Jaffa and his family toured Europe in an Essex this summer and reported a wonderful time. They bought the Essex here and took delivery in Detroit from the factory. The trip was made without trouble of any kind. They saw all that was to be seen and many things the train tourist never sees.







OPERATION WOULD END CONGESTION

By B. J. ROSENTHAL.

Oakland and the Eastbay communities are growing so rapidly that it will soon be necessary to install a system of "boulevard stops" on the main highways in the cities to reduce the danger of collision.

The "Boulevard Stop" means that a car must be stopped at the crossing before turning into a main traveled highway. The plan works successfully in San Francisco and Los Angeles and in various cities throughout the country.

The driver turning into a main traveled boulevard or street must bring his automobile to a complete stop before making the turn. This plan speeds up traffic on the main boulevards and prevents many accidents.

Streets are selected and the rule enforced. Such streets as East [illegible] boulevard, San Pablo avenue, Telegraph avenue, Broadway and College avenue and Shattuck avenue would come under this ruling.

It is only a question of time until the Eastbay cities will install this system. Thousands of signs are required and complete police supervision until the plan is working smoothly. An educational campaign is also necessary to get motorists into the habit of halting their cars at intersections.

Each street must be signed on both sides, telling about the stop system, so that no confusion will result.

The system works well in other cities and there is no reason why it would not be a success here.

Reports coming from Eastern centers predict a huge increase in automobile production and sales during 1925. The manufacturers are going ahead carefully, however, because they do not want a repetition of what happened last year when they built thousands of cars during the winter months and found a sales slump in the spring.

WEEK-END TRIP TO GRASS VALLEY GOOD IN WINTER

Roads Are Paved to Country Made Famous by Bret Harte.

A week-end trip that holds unlimited charm for he who prefers paved roads during the winter months is the trip to Grass Valley and Nevada City. Grass Valley is one of the largest towns of the district and played a prominent part in the early history of the state. Nevada City, the county seat, is supported by rich gold mines which surround it on every side and shines with Grass Valley a large place in the early annals of the state.

Near Grass Valley is the North Star mine, which still produces a great amount of ore, while four miles away is the pioneer town of Rough and Ready, made famous by Bret Harte's story, "The Millionaire of Rough and Ready." This quaint little village still possesses the atmosphere of the 50's and the imagination needs little stimulus to recast with this background all the colorful inhabitants of the days when faro games were common and every other building housed a saloon.

Eastbay motorists may leave Oakland via San Pablo avenue to Rodeo, ferry to Vallejo, paved to Cordelia. Leaving Cordelia would recommend the new highway to Suisun and Fairfield thereby avoiding [illegible] work on the main highway. From Fairfield to Sacramento is all paved with the exception of a short detour between Vacaville and Dixon which is good. From Sacramento to Auburn is a good macadam road, thence an excellent highway to Grass Valley and Nevada City. While an elevation of 2451 feet is reached at Grass Valley, the grades are easy, roads wide and turns well banked. The Bret Harte Inn at Grass Valley affords excellent hotel accommodations.

OAKLANDERS TOUR EUROPE BY MOTOR

What is considered by experts to be the most exhaustive demonstration of motor car stamina has just been completed by a party consisting of Professor Meyer E. Jaffa, of the department of nutrition at the University of California, Mrs. Jaffa and Edward M. Jaffa, prominent San Francisco attorney, son of the California savant. Eight thousand three hundred and fifty miles were covered in the principal European countries, the Essex Six car which was purchased from the firm of Hamlin & Wichman, taking the tourists on a complete sightseeing journey through France, Italy, Switzerland, Holland, Belgium and England.

On his return to Oakland recently, after being absent in Europe since last April, Edward M. Jaffa, who drove the car at all [illegible] vides the ideal method of transportation in foreign countries. Not only can people see more, he avers, but the sights are better and more intimate. Jaffa contrasted his trip with a transcontinental trip by rail and by motor car, saying that when the automobile is used the places of interest hold an augmented value.

ALL KINDS OF ROADS

In regard to the condition of roads in Europe, Jaffa stated that English roads for the most part approximate the world famous California highways. Scotland arteries of travel are fair, being constructed of macadam. Belgium offers poor travel, the roads being for the greater part made of cobbles and uneven. In France, Jaffa says that all types of roads are encountered, from cobbles to dirt and gravel and brand new highways. Italy, in the northern part, offers fine travel, the roads being fine gravel and macadam. In Switzerland, the feared St. Gothard's Pass materialized into a route no harder than a drive into Yosemite National Park, according to the driver, who stated that little traffic made the St. Gothard's climb a great deal easier than any of America's mountain trips.

When the car was on ship board, young Jaffa states that all worry ceased and the trip across was a pleasant one, made more pleasanter by French incense, custom papers, filled with oil, water and gasoline, and decorated with a tiny American flag. Thus his party drove away a good hour's time before the regular passengers had been released. From Havre the road lead to Paris through Rouen, and from Paris the itinerary called for stops at Orleans, Limoges, Toulouse, Carcassonne, Marseilles, Cannes, Nice, Monte Carlo. The scenery along the way, and the myriad points of historical interest can only be seen and inspected by automobile, Jaffa says.

Entrance into Italy was made [illegible] Genoa, Pisa, Rome, Bologna, Florence, Turin, Milan, Venice, the Italian Lakes being visited and enjoyed as only a vacationing university savant and his family can enjoy these finer things of life.

ST. GOTHARD'S PASS EASY

At this point the celebrated St. Gothard's Pass, giving entrance into Switzerland, was taken, the car negotiating the long, tortuous grades without a hitch. Then followed Lucerne, and Interlachen, which is the base of the mighty Jungfrau, while Vevi, Lausanne, and Basle were passed through to take the tourists into Alsace-Lorraine.

Strasbourg, Metz, Verdun, through the consecrated Argonne, Rheims, Chateau Thierry—and the party was again in Paris, only to cross the English Channel by way of Dieppe. The crossing was made in four hours' time, in comparatively small steamers, which arrived at New Haven. Then followed pleasant days in Brighton, London, Oxford, Windsor, Peterboro, Edinborough, Liverpool, Shrewsbury, Gloucester, Stratford On Avon, Exeter, London again, Dover.

From Dover the car was shipped across the channel to Ostend and from there the log called for Ghent, Bruges, Brussels, Arras, Lens, Vimy Ridge leading into Paris for the third time. From Paris, the famous Versailles was visited and also Fontainebleau, Chartres, and Deauville, led the car to Havre, which terminated the driving portion of the trip. The French Line took the car here and shipped it direct to San Francisco.

In backing up his statement in regard to motor car travel being far better for the European tourist, Jaffa declared that not only are baggage and passport worries disposed of, and a much more interesting itinerary billed, but from an economical standpoint a great saving can be made. Gasoline ranges in price from 35 cents to 60 cents, with the average price being in the neighborhood of 42 cents. Jaffa suggests a newspaper or magazine campaign of information to the general public in regard to the many conveniences of motor travel abroad.

It takes more power to push an automobile equipped with low-pressure tires.

"MAW—TAKES A HINT"

"The frost is on the pumpkins, and
The rice fields bare and brown,
And ducks was flyin' south today,"
Said Paw, with restless frown.
"And just at dusk tonight I heard
Some geese go honkin' by,
The marshes must be full of 'em,"
Said Paw, and heaved a high.

"My shoulders sorta achin just
To hold my old gun tight,
And draw a bead right on a flock
Of ducks in early flight.
I wish I had the time," says he,
"To shoot a day or two,
I know exactly where I'd drive
To do my huntin', too."

"The car is runnin' lovely and My gun's all oiled up nice"—
Said Paw, and looked across at Maw,
Who just rocked once or twice.
"You needn't hint so much," said she.
"Just get your car and gun,
I'll cook all the ducks that you bring home,
So go and have your fun."

Altas Peak Road Nearing Completion

NAPA, Nov. 29.—County Engineer Ball reports that work on the new Atlas Peak road is progressing satisfactorily. The road, a mile and a half long, and costing $12,000, is being blasted out of hard rock. When this section of grade is finished six miles of the old road will be improved.

A. A. A. WARNS OF FAKE CLUBS

A statement just issued by President Thomas P. Henry of the American Automobile Association warns motorists to be on their guard and have dealings only with reputable clubs and insurers. Attention is called to the fact that the Attorney General of New York is waging a relentless war on fly-by-night concerns engaged in selling meaningless "service" contracts to automobile owners and to the fact that fake insurance and motor organizations are fleeing for safety to other parts of the country.

Such a warning is most timely, according to officials of the National Automobile Club, and if other states would follow the example of New York it would have a most salutary effect not only upon the automobile club field but on the insurance business as well. New York has stringent insurance laws calculated to protect the unwary motorist. Alexander Johnston, former editor of "Motor," in a recent article states: "There are too many of these cut-rate companies clubs, associations, all too ready to take your money but not very anxious to give you the desired protection. The companies that you should NOT insure in are known as reciprocals and insurance exchanges. In New York state, such companies are not allowed to operate and that ought to be hint enough to prospective clients.

Road Dangerous If Wet, Club Warns

The road from Woodland to Lower Lake via Madison and Rumsey is not advisable during winter months as sections of this road are very narrow and steep and in rainy weather would be dangerous, according to the Touring Bureau of the National Automobile Club.

OVERHEATING OF MOTOR HARMFUL ASSERTS EXPERT

Pistons, Cylinders and All Internal Parts of Engine Feel Ill Effects.

By ERWIN GREER.

You have all seen the fellow who pushes his steaming clanking car about town. It looks for all the world like a baby locomotive, but perhaps what you and he don't know is that this overheated condition injures the pistons, the cylinders, the bearings and all internal parts of the engine. Of course, it is likely to cause damage to some of these parts and shortly he learns this himself—after he has paid a big repair bill for information that could have been gleaned from any instruction book.

If you run the car with its spark retarded the engine will overheat. Carbon, a crippled fan and impeded water flow through the cooling system will also cause overheating.

When out driving and your car overheats it is imperative to instantly stop and find the trouble. In an emergency a very wise thing to do is to pour an abundance of oil into the crank case. Of course, your exhaust will smoke, but the additional oil will offer a protection to the inside of the engine until relief is at hand.

The fan is one of the most important parts of the cooling system. If the belt slips so as to reduce the fan draft it must be adjusted, but in making the adjustment do not get the belt too tight, for it will break. Clean the belt in gasoline every so often and rid it of the oil and gummy matter. Hitch up your garden hose and send its spray through the openings in the radiator that probably are clogged with mud. But do this from the engine side of the radiator, otherwise you will short circuit the electrical system.

If the engine still overheats it is probable that the inside of the radiator is clogged, so disconnect both the inlet and outlet and plug them with corks. Now make a mixture of half-and-half vinegar and water and fill the radiator to its brim. Let it stand for half an hour. Then allow this mixture to drain off and put the nozzle of the hose into the inlet of the radiator. Turn on the water and let it run for an hour. The flushing should be very thorough as the vinegar remaining in the tubes would eventually eat them to a certain extent. Then connect the radiator and your trouble will be found to have disappeared, provided that a clogged radiator was the cause of the overheating.

The ideas outlined above are not new, nor are they the only ways and means of accomplishing your purpose, but they give satisfaction, are not complicated, costly nor unduly time-consuming. Try them and see.

RAILROAD BRIDGE USED BY AUTOS

Difficulty is still being encountered in handling traffic over the Van Duzen river near Alton, Humboldt county. About a month ago the regular bridge was washed out and as a temporary measure, the Northwestern Pacific railway bridge was planked and used. Since that time two temporary bridges have been built and both bridges washed out by unprecedented high water, with the result that the railroad bridge is again in use and probably will be for the next two or three months as the high water in the Van Duzen river will not permit the construction of a permanent structure at this time.

The narrowness of the railroad bridge prohibits the passing of two machines, therefore to avoid confusion, men are stationed at each end of the bridge throughout the twenty-four hours to control the direction of traffic for specified intervals. It is still necessary for motorists to sign waivers for claims for damages before being allowed to use the bridge.

American-made cars are popular with the Swiss. Of the 18 300 automobiles registered in Switzerland it is estimated that one-third were made in the United States.

THE DEPENDABLE AUTOMOBILE FERRY Route offers motorists the shortest and most direct means of transportation from Oakland, San Francisco, and all points south, to Vallejo, Sacramento, Sonoma, Napa and Lake counties and all points north.

A neglected engine will in time develop knocks and this carelessness will mean a visit to the service station, where a mechanic scrapes out carbon and grinds valves at a cost of from $5 to $15.

BUYERS DEMAND DEPENDABLE CARS

"Dependability, that is what counts in the long run," declared John Nebeling, who is in charge of the purchasing department at Maxwell's Hardware Company, when approached on the question as to why so many Ford cars were used by that company.

"During our many years of business we have always instructed our employees that they must be reliable, as well as kind and courteous," continued Nebeling, "and when selecting a car for our salesmen, collectors and light delivery department, we wanted to get one that would stand up under constant usage they would naturally receive, one that would be economical and that would give the same dependable service as we expect of each one of our employees; that is why we purchased our cars from H. M. Lawrence, whose service department at Twelfth and Harrison streets is the best as well as the largest in the Eastbay. We have equipped our service department with twenty of these cars. Each of them is being used in some way or other. Some of them are being driven as much as forty miles a day.

NEW DEALERS SET RECORD IN FIRST MONTH'S VOLUME

Oakland Agents Top All Others of Company in United States.

Setting a phenomenal record in what is practically their first month of business as Star distributor in Oakland, Field & Lee will finish November today at the top of the list in number of sales among all Star dealers all over the United States.

The sales record will accomplish two things that are certain to resound throughout the automotive world. It is expected that Star will have sold a greater total of automobiles than any other gearshift car manufacturer not only in the city of Oakland, but in Alameda county as well, and that this will prove Star's greatest month in both city and county, topping the high month of November, 1923, when 97 cars were registered here.

These were the predictions of leaders in the automotive trade who have been studying registrations for the month of November yesterday.

The figure for Star sales for November will approximate 115 cars registered in Oakland and 170 in Alameda county for the month.

The achievement is little short of sensational. While it is almost impossible to find a basis of comparison, it is unlikely that a like record has ever been set by any other automobile dealer in history.

Field & Lee announced taking over distribution of the Star car here October 26. Since that day the entire organization under C. L. Ellingsen, general manager, and Arthur Lee, secretary, have been keyed with the highest enthusiasm over the merits of the new 1925 Star car. Taking up the sales work with high optimism, the sales force has made terrific strides. Each day has been busy with demonstrations, sales and deliveries of new cars. Up to and including Monday, November 24, Star registrations had soared above ninety cars, an average of practically four cars a day sold and registered.

Their two organizations, one downtown and one in East Oakland, have worked untiringly to "put over" Star's greatest month in sales here.

The company was highly commended yesterday by Norman DeVaux, president of the Star Motor Company of California, for the results they have achieved. He stated that he cannot recall, through long years in the automotive industry as dealer, distributor and later manufacturer, that any dealer has ever made the instantaneous impression upon the minds of the buying public in such a tremendous manner.

GOOD ROADS OUT OF WEAVERVILLE DESPITE SHOWER

Reports from the Weaverville representative of the National Automobile Club advise that the roads in that locality are in good shape considering the amount of rain to date. Weaverville to Redding via Brown Mountain and French Gulch is reported as fair with the exception of a few rough spots. Weaverville to Redding via Douglas City and Buck Horn, which is the shortest and best route to Redding, is fair.

SCENIC HIGHWAY PLANNED BY 150 SONOMA MEN

SANTA ROSA, Nov. 29—Plans for the construction of a scenic highway along Sonoma county's rugged coast line at a cost of $350,000 were outlined to 150 good roads boosters who made the tour over the proposed highway route Sunday.

It is planned to form a road district, bond the taxpayers for $100,000, and seek $50,000 from the supervisors. Already $75,000 has been appropriated and the remainder of the sum will be sought following the start of construction work. The stretch to be improved is eighteen miles long, one of the most beautiful scenic coast regions on the Pacific coast.

30 Miles an Hour Is "Critical Speed"

Spare tires should not be permitted to rub against each other.

PRICE REDUCTION ON HUDSON, ESSEX CARS ANNOUNCED

Hudson and Essex prices have been reduced again!

Following on the heels of a previous price drop announcement of a fortnight ago comes word from the offices of E. A. Hamlin, general manager of the firm of Hamlin & Wichman, Alameda County Hudson-Essex dealers, that Hudson and Essex coach prices have been lowered again by $90 in each case, and that Hudson sedan models of the five and seven passenger capacities have been lowered in price by $400. This news came to Hamlin by wire from the Hudson Motor Car Company at Detroit late this week.

Reasons for the additional price drop are as follows, according to the Oakland Hudson executive, who presents the content of the telegraph: The Hudson factory has just closed contracts on raw materials for the next five months at extremely favorable prices, due to its position as largest builder of sixes, and the savings here are being transferred to Hudson-Essex customers; as largest builders of six-cylinder closed cars in the world, the factory has perfected an organization making a specialty of the coach type which Hudson originated in 1921; closed cars now constitute practically 100 per cent of Hudson output and open cars are of practically no importance in the schedule of production.

"With this second startling price reduction announcement, the Essex Coach, in addition to the Hudson Coach, now sells for less than the open car in the line," says Hamlin. "This price situation undoubtedly gives the buyer the greatest advantages he has ever enjoyed in the history of automobile manufacturing.

"Another important result of the price drop is to lower the prices of Hudson sedans, both five and seven passenger models, by $400.

"Business in the great Eastbay region should be stimulated as never before," continued Hamlin. "Already we have many orders for the new-priced coaches. Cars are coming through from the factory on schedule time, permitting us to meet delivery dates for customers. In the next few weeks the Christmas coach business should begin to have its effect on the local new car registrations, and Hudson-Essex bids fair to show the best sales record for the last two months of the year that it has ever before recorded."

DRIVING CLASS STARTS TUESDAY

Enrollment of a class that already exceeds in number a hundred pupils is continuing for the Howard Automobile Company's driving class that will be formally started Tuesday, December 2, with instructors picked from the Howard Buick organization here.

Wide interest obtains to the Howard driving class, and enrollments have come in to Frank Sanford, manager of the local branch, daily. It is expected that many more will be enrolled before the driving lessons actually commence Tuesday.

Under the watchful eyes of experts who have gained their driving knowledge over a period of years, students in the class will be taken first through the rudiments of automobile construction and driving, then to be given actual practice in driving automobiles over all kinds of conditions.

It is pointed out by Sanford that there are but very few really expert drivers among the thousands of automobile owners, and that many people already driving cars can get invaluable hints and advice from the classes, as well as those who have never before tried to handle an automobile.

The class has been started by the local Howard branch purely in the interests of better driving of automobiles, and with the belief that there exists no reason why every person should not be able to drive a car.

IOWA HILL ROAD PROJECT DECIDED

COLFAX, Nov. 29.—Announcement was made at the regular chamber of commerce meeting held here last week that the Placer County Board of Supervisors had agreed to build a new road to Iowa Hill by way of what is known as the Stevens trail. For nearly two years the citizens of Iowa Hill, through the chamber, have agitated the building of this road.

The present road to Iowa Hill is one of the most dangerous in this section. It was built in the early '50s, as a wagon road when automobiles and trucks were never dreamed of, and to put it in condition for modern vehicles would require more expenditure than building a new road by widening out the present Stevens trail.

The county supervisors have recently purchased a road-building power shovel, and this will be used on the new road.

The building of this road will open again what was once the backbone of Placer county. Millions of dollars in gold has been taken out of the Iowa Hill divide, and many mining men are of the opinion there is still much gold in this section. At present there is considerable prosperity on the divide.

DEALER NAMED TO HANDLE OLDS IN EASTBAY CITIES

California Auto Sales Co. Has Splendid Display Today.

The California Auto Sales Company, at Twelfth and Harrison streets, has been appointed Alameda County dealers for Oldsmobile six-cylinder cars, according to word received from G. H. Forman of J. W. Leavitt & Co., northern California Oldsmobile distributors.

This announcement comes as more or less of a surprise to the automotive trade here.

E. Berger, manager of the California Automobile Sales Company, has been in the automobile business for several years and has built up a large trade.

"We have been seeking a car in the Oldsmobile class for some time, and when the opportunity came to handle the Olds we took it quickly," states Berger.

"The Oldsmobile is a six-cylinder job, built by the Olds Motor Works in Lansing, Michigan, and is a unit of the great General Motors organization.

"The bodies are built by Fisher, the largest body building concern in the country.

"The line is complete, including a variety of open and closed models. The latest addition to the line is the Oldsmobile coach, which sells for little more than the open car types and is a complete enclosed car in every sense of the word.

"In order to serve the people of the Eastbay cities we have two stores, one at Twelfth and Harrison streets and the other at Twenty-ninth avenue and East Fourteenth street.

"We have built up a reputation for service work in handling other lines of cars and have a completely equipped Oldsmobile service arrangement ready for work right now.

"The Oldsmobile is one of the oldest units in the motor car business. The car is one of the pioneers, and has been built and sold for over two decades.

"We have a complete display of the new Oldsmobile models in our two stores, beginning today. We would like to have Oldsmobile owners come in and look over the new models.

The American Automobile Association estimates that 160,000 motorists will tour to Florida and intermediate points during the winter season.

WINTER SEASON USE URGED OF NATIONAL PARKS

Director's Report Shows Reserves Are Becoming Self-Supporting.

Increased use of the national parks of the country during the winter season is urged in the annual report of the director of the national park service submitted today to the secretary of the interior.

Long popular as places in which to spend one's summer vacation, the national parks, it is pointed out in the report, are now being also recognized as ideal winter playgrounds, where exceptional opportunities exist for skiing, snowshoeing, tobagganing, and other outdoor winter pastimes abound. Last year Rocky Mountain National park in Colorado had a definite winter season established, and Mount Rainier park in Maine, and Yosemite, Sequoia and General Grant national parks in California, also offer splendid opportunities for outdoor recreation in winter.

BECOME SELF-SUPPORTING.

It is stated in the report that the national parks, which have long been a source of revenue to the country, are gradually becoming self-supporting. Last year Crater Lake park was more than self-supporting, the total revenues for the year ending June 30, 1924, being $35,708.18, while the appropriation for the fiscal year beginning July 1 was $30,700. The total revenues from the national parks and monuments last year amounted to $663,886.32, which is over $150,000 more than the 1923 revenues, and over one-third of the amount appropriated for either the 1924 or 1925 fiscal years. When the necessary road improvements have been made and adequate administrative quarters installed in the parks, undoubtedly smaller appropriations will be asked for, while the revenues will greatly increase.

Travel to the national parks, and monuments, it is stated, has increased considerably over last year's record-breaking visiting list, in spite of conditions in some of the western states adverse to travel. During 1924 the parks and monuments were visited by 1,670,908 people, as compared with 1,493,712 visitors in 1923. Had it not been for the foot and mouth disease in California, with its resultant quarantines, and the exaggerated reports of forest fires in national park states, a much larger increase would have been shown. While train travel to the parks showed a decrease, there was a marked increase in motor travel.

ROAD IMPROVING URGED.

This increased motor travel, it was said in the report, emphasized the necessity for improving park roads. The act of congress approved April 9, 1924, authorized the appropriation of $2,500,000 each year for a period of three years, to provide for the construction and improvement of roads in the national parks and monuments, to put them on a basis that would compare favorably with the approach roads outside the park.

No new parks were actually added to the national park system, according to the report, although an act of congress passed last June provided for the creation of the Utah national park to include the famous Bryce Canyon in southwestern Utah. A provision in the act provides that all private holdings within the exterior boundaries of the proposed park must be secured by the United States before the area can be given national park status. Efforts are being made to have these private holdings deeded to the United States, but so far the government has not been successful in securing all the lands. Two new national monuments, the Carlsbad cave, New Mexico, and Craters of the Moon, Idaho, were established and placed under the jurisdiction of the department of the interior, for administration by the national park service.

The need of another national park in the east is again emphasized by the committee appointed by the secretary of the interior, which is now investigating the Southern Appalachians for the purpose of selecting a typical section in these mountains for recommendation to congress as a suitable national park site.

An investigation was made by the director of another interesting project—Isle Royal, Michigan—which has been suggested for national monument creation. This island of 132,000 acres in Lake Superior, containing unusually fine virgin timber, would make a unique addition to the park and monument system. The suggestion has been made that much of the land now in private ownership would be turned over to the government should a monument be established, an interested citizens of Michigan and Minnesota are now working earnestly to get definite assurances to this effect.

Several public spirited people of Maine have offered tracts of land for addition to the Lafayette national park, and during the past year three deeds to 558 acres of land have been accepted by the government. The entire area of the Lafayette park has been donated to the government in this manner.

Berlin Prohibits Parking on Streets

Even though the streets of Berlin, Germany, are wider than those of any other large city in the world, the parking of cars on highways is prohibited. The city council, in trying to solve the traffic problem, says there are municipal auto garages numerous enough and large enough to accommodate all the cars in the city.

VICTORY HIGHWAY ROUGH AT SUMMIT

The road over the summit on the Victory Highway is very rough and cut up on account of heavy travel during the last few weeks, according to a report from S. C. Hackett, proprietor of the National Automobile Club's service unit at Truckee. Hackett made the trip over the Victory Highway as far as Reno, last week, and states that the road was muddy and covered with snow and anyone making the trip must have chains.

The roads are good on both sides of the summit, however, few cars are making the trip. Anyone contemplating this trip is advised to communicate with the National Automobile Club, as this road is liable to be closed by snow at any time.

WHAT'S HAPPENING IN THE AUTO WORLD

BY B. J. ROSENTHAL

Floyd Hurley, sales manager for Pacific Nash Motor Company, just returned from a goose-hunting expedition and got some birds, too. Hurley and a party went to Williams and they got plenty of birds. He is telling his friends about a wonderful "goose caller" up there who can make the birds come in and talk to him. He proves it by bringing birds home, at least he said he shot some.

Harold D. Knudsen proved that he practices what he preaches. He tested a Maxwell car the other day for speed and found it would go just as fast as the factory said it would and then somewhat faster.

Ed Hamlin has been out after ducks again. He and John Wichman have a preserve near Alvarado and they like to bag them now and then.

Bill Webber, manager for Don Lee, would rather fish than anything else. Gordon Wight, one of the sales force, Bill Parry and Pat Gleeson like it too. Sometimes they all come back with limits, "conversational limits" at any rate.

No one on automobile row did any work last Monday. They all had to fight the Stanford-California football game all over again.

Captain E. W. Farrow, Harry Morrell and Edward S. Jordan went to the big game and had the time of their lives. Ned Jordan, builder of the Jordan car, likes a fight as well as anyone else and he saw enough last week to last him for some time. He declared that he got a thrill a minute.

Dick Purser, Oakland dealer here, is going great guns. He signed a contract recently for Alameda and Contra Costa counties and is now busy cultivating his enlarged field and making sales, too.

J. J. Davis, Reo manager, went to that football game too, and is not over it yet. He came back hoarse, and is still that way to some extent.

When the engine is not cooled properly the power is lessened.

RED BLUFF ROAD OPEN TO TRAFFIC

The road from Red Bluff to Susanville is still open to traffic and in good condition, according to the following report received from the Susanville representative of the National Automobile club.

Red Bluff to Susanville, 107 miles; fair dirt road to Paynes creek, then seven miles of new macadam road from this point to Morgan Springs, with the exception of one short detour, and about five miles of unfinished macadam, which is in fine condition. From Morgan Springs to Chester, while somewhat cut up and chucky from the recent rain, would not be considered a bad road.

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT, BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

"Do unto others as ye would have them do unto you."

—Matthew VII: 12.

What the Golden Rule Means in Selling Cars

When Matthew spoke those undying words some 1800 years ago, he laid down a successful business creed for all time. When Field & Lee founded their business, the good old Golden Rule, in its fullest sense, was the platform on which they proposed to serve their customers.

The emphatic Roosevelt would have called it a square deal, and, in every-day language, it is a square deal—embodying the Golden Rule—that Field & Lee offer their customers today.

Here's how it works out for you in buying the New Star Car: Let's divide up this good rule and, as Field & Lee see it, apply its workings to you.

Rule I—Field & Lee have taken on the New Star Car because they, as automobile experts, know it offers a greater value in mechanical excellence, motor comfort, and service than any other car near its low price.

Rule II—Field & Lee want you to fully satisfy yourself by any check or test you can think of or devise, as to the truth of these statements. You even demonstrate the Star yourself.

Rule III—Again, as experts, and based on the low mechanical upkeep records of thousands of Star owners, Field & Lee offer you a guarantee that no other car dares offer you.

A written guarantee against defective parts for one year, whereby Field & Lee pledge themselves to the broadest interpretation of the Golden Rule in selling the Star Car.

In the New 1925 Star Car we know we have the best low-priced car in the world, and we will stand behind it in every possible way. You are to be the sole judge.

Field & Lee invite you—urge you—to come in and study this new Star Car, which is so far in advance of other cars. It has rightfully earned the title, "Tomorrow's Car Today."

RUNABOUT OF 1905 GIVING SERVICE IS FETED IN PARADE

California Has Many Models of Pioneer Cars, Dealer Finds.

The life of a motor car is more or less problematical because of the varied service demanded of different cars and the quality of material used and the manner of fabrication. Cars built fifteen or twenty years ago are seldom seen in service, however, because their appearance is against them and they have not the power nor smoothness of operation possessed by the modern car.

"Reo probably has more of these early models in more or less active service than almost any other of the pioneer builders," said H. E. Woodward, vice-president of the Reo Motor Car Company of California and manager of the San Francisco branch, in discussing the subject a few days ago. "Our branch in Phoenix has a 1905 'runabout' that is used frequently in parades, running under its own power, while there are several Reos from 1904 to 1908 in Southern California that are capable of rambling along the highway at a good gait. The main difficulties the owners of these models have in keeping them going is the difficulty in obtaining tires for them as the sizes and types fitted to them have not been manufactured by the tire companies for several years.

"An interesting event in connection with the long life of a Reo was the recent celebration of the 'Old-Timers' at Ontario and Upland when a 1908 model two-cylinder was driven by its owner, Lyman Clark, from Ontario to Camp Baldy under its own power. The same 1908 Reo is said to have been the first motor car to have reached Camp Baldy under its own power, yet the little 'runabout' surprised everyone except its owner by making the trip with comparative ease. We have a slogan that 'A Reo is still young at 50,000 miles,' but there are undoubtedly a great many now in active service that have been five or ten times that distance."

Forty thousand miles of paved roads were constructed last year, a number of them representing new and more direct routes to another world.

SAFETY COMES FIRST.

Events are developing a new line of thought anent the somewhat overworked slogan "Safety First."

It is being discovered that the matter of safety comes first, satisfaction and results following.

When any new car feature is offered it is described as a safety first proposition and the motorist is led to believe that he has provided himself with something that will keep him out of the accident reports regardles of how he drives. He isn't told that safety still comes before the safety first feature.

Perhaps he should knowthis distinction without having to be told and perhaps he would know it were it not for the way "safety first" has been featured as a unity.

When four-wheel brakes were first introduced, for instance, motorists were led to believe that the new feature was safety in itself, whereas safety still came first. That is why a lot of people were surprised to find that they could still manage to week-end at the best hospitals despite their very efficient brakes.

Balloon tires make skidding difficult, but unless a driver remembers that balloon tires are a contribution to "safety first" only when he keeps safety in mind first skidding is not entirely obviated.

The wise driver today still puts safety before everything else, even though his car is generously equipped with everything obtainable in the way of safety first features.

That's why such features are a real contribution to the safety first movement.

Any safety device is twice as efficient if the driver with these improvements at his disposal thinks of safety FIRST.

THE OLD MECHANIC SAYS:

I wish some of you chaps with cars would know enough about the repairin' business so's you could tell me exactly what's wrong with your car when you've got a complaint. I'm gettin' into trouble every day through takin' too literally the complaints of owners who take wild guesses at their trouble.

If you tell me there's somethin' wrong with the gears, and lead me on by tellin' me that you notice they do this, that or the other thing, it isn't exactly logical for me to start right in lookin' to the clutch for the trouble. I know enough about this business to look into the unsuspected units for trouble that appears to be somewhere else, but, hang it all, I'm as human as the rest of 'em.

Smith, down the street, was so positive the water pump leaked I just couldn't resist the temptation to get out the tools and look into it. Cost Smith several dollars for somethin' that could have been fixed for the price of a good cigar.

Just because the water leaked to the floor directly beneath the water pump the trouble couldn't be anything but a pump leak to him. He was so confounded sure about it. That's why I clean overlooked the fact the leak originated in one of the hose connections. It was pure chance that the water ran down the pan to the openin' under the pump.

Motorists could save themselves a lot of money by knowin' enough about their cars to guard against startin' a repairer off on the wrong foot.

In buying an automobile, and in trying to decide whether what one owns is what it should be, one should consider whether it is performance or transportation that is most desirable. A lot of cars are being marketed as "performance cars" and they are filling the bill for folk who want that sort of thing. But it is well to remember that stunts do not stave off repair bills nor make miles smiles.

Monoxide Gas Peril Caution Urged

Carbon monoxide gas kills instantly and every precaution should be taken against running an engine in a small private garage. If it is necessary to run the engine for any period, as in making repairs or adjustments, the car should by all means be run into the open, and even then the direct exhaust should be avoided in order to decrease the possibility of headache and discomfort.

Here's Tip on How To Put on Varnish

First soak a cheesecloth rag in water and twist until nearly dry before using it to apply oil polish on the varnished surface of a car. The polish will go on more evenly if the rag is treated in this manner.

BRAKES ON FRONT WHEELS CANNOT LOCK ON TURNS

Standard Six Is Provided With Special Type Shoes to Prevent Accident.

The Studebaker system of four-wheel brakes is different from any other type now used by any American car. Perhaps the most interesting feature about them, as far as the individual motorist is concerned, is that they require absolutely no adjustment after the cars leave the factory.

"The fact that the front wheels cannot lock is one of the big advantages of the Studebaker type of four-wheel brakes over most other types of four-wheel brakes," says Eb Wells of the Weaver-Wells Company, local Studebaker distributors. To partly overcome this admitted danger, most mechanical brakes now used are designed to fully release one or both of the front brakes when the car is being turned from the straightaway. The front wheels of the Studebaker four-wheel brake cars absolutely cannot lock; it is physically impossible.

"The rear wheels cannot remain locked, because the moment they lock braking pressure stops.

"Studebaker four-wheel brakes are operated in forward speeds by hydraulic power alone. Very easy foot pressure on the brake pedal is necessary merely to close the control valve.

"No adjustments are necessary on Studebaker four-wheel brakes for equalizing. Adjustments are necessary on all mechanical systems, whether or not they have equalizers.

"The Studebaker four-wheel brake system is, in my opinion, the best system in use in the United States today. It is built as the result of three years of experience and tests with all known American and European designs, at a cost of several hundred thousand dollars. The system is more expensive to manufacture than most of the systems now in use. Nothing better can be obtained on any car at any price. Studebaker has set another precedent in four-wheel brake design in the United States."

Repeat orders build up the Annual White Roll Call—listing 755 owners operating 28,166 Whites in fleets of 10 or more.

Repeat orders are received daily from single truck operators whose one White Truck is serving so dependably and economically that their growing business demands more trucks.

Operators buy White Trucks—and buy them again—because they know White Trucks are made right, sold right and kept right.

ALL PASSENGER RATES BOOSTED FOR ATLANTIC

Passenger Conference Raises Rates Five to Fifteen Dollars.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Increases in passenger rates for trans-Atlantic travel, to go into effect January 1, were agreed upon at the trans-Atlantic passenger conference held recently in Paris, according to cable advices to the steamship companies in this country. One decrease, that of twenty per cent, was made in the case of the round-trip excursion third-class fare except to continental points.

According to the cables the first-class fare on the larger liners, such as the Leviathan, will be increased $15 on the minimum fare, while the rates on slightly smaller ships will be increased $10. The increase in the case of the smallest liners will be $5.

Ships carrying only cabin and third-class passengers will have their rates increased $15, while second-cabin passengers on the bigger ships will be raised from $10 to $12.50.

FOUR SPECIAL WIRE SERVICES

SALE OF FRENCH BONDS ASSISTS FOREIGN MARKETS

German Listings Sell Around Best Price as Result of Stimulation.

By BYRON SELLER.

BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Among the events of the week in the investment market, probably the most important was the success of the French loan. It is betraying no secret to say that over-subscription of this offering was not only gratifying, but to some at least, surprising.

There has been so much talk about the difficulties of the French financial position and French internal bonds have been selling so low in Paris that American investors might well have felt some hesitation about subscribing to a new French bond. As a matter of fact, there was no hesitation at all and while the over-subscription was not as large as in the case of the German loan, the preliminary campaign was not as vigorous. In reality, no attempt was made to sell the French bonds. They sold themselves.

HELPS GERMAN BONDS.

The way in which the French bonds were taken proved a stimulating factor throughout the entire foreign list. The new German bonds were especially helped and sold around their best price since they were first offered. As a result the average price of typical foreign bonds listed on the New York Stock Exchange now stands at the high of the year, and investment bankers are looking for foreign securities to sell. Undoubtedly a good deal of this financing is now negotiation and not a small part of it for account of German industries.

Notwithstanding all this new found favor of foreign securities in the eyes of American investors, this class of bonds still sells to return high yields. Taking for instance the three 7 per cent issues, the Australian, the German and the French, they return the investor at present market prices from 7.40 to 7.45 per cent. Czecho-Slovak bonds yield nearly 8 per cent and the Hungarian dollar issues return more than 8½ per cent. And all this in the easiest money market since before the war. It is quite true then, that even with this improvement in sentiment toward foreign obligations, there is room for a great deal more.

OPPOSING FORCES.

Elsewhere in the bond market there have been two opposing forces at work. The high grade investment issues have been dull and heavy. There has been some selling, especially of United States government loans, by the banks and by corporations and there has been a slight falling off in quotations. On the other hand, speculative bonds have responded to the same influences that have been so effective in the stock market.

Discussion of the program of the secretary of the treasury in caring for the government requirements of December 15 has been active, some predicting a long term bond issue. The point is made that long term financing could be done now on a very satisfactory basis, whereas nothing is certain about conditions in the money market six months hence. Whatever the secretary of the treasury does will be taken to indicate his opinion as to future of rates and his opinion is held in high respect in banking circles. In any case, it is not likely that the decline in libertys will go very far.

For one thing, at any time when United States government bonds are obtainable below par, the British government will be a purchaser, as under the terms of its debt agreement, liberty bonds are taken at par in payment of interest and principal. Then, too, the constant purchases by the treasury are steadily reducing the supply. Nor is it reasonable to expect that corporations will sell liberties at a sacrifice when they are the best of collateral for loans.

TIME FUNDS STEADY.

As to the money market itself, there has been practically no change in time funds or in commercial paper. Time money is unchanged and call money was advanced at the close of the week to the highest since early in the year, but little significance was attached thereto. More important was the rise in some of the foreign exchanges, notably that of the Dutch guilder. Holland currency is now quoted at a figure approaching the gold export point. This is a development of the highest interest, as far as the long term outlook for our own money market is concerned.

Two factors which are commonly regarded as responsible for the ease in money which has made 1924 so remarkable in financial history are first, the trade recession and, second, the huge gold export surplus. It may be that the gold tide is about to turn, as it is confidently believed that the business situation has reversed itself. If so, the low points for money during this cycle have been seen and any change must be in the direction of a higher rate. Granting that this is a correct forecast, the effect upon the bond market for a long time to come will be confined to the securities of the very highest grade.

In connection with the money situation, the policy of the federal reserve has come in for a good deal of criticism this week. As is well known the federal reserve banks, pressed by the necessity of earning expenses and dividends on their stock, have been large purchasers of acceptances as well as of government securities in the open market. This procedure has accentuated the effect of the money glut. It is argued that the proper course should be exactly the reverse of that now practiced. If the system is to realize the purpose of its founders it should take up the slack, that is, sell government securities when money is easy and buy them back when it is tight.

Pacific Gas Common Goes to 104½; Atchison Advances to 115 Level; Bancitaly Corp. Skyward to 150; Business Reviews Very Optimistic

By H. S. SCOTT.

The San Francisco Stock Exchanges recorded one of the busiest Saturday sesions in their history yesterday. Pacific Gas and Electric common continued to climb, selling at 104½. Another flyer was Bancitaly Corporation, which crossed 150, a rise of over 14 points within a month. North American Oil sold up to $3.05 and California Packing at $7. The volume of trading was the largest for a two-hour session in oils since the oil boom began.

Stocks soared to new high levels again yesterday in Wall street in one of the most spirited Saturday trading sessions since the election. Trading gradually gathered momentum, culminating in a vigorous rally at the close under the leadership of Atchison, which mounted 3 points to a new 1924 top price at 115¾, the highest in ten years. More than forty new high records were established on a total turnover which exceeded 1,000,000 shares.

The rise in the reserve ratio of the New York federal reserve bank from 76.5 per cent a week ago to 78.2 afforded an evidence of the strong position of the money market and confirmed impressions in Wall Street that Friday's advance in call money rates to 4 per cent reflected nothing more than preparation for month-end financing. The week-end business reviews of the principal mecantile agencies were perhaps the most favorable with respect to present performances and optimistic in their outlook, that have been seen since the end of the summer. Expansion of the operations of Bethlehem, Replogle, Youngstown and other important steel manufactuers, was vouched for by the officials of the various companies.

Union Oils led the petroleums in an active five-day week on the San Francisco Stock and Bond Exchange. Union Oil reached a new high of 38¾, and closed at 38, on sales of 25,900 shares; Union Associates closed at 67, a net gain of 4¾ points with 6800 shares changing hands. Snell Union showed consistent strength, advancing ¾ to 20⅜ on a turnover of 15,000 shares. Pacific Oil ranged between 54¾ and 55 on sales of 4265 shares. Associated closed ¾ higher at 32½. General Petroleum ranged from 43 to 44¾, closing (ex-dividend) at 43½ on sales of 2740 shares. Honolulu Oil closed up 2½ to 2.72½, while North American, from a high of 3.22½, declined to a close at 3.05, off 10 for the week. Pacific Gas common featured the utilities, crossing par for the first time, advancing to 104½ on sales of 1804 shares. San Joaquin common declined 1½ to 42. Bancitaly Corporation showed especial strength, rising 6½ to 146½. Best Tractor rose 3 to 78¾. California Copper jumped to 1.80 during a single session, later reacting to 1.77½, total sales were 24,470 shares. California Packing (ex-dividend) closed at 96 off ¾ on a light turnover. Haiku Fruit stocks both declined 1½ to 19. Sperry Flour common gained 2½ to 54¾ on sales of 1433 shares. Magnavox closed 22½ higher at 3.22½. On the unlisted department, continued strength in Western Pacific stocks was recorded; the preferred closing up 3¾ at 85¾, while the common at 34¾ showed a gain of 1¾. Two blocks, totaling 85,000 shares of Consonated Mutual sold at 1 cent, off 10 from the last previous sale. Holly Development rose rapidly to 2 and closed at 1.85, up 45 for the week on sales of 33,200 shares. The bond market continued to mark time with light sales and price changes in either direction confined to small fraction in most issues.

Orders booked for structural steel during October called for 171,600 tons as against booking of 176,800 tons in September and 127,400 tons a year ago. Shipments by fabricators during October, aggregating 206,000 tons, compared with 192,100 tons shipped in September and 205,400 tons in October, 1923.

Production of passenger automobiles in October totaled 257,900 cars as against 250,171 cars in September and 337,041 cars last year, while truck production totaling 31,433 in October may be compared with 30,-805 truck in September and 30,152 in year ago.

Production of bituminous coal in October aggregated 46,827,000 tons as contrasted with 41,023,000 tons in September and 49,177,000 tons in October, 1922. Anthracite coal production in October amounted to 7,674,-000 tons as against 7,581,000 tons in the previous month and $724,000 tons a year ago. Total coke production aggregated 2,530,000 tons in October as compared with 2,066,000 tons in September and 4,396,000 tons in October of last year.

Many miscellaneous shares forged into the limelight this week, snaring speculative favor with the more generally recognized leaders. Impressive gains were recorded by Famous Players-Lasky, Pressed Steel Car, Savage Arms and many of the minor steel issues.

The first counter attraction of the stock market since the election was the flotation of the $100,000,000 French loan, which was almost four times over-subscribed. The new bonds immediately commanded a substantial premium. Another important financial development was the extension of a $15,000,000 credit by American and British bankers to the German railways as re-organized under the Dawes plan.

Owing to the fact that for the first time since last July a decrease is shown in the domestic visible supply, wheat this week achieved a material upturn in price. Compared with a week ago, the market yesterday was 3 to 5¼c higher. Other net gains for the week were: Corn, ¾c to 1¼c; oats, ¼c to ⅝c, and provisions, 20c to 87c.

In connection with the falling-off in the United States visible supply, May delivery of wheat, and July as well, ascended to new peak prices for the season. The market was also strengthened by gossip that the United States at present has as much principal southern ports declined considerably from a year ago, while stocks of rosin held on October 31 were below the inventories of a year ago and turpentine stocks were above.

New orders received by manufacturers of piano benches and stools increased in October over the previous month, while the October shipments were larger than in September and on about the same level as a year ago.

The recent sharp upbidding of the Independent Steel shares has had more behind it than the improvement in the steel trade and the rush of short sellers to cover in their commitments. There is said to be a large steel merger in prospect, destined to take in the majority of the independent producers. The idea is likely to be ridiculed and branded as another instance of speculative propaganda. Nevertheless the stories have come from usually well-informed quarters. The fact is that the United States Steel Corporation has been "holding the umbrellas" for the smaller companies for a long while. It is said that the corporation would favor stiffer competition and that a combination is looked upon as a scientific move for the protection of American business against an increasing foreign competition.

Colorado Fuel and Iron has been mentioned as the nucleus for the projected consolidation, its coal and iron ore reserves give it a strategic advantage. Replogle, Sloss-Sheffield, Vanadium, Gulf States Steel, Bethlehem and possibly Republic are thought to be in line as units for the new company. Jones and Laughlin has not been counted upon.

This country is facing one serious crop shortage, which may mean higher butter, milk and cheese prices for many citizens. The clover seed crop this year was the smallest ever known, totaling only $17,-000 bushls as compared with 1,100,-000 last year and a five-year average of 1,610,000. Last year it was necessary to import 24,000,000 pounds of clover seed from Europe to seed pastures, but Europe also is short this year and probably will be able to export little seed.

Prices for seed already are high and dairy men predict they will go higher. The Blue Valley creamery institute, which looks after the condition in the dairy situation, is therefore advising farmers to grow alfalfa to compete with high priced clover seed and avoid the thin seeding. The alfalfa crop of the country was nearly a third larger than normal this year.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Maintaining its dominant position, the New York stock market during the week continued its onward sweep, ignoring such traditional deterrents to trading as a holiday interruption and a sharp rise in call money rates. The upward movement of prices was not so sustained as in the first two weeks following the election, however. Trading lagged somewhat early in the week, but was galvanized into renewed activity when a rally in steel shares led the whole list forward.

Industrial stocks replaced the rails in public favor as tangible evidences of improvements in various fields of industry came to light. Predictions by E. H. Gary, head of the United States Steel Corporation, that the steel industry soon would be operating at capacity, appeared to be well founded in the reports of heavy buying from all sources. Prices of pig iron and finished steel advanced and mill operations increased.

United States Steel common assumed its familiar role of market leader when it led not only a large list of steel shares, but also scores of other industrials to new high ground. In selling close to 120 it reached its highest level in seven years. Demand for other industrials was unusually broad, carrying the price average of representative issues to the highest point in several years and embracing leading stocks in the motor, chemical, copper, rubber, textile, food, equipment and merchandising groups.

Railroad reports were highly encouraging. Freight traffic failed to show any pronounced seasonal decline, which is due at this time, loadings for the second week in November exceeding one million cars.

Many miscellaneous shares forged into the limelight this week, snaring speculative favor with the more generally recognized leaders. Impressive gains were recorded by Famous Players-Lasky, Pressed Steel Car, Savage Arms and many of the minor steel issues.

The first counter attraction of the stock market since the election was the flotation of the $100,000,000 French loan, which was almost four times over-subscribed. The new bonds immediately commanded a substantial premium. Another important financial development was the extension of a $15,000,000 credit by American and British bankers to the German railways as re-organized under the Dawes plan.

BUSINESS GROWS AND STEEL, RAIL STOCKS IMPROVE

Gary's Optimistic Statement Has Quick Refex on Market.

By STUART P. WEST.

BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The stock market during the past week has kept on with the advance which started just before and just after the presidential election. The motive was quite clear, namely, the disappearance of all worry about the possibility of an amendment to the Transportation Act and the feeling of security that political conditions would remain the way they are, certainly for the next two years and most likely, for the next four years.

Supplementing the reassurances afforded by the results of the elections, have come more favorable results from various lines of trade. The stock market has been paying attention to these optimistic accounts and it is probable that, in the majority of instances, it has gone a good way toward discounting business improvement. The week-end mercantile reviews had considerable to say about the "disposition to increase commitments." These have been for the purpose of satisfying immediate needs and to provide for future requirements. The success of the conservative element at the polls was, in fact, the signal for the release of orders which had been held up by election uncertainties.

STEEL STOCKS RISE.

The remarks of Judge Gary regarding the operations of the United States Steel Corporation and the outlook for the whole steel industry were particularly encouraging to the rank and file. The force of his utterances was felt directly in the market for the steel stocks. They had not borne their share in the big advance on the stock exchange, were waiting for definite indications of a definite increased demand for steel products and better prices. Steel reviews reported that operations in certain important centers during the week rose to 70 per cent, an increase of approximately 10 per cent.

For the tenth time this year car loadings were in excess of the million mark in the week ended November 15. Furthermore, the reports of conditions in a number of other lines of business besides steel have come to hand. They have included accounts of the greater activities in the textile shoe and leather, motor and rubber trades.

SPECULATION RIFE.

The effect of all these favorable items in the outside news has been felt most keenly in the stock market. Although the total volume of business on no day was quite up to the maximum of the previous week, the turnover kept on at a high rate. The public appetite was evidently not satisfied and speculation was carried to new heights. The average of prices touched a new top. Ordinarily an advance of such magnitude in so short a time would be thought sufficient to have anticipated a larger degree of improvement in business even than has been noted. But such successive favorable bits of news had the tendency of dispelling what fears had arisen that the speculative movement would be carried to extremes.

The advance in the call money rate late in the week to the highest level touched since early in the year had no noticeable effect upon security dealings. It was regarded as a natural accompaniment of the December 1 settlements rather than any warning to speculative activities.

RAIL REPORT GOOD.

Taking the more important of the railway traffic statements for October as a whole, they presented a very favorable picture, so far as net income is concerned. The fact that net had increased largely over the same month a year ago, in spite of a falling off in gross revenues, gave concrete proof of how successful railway managements have been in cutting down maintenance charges to around normal, so that the full benefit of the current high rate of traffic could be realized.

This situation, the removal of fear of adverse legislation, the continued hope of important railway consolidations and the prospects of favorable dividend declarations, all attracted further buying of railway

Grain Market

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Divided action features today's short session on the board of trade. Wheat and oats sold off at the finish. Corn showed fractional gains.

Wheat had a dragging undertone. The few traders in the market were mostly sellers.

Oats made sympathetic dips.

Corn strengthened the provisions line.

SCENIC TRIP FOR SUNDAY TOLD BY TOURING BUREAU

Run From Eastbay Cities to Pittsburg Is Over Well-Paved Roads.

A very interesting, scenic and educational trip for Sunday, and on which paved roads may be enjoyed the entire distance, is from the Eastbay cities to Pittsburg, which is located in Contra Costa county, according to the Touring Bureau of the National Automobile Club.

As the most attractive way in which to make this trip, we would recommend going via the Bay Shore road to Martinez thence to Bay Point and Pittsburg. Returning, take the Willow Pass road to Concord, thence to Walnut Creek and over the Tunnel road to Oakland.

After leaving Rodeo the road follows the shoreline of the Carquinez Straits as far as Martinez and is one of the most scenic short drives in the state. Martinez one of the earliest settled towns of California, is the county seat of Contra Coasta county, and in its vicinity are many historic points of interest. In the Alhambra Valley extending south from Martinez are the homes of the late John Swett, the eminent educator, and the late John Muir, noted naturalist.

From Martinez to Pittsburg excellent paved highway is encountered. Due to the advantages of Pittsburg's location and its transportation facilities, it is fast becoming an industrial center. One of the prominent industries located at Pittsburg is the main plant of the Columbia Steel Corporation. Their steel foundry at Pittsburg is the largest west of St. Louis and the sheet mills, wire mills and wire nail factory here are the only plants manufacturing these products west of the Rocky Mountains. Another prominent industry located at Pittsburg is the Redwood Manufacturing Company, with their plant covering more than 100 acres of land. They specialize in redwood lumber, but also handle great quantities of pine and hardwoods. Approximately 80,000,000 feet of lumber was received, worked and reshipped by this plant during the past, representing a business of about $4,500,000. Here also is located the Pioneer Rubber Mills, a $3,000,000 corporation where 12,000,000 feet of garden hose is made yearly. This plant covers about 15 acres of land and its products are shipped to all parts of the world. The Great Western Electro-Chemical Company's plant, covering about 19 acres of land, operates 24 hours a day, and manufactures numerous chlorine products. The F. E. Booth Company cannery at Pittsburg is the second largest individual asparagus packing plant in the world. They also pack a full line of canned fruits and tomatoes, and are the greatest shippers of fresh shad to eastern markets.

About two million pounds of salmon, about a million pounds of shad, and about four hundred and twenty-five thousand pounds of striped bass are taken from the waters in proximity to Pittsburg every year, also carp and pike in substantial quantity.

From Pittsburg to Concord via Willow Pass is paved, thence to Walnut Creek. From Walnut Creek the return trip may be made through Lafayette and over the Tunnel road to Berkeley and Oakland, or if time permits continue south from Walnut Creek to Danville and through the fertile San Ramon Valley to Dublin, thence through Dublin Canyon to Hayward and Oakland.

Motorists pay an average of a quarter of a cent a mile, in the form of registration fees and gasoline taxes, according to the United States Bureau of Public Roads. The computation is made on the basis of an average annual mileage of 6000 for each motorist.

Moon Car Dealer Appointed Here.

VIBRATIONLESS MOTOR PRAISED

That the Northern California motoring public is always looking for something new in the automotive world has been indicated during the past two weeks since the introduction of the new Peerless Equipoised Eight the latest creation of the Peerless factory.

According to R. M. Northcutt, manager of the Peerless Motor company's San Francisco branch, the 90-degree V-type motored creation has aroused more interest than any model ever introduced here by Peerless. He declares that hundreds of San Franciscans have visited the show rooms on Van Ness avenue to examine the models and to ride in them.

"As a result of those visits we have taken more orders than we anticipated at first," said Northcutt. "When the factory sent us our allotment of Equipoised Eights officials there thought it would take some time before they went into the hands of owners. However, I have already sent telegrams ordering more cars, which indicates that the coming year is going to be an excellent one for the latest Peerless eight-cylinder creation.

"Those who have been fortunate enough to have secured a ride in the car declared it operated with an astounding smoothness, due to the fact that the power plant is absolutely vibrationless at all engine speeds. When Peerless engineers set out to build this model they sought to find a way of combining a counterbalanced crankshaft with scientifically coordinated timing gears.

"They succeeded and the resulting Equipoise is the principal factor in enabling us to eliminate vibration and produce a quality of smoothness that astounded those who had their first ride in the new car. This smoothness was obtained by neutralizing what are known to engineers as 'inertia forces.' They are what have always tended to cause vibration in an automobile engine.

'Rich' Gas Mixture Impairs Combustion

A "rich" gasoline mixture is one with too great a proportion of gasoline to the amount of air, whereas a lean mixture is possessed of less fuel than it should have for proper combustion. An overrich mixture will cause overheating of the engine, to say nothing of carbon accumulation and such other ills as preignition, loss of power, lack of accelerative ability and loading up at slow speeds. At high speed a lean mixture will cause misfiring and uneven running of the engine. In connection with this improper operation there will be the familiar popping in the carburetor.

PIONEER DEALERS NAMED AGENTS FOR POPULAR CAR

One of the most important changes in motor car representation in Oakland was announced yesterday by P. W. Wisdom, Western representative of the Moon Motor Car Company, in the appointment of H. G. Markham & Co. as Eastbay distributors for Moon automobiles.

H. G. Markham, head of the firm bearing his name, has been selling automobiles in the Eastbay cities for six years and has, in that time, sold 1500 cars, all of one make. The change comes as a surprise to all who have been connected with the business and to his many customers throughout the cities.

"The Moon Motor Car Company is one of the best financed and the best equipped in the industry," states Markham. "The company's plants are located in St. Louis. The sales throughout the country rank with the leaders.

"I selected the Moon after looking over the field carefully. The new models are modern in every way. The cars are equipped with balloon tires, four-wheel brakes and the body lines are beautiful and distinctive.

"I found it necessary to get a car of the Moon class to satisfy my rapidly growing army of buyers who wanted a high grade car at a reasonable price, and a car that did not resemble every other machine on the market.

"The Moon is motored with a powerful six-cylinder Continental motor, the best known and most efficient motor built in this country.

"All models are equipped with four-wheel hydraulic, Lockheed brakes, the best known brake on the market. We tested the car thoroughly before we agreed to handle it here, because we wanted an automobile that would stand the test of hard usage and still deliver service to the owner.

"I have been in the automobile business in Oakland for many years, and have never before sold a car that I like as much as the new Moon. The car can be throttled down to a few miles per hour and speeded up almost instantly to fifty or sixty and there is no more effort, seemingly, in a speed of sixty as in ten. The motor is flexible and all the parts are coordinated so that the whole gives the impression of great power with ease of control.

"In order to be in closer touch with Moon car dealers and the demand for cars in this part of the country, P. W. Wisdom, Western factory manager, has moved to this city and is in constant touch with the situation.

"Wisdom has just completed arrangements with Joseph Holle for Moon representation in San Francisco, and has other dealers ready to announce in the near future."

LASSEN HIGHWAY OPEN IN WINTER

Motorists who desire to drive to Susanville and Reno will probably be able to use the Lassen Volcanic highway throughout the coming winter, the touring bureau of the California State Automobile Association announced yesterday. There is a possibility that the route might be closed temporarily for short periods just after unusually heavy storms.

The route is in fair condition at the present time, according to a bulletin issued by the Automobile Association yesterday which said that there is a fair gravel road from Red Bluff to Paynes Creek, with graded highway extending over the new road via Mineral to Morgan Springs. Beyond Morgan Springs there are six miles of rather poor road but this stretch is followed by good road to Chester and a fair roadbed from Chester to Westwood and Susanville.

As long as there are no radical changes in weather conditions the bulletin stated that the Automobile Association would not hesitate to recommend this route.

About Western Giant Cords

"On buying my last one I left with your tire No. 210181 (30x3½), which has run over a period of forty months, and has made 34,596 miles on my route. This is figured from a basis of twenty-six days per month for thirty-five months five months being deducted for time as a spare. No evening or Sunday driving was taken into consideration. This, I think you will agree, is exceptional service for any tire being used through three winters of mud and frozen ruts.

"I have more of your tires and feel sure that they are making an average of 25,000 miles per tire. I certainly am a booster for Western Giants."
J. W. Bowman, Carrier R. F. D. No. 8, Spokane, Wash.

"The date of purchase was Aug. 15th, 1922, the speedometer reading being 47,510 miles, and the reading today being 63,005 miles. This gives the present mileage at nearly 20,500 miles. To all appearances, the tread is not worn nearly to the fabric, and if I do not approximate 10,000 miles more out of them, I shall be surprised though not disappointed."
G. Huntington Clapp, Asst Civil Engineer, L. A. Harbor Dep't.

About Wear-well Cords

"I drove from San Pedro to Battery Place, New York City, in fifteen days and had California air in three tires when I landed here. I have since driven over seven thousand miles making a total close to eleven thousand, and I still have California air in one tire. All four are in fair condition. I have had no blowouts."
Walter Peterson, 24 Abell St., Kingston, New York.

A ROSE WEDDING WAS THAT OF MISS KITTY BELLE LONG AND DUDLEY TAIT OF SAN FRANCISCO, SON OF THE LATE DR. DUDLEY TAIT OF THAT CITY. THE EPISCOPAL ritual was read by Dean J. Wilmer Gresham of Grace Cathedral assisted by Rev. Alexander Allen of St. Paul's Church in Adams Point where the service was witnessed November 15, by several hundred guests from about the bay and down the peninsula. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert A. Long of Kenmore avenue. Members of her entourage were a group of the debutante set. All wore bouffant chiffon frocks in varying rose tones trimmed in gold streamers. Left to right in the photograph are Miss Libby Moffitt Smith, Miss Barbara Bradt, Miss Marjorie Walker, Mrs. Dudley Tait (Kitty Belle Long); Miss Elizabeth Howard, Miss Lora Pratt, Miss Suzette Keating and Miss Eleanor Fitzgerald. EASTBAY HOMES ARE SCENES OF MERRYMAKING ON THANKSGIVING FOLLOWED BY DANCING PARTIES

By SUZETTE.

SOCIETY after its whirl of social doings in the past fortnight spent a day at home and feasted on Thanksgiving with old friends and relatives from afar, or within the immediate family circle as the case might be. And there were greetings extended elsewhere than at home for many slipped away from the fireside for an hour or two to visit at the Ladies' Relief, or the Baby Hospital and other philanthropic institutions where the day was a big one and presidents and boards of directors saw to it that happiness reigned therein, too.

And with the passing of the day busy hands will now make ready for the Yuletide and the coming of old St. Nicholas in the big homes that shelter so many little children.

Of the many happy family groups there were those of General and Mrs. Oscar Fitzalan Long at Hazel Lane, the Mark Requas, Mrs. John Bell Moon and Mrs. J. R. Burnham, E. D. Bronson, Judge and Mrs. Everett Brown, Mrs. Lillian Brown Everts, Mrs. Wallace Everson, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Pattani, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Paul O. Tietzen, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Willard Taylor, Mr. and Frederick A. Webster, Dr. and Mrs. David Prescott Barrows, Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Tisdale, Mr. and Mrs. Montgomerie Haslett, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Haslett, Mrs. H. A. Jackson, the J. P. H. Dunns, N. A. Ackers, T. C. Coogans, Thomas Watson Cushings, George W. Bakers, James K. Moffitts, and ever so many more.

Mr and Mrs. E. A. Howard had with them this year Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sharp of Portland and their children. Edith, Katherine and Harry Sharp Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Reimers and the Misses Margaret and Elizabeth Howard.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Bronson were hosts to their sons and daughters and their families. This year they were nearly all about the bay region so that the party included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Leroy Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bronson, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Elmer, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rowe, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Van Horn and Edward and Richard Bronson.

Mrs. William Letts Oliver was hostess Thanksgiving day to the members of her family and in the evening Miss Florinne Brown and Mrs. Lillian Brown Everts entertained the younger members of the family at a dancing party and supper at the old family home in Alice street.

At the Mount Diablo Country club, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Sherwin were hosts to a Thanksgiving dinner party of twenty, while Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Gaddis, the R. D. Coons, and Mrs. A. Thorne each entertained parties of nine.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris Cebert Capwell entertained fourteen guests at Kelton Court, among them Mr. and Mrs. Cebert Capwell

Major Reginald Bifield Cocroft, U. S. A., and Mrs. Cocroft (Dorothy Capwell) who are now in New Jersey, spent Thanksgiving at Edgwood Arsenal, Maryland, with Major Frederick Seydell and Mrs. Seydell (Phyllis Capwell). The four witnessed the big game yesterday between Army and Navy at Baltimore.

Judge and Mrs. William H. Langdon of Lafayette street, Alameda, motored to Modesto to their ranch to spend the holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Sherwood had with them on Thursday, Mr. and Mrs. Warner Sherwood, Miss Mary Sherwood and Mrs. George F. Newton and her son, Francis Newton.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lewis Benedict of Pleasanton entertained with a family dinner party at the Hotel Oakland. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. Alexander F. Gimbal, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Gimbal and Mr. and Mrs. Raynor Gimbal.

KATHRYN THOMAS BECOMES BRIDE OF GEOFFREY VAN DYKE BANGS AT BEAUTIFUL HOME CEREMONY

THE wedding of Miss Kathryn Elise Thomas, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Hayward Thomas of this city, and Geoffrey Van Dyke Bangs, on Wednesday evening was one of the brilliant highlights of the week. One hundred and fifty guests witnessed the reading of the ritual by Rev. Alexander Allen, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas in Summit street.

The nuptial vows were exchanged before a beautiful altar banked in bronze and gold colored chrysanthemums and lighted by tall tapers, supported by candelabra.

The bride's gown was of white georgette fashioned along the silhouette lines of the present mode and heavily beaded. Her veil was of tulle and rose point lace, the crown of orange blossoms and lace holding the veil in place at the coiffure. Lilies of the valley, cyclamen and orchids were carried in the bride's bouquet.

Miss Ethel Emery was maid of honor and gowned in orchid georgette. There was a quartette of bridesmaids—Mrs. Hayward Thomas and Mrs. Donald Thomas, sisters-in-law of the bride; Mrs. Ransom Henshaw of Los Angeles and Miss Elizabeth Lohse, who wore lovely frocks of pale green, rose and orchid chiffon. All wore wreaths of silver leaves in their hair and carried shower bouquets of Ophelia roses.

Franklin Bangs, a brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Mrs. Hayward Thomas, mother of the bride, was in black and white lace with pearl ornaments.

Mr. and Mrs. Bangs are spending their honeymoon at Carmel-by-the-Sea and upon their return will make their home in this city.

The bride is a member of a representative family of the Eastbay. Following her graduation from the University of California, Mrs. Bangs continued her studies at Columbia and later went abroad for two years, where she was engaged in social settlement work. She is a niece of Dr. and Mrs. John Louis Lohse and of Mr. and Mrs. George Westcott, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Marriner of Berkeley.

The Bangs family is one of the oldest about the bay. The bridegroom, who was graduated from the University of California and is a Sigma Nu fraternity man, is a brother of Mrs William Leitmann Shaw of San Francisco, Franklin Bangs Jr., Mrs. Aldrich Barton of Shanghai, and Mrs. Benner Fernstrom of Virginia.

Dr. and Mrs. Edwin Bruck of San Francisco will be hosts this evening at an informal reception at their home across the bay. Guests at the affair will assemble many prominent physicians and their friends.

Mrs. Bruck was Miss Marion Kergan before her marriage. She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. S. Kergan of this city.

Mrs. Frederick Whitton of Berkeley was hostess at a luncheon at the Claremont Country club Monday afternoon and assisting her was her daughter, Mrs. Edward Von Adelung Jr.

NEW CLUBHOUSE FOR BUSINESS WOMEN TO BE DEDICATED TODAY

By EDNA B. KINARD.

THE Oakland Business and Professional Women's Club achieves its goal today. The new clubhouse on Webster street will be formally dedicated with a beautiful and impressive ceremony. Only those who have labored and saved and planned together—and they include the entire membership of upward of 250—will have a part in the ceremonies at which they will take possession of the attractive building. A bit of sentiment has prompted this "family day." There is no secret in the fact that the financing of the ambitious project has been underwritten by the business and professional women themselves, who hold all of the stock in the holding company.

A house warming and formal opening in which prominent citizens and friends of the members will be included among the guests is announced for Tuesday evening. Between the hours of 8 and 11 the doors of the building at 1608 Webster street will be thrown wide for a brilliant reception, which will offer opportunity for congratulation to those who have made possible the clubhouse.

Claiming the distinction of being the first Business and Professional Women's Club west of Kansas to erect a combined business and clubhouse, the local women are marked as pioneers of the west.

Dedication of the clubhouse culminates an effort stretching over a period of three years and a half. Nearly two years ago the option was obtained on the Webster street site, which within a few short months increased most amazingly in value. It was on July 14 of this year that ground was broken for the building, the occasion preceded by a parade through the down town streets of the members gayly armed with shovels. It was a gala event.

A rabbit's foot, a New Testament and such documents as traditionally go into a cornerstone were sealed at an impressive service, which called several hundred spectators to the building lot on August 2.

Today the building is completed, furnished and equipped ready to begin its historic career.

Two stories of Colonial type, the clubhouse offers adequate accommodations to its members and affords a regular income in rentals from the stores on the ground floor and the offices in front. A roof garden, an auditorium, dining and kitchen facilities of the most mod-

Helen Law Is Wed at Home Ceremony

Mr. and Mrs. George Shepherd (Helen Law) will be at home in Berkeley this week after a short honeymoon motor trip in the south. The wedding Tuesday noon was one of the prettiest home ceremonies of the winter season.

Rev. Oswald W. S. McCall read the service in the presence of half a hundred guests assembled at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Law of Oakvale avenue, Berkeley. The couple stood before an improvised altar banked with pink flowers. Pink candles in brass candelabra lighted the rooms, which were decorated with flowers in the pastel shades, pink carnations predominating.

The bride made an attractive picture in her gown of pale pink georgette crepe, made with a tight fitting bodice and bouffant skirt. With it she wore a cream colored lace hat, with pink flowers encircling the brim. Her flowers were white gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Attending her as maid of honor was Miss Ruth Younger, wearing a blue georgette frock made on straight lines, with a garden hat of matching blue. She carried Ophelia roses. Hugh Slayden was the best man and James Corley and William Jones were groomsmen.

Following the wedding, a breakfast was served, the bridal table being decorated with pink and blue flowers.

Mrs. Shepherd is a graduate of the University of California and of Miss Head's school in Berkeley. She is a member of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority and is well known as a tennis enthusiast. Shepard is also a graduate of the university. He is a member of the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity and of the Big C honor society.

The Lums went first to St. Louis, where they visited Professor and Mrs. Thomas Marshall, formerly of Alameda, and then went to Vicksburg and New Orleans.

Mrs. Hamilton Murdock of Alameda is a member of the Garden Branch of the Baby Hospital Association. The personnel of the branch includes many of the younger married set.—Boye photo.

Mayor's Kin, Artist, to Wed Eastern Girl

From the east has come an interesting announcement, that of the betrothal of Miss Eunice Underwood and John Garber Palache, nephew of Mayor and Mrs. Frank D. Springham of Berkeley. Mr. Palache is a University of California graduate and has many friends in the Eastbay. He is the son of Whitney Palache of Orange New Jersey.

The bridegroom-elect is studying art in Paris. His fiancee, who is an eastern girl, also spends much of her time abroad.

Recently the Palache studio in the French city was the scene of a delightful gathering when the Harry East Millers and several other Californians were entertained by the young artist. Mr. Palache is the grandson of the late Judge Garber of this city.

Mr and Mrs Frank Sommers of Los Angeles were guests last weekend at the home of Mr. and Mrs A. F. Gimbal on Wayne avenue. Mrs. Sommers was Miss Ruth Schlueter before her marriage and has many friends here. The Sommers motored up from their home in Hollywood for the game.

Friends of Miss Doris Haslett, daughter of the Montgomerie Hasletts of Alameda, are following with interest her career in dramatics. She is traveling in stock at present in Bermuda, and will extend the tour to the larger cities of South America.

Manning Parks At Home After Honeymoon Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Manning Warren Park (Frances Hatch) have returned from a honeymoon trip in the northwest, and are making their home temporarily at the Hotel Claremont.

The Parks have had a most enjoyable honeymoon journey in Washington, Oregon and Canada. In Seattle, they spent some time with Park's relatives and were constantly entertained at teas and parties during their visit.

On Friday evening they were honor guests at a large reception and dance given by Mrs. Sallie Pease at the Claremont clubhouse in Berkeley. Two hundred guests were present for the dance and a number of others came for the reception.

Friends of the Parks are planning several other interesting affairs to welcome them home.

Mr and Mrs. Harold Jean Havre will entertain at an evening bridge party next Saturday at the Claremont Country Club. Honor guests at the affair will be Mr. and Mrs. Werner Schaur, whose wedding a few weeks ago was a brilliant social event here. Mrs Schaur was Miss Carolyn Rodolph, daughter of the George Rodolphs of Vernon Heights.

The Claremont Country Club will be the setting next Saturday afternoon for a large reception and tea, at which Mrs. F. B. Henderson and her daughter, Miss Julia Henderson, will be the hostesses. Several hundred of the maids and matrons of bay society will be in attendance at the affair.

Margaret Coffman Is Married Here

At a very quiet ceremony at the home of Miss Margaret Knight Coffman on Staten avenue, the marriage of Miss Coffman and Gerrip van Sweringen Henry was solemnized Wednesday evening.

There were no attendants, and only members of the immediate families were present. Mr. and Mrs. Henry will make their home in apartments on Webster street.

Mrs. Henry is the daughter of the late B. Nelson Coffman of this city. She is a graduate of the Mary Baldwin school in Virginia. Her husband is the son of Walter Henry of Oakland, and the grandson of Mrs. George Whitney of Webster street.

Mrs. Clarence Crowell entertained Wednesday at a handsomely appointed luncheon and bridge for more than a score of guests at the Claremont Country Club. The honor guests were Mrs. James Dunn of Alameda and Mrs. Finlay McIntyre of Piedmont, who have been abroad for several months.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Swayne of Alameda are away on a month's trip to the east. Their itinerary is to embrace New Orleans, Washington, D. C.; New York and other eastern points. Doris Harcourt Wedding Leads London Events

Special Cable to The Oakland TRIBUNE and the New York World.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The Harcourt-Baring wedding, celebrated at St. Margaret's church in Westminster, was the social sensation here last week. The bride, the Hon. Doris Harcourt, is the daughter of Viscountess Harcourt, formerly the immensely wealthy Mary Ethel Burns of New York. The bridegroom is the only son of Lord Ashburton. Queen Mary, Queen Victoria of Spain and the Princess Mary were among the donors of wedding gifts worth a fortune.

Queen Mary gave Chinese laquer pots and Her Majesty of Spain an antique painted fan. Mrs. J. P. Morgan sent a check and the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire some George II. salt cellars. Princess Beatrice and Mrs. Kellogg, wife of the American Ambassador, were among the guests. The latter was gowned in black and ermine.

The bride herself was a radiant picture. She wore many of her nuptial gifts of jewelry and was described as being "drenched in diamonds." On the night of the wedding 16-year-old Lord Harcourt entertained his sister's bridesmaids at a dinner at Claridge's.

Entertaining along the intimate lines that characterize the "little season" has been prolific this week. Lady Ribblesdale has resumed her Friday afternoon bridge and mah jongg parties at her house in Grosvenor Square, preceded by the customary luncheon party at the Berkeley. The Duchesse of Roxburghe, Mrs. Booth Knox in magpie toilette and pearls, and Lady Cunard were her guests on Friday.

At the Berkeley the other night Prince Henry was the dinner guest of the Earl and Countess of Ancaster, who have just returned to town from Grimsthorpe Castle.

The Prince of Wales, who spent the day in the country riding, joined the party for supper. Prince Henry is the best dancer in the royal family, even though his better known elder brother has improved since his trip to the United States.

The no-cosmetics craze, which has been inflicting a fortnight's rogue in Paris, is not catching on in London. Society women here are using a bronze colored face powder which gives a slightly tanned appearance in the thin, coppery sunshine which occasionally dispels the November fog.

The coiffures vary day by day, though the shingle bob remains supreme. There are some young French women staying at the Savoy just now and their hair is bleached pearly white. Their [illegible] are the sensation nightly in the hotel ballroom.

Will Wed On Christmas Day

Miss Florence Barry was the hostess yesterday afternoon at a pretty tea given at the Palace hotel across the bay. The guest of honor was Miss Regina Knudsen of Alameda, fiancee of Douglas Stafford, who is being entertained at a number of affairs previous to her wedding.

The marriage is to be a quiet event of Christmas day at the home of the bride-elect's parents, Captain and Mrs. C. A. Knudsen of Alameda. There will be no attendants.

Next Thursday, Mrs. Marvin Elster will be the hostess at an afternoon bridge party in compliment to Miss Barry, and on Saturday following another bridge will be given by Miss Artha Bartels at her home on Central avenue for the bride-to-be.

College Women Will Give Gay December Dance

Among the festivities for the Yuletide season which are being planned in such numbers these days is a dance which will be given by the College Women's Club of Berkeley on December 6 at the Twentieth Century clubhouse in the college city.

It is to be a real Christmas party with holly and Christmas greens and a Santa Claus present for the fun. A club chorus under the direction of Mrs. E. D. Eastman will sing Christmas carols, and there will be prize dances and interesting favors. Tables of bridge and mah jongg will be arranged for those who do not care to dance.

In charge of arrangements is Mrs. G. R. Warren, assisted by Mrs. Milton Farmer, Mrs. C. H. Ingles, Mrs. R. W. Roberg, Mrs. E. A. Richards, Mrs. Howard Willoughby, Mrs. William Kelly and Mrs. W. R. Grieg. Mrs. F. I. Doana is in charge of invitations.

Miss Petray arrived on the Matsonia Tuesday.

Among those already at Del Monte are: C. L. Edgar, L. L. Edgar and J. B. Grace of Boston; Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Harris, St. Louis; Dr. and Mrs. John Plunkett, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Collins, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Louis M. Sagal, Dr. J. E. Toole, New Haven; Mrs. Mary H. Stratton, Mrs. J. R. Dougherty, Camden, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Bowen, Salt Lake City; Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Welsh, Bellingham, Wash.; B. W. Senger, Garfield, Utah.

Society Eager For Start of Polo Season

DEL MONTE, Nov. 29.—Polo, a popular diversion for society and the incentive for entertainments, is going to be very much in the limelight this winter in California. The Pacific Coast open championship is to be held at Del Monte and all the clubs are planning extensive schedules of matches.

Another bit of news of interest is the announcement of the probable visit of Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., the All-American star, whom the Cardinals are trying to get for their lineup. George Gordon Moore always obtains prominent players to represent the Cardinals and he already has Elmer Boeseke of Santa Barbara. Mr. and Mrs. Moore spend a great deal of their time on their ranch up the Carmel Valley, where a fine string of polo ponies are stabled.

If "Tommy" Hitchcock comes out he will be the guest of honor at a number of social affairs, as he is one of the most expert polo-ists in the country and is popular in social circles.

The coming of Edward Baldwin and Francis Brown from Honolulu to play on the Del Monte junior team with Harry C. Hunt and William W. Crocker is looked forward to with interest. Mrs. Brown is also to make the trip. The Browns are well known at Del Monte, where Brown has participated in many of the golfing features.

There is much activity at the San Mateo Polo Club. A number of new players have been attracted by the exciting sport on horseback and they are anxious to engage in the big tournaments with all the attending excitment along the sideboards. The Midwick players of Pasadena have already started their season and the success of Teddy Miller, Eric Pedley, Arthur Perkins and Carleton Burke in winning the national championships this past season has naturally stirred up much interest in polo.

Robert Wells Richie, the well-known writer, and Mrs. Ritchie have been spending the autumn months at their beautiful home at Pebble Beach. Samuel G. Blythe is another famous writer wintering here.

Art Exhibit to Be Held Tuesday

The Hotel Oakland will be the scene on Tuesday of an exhibit given by the California School of Arts and Crafts. Society folk are actively sponsoring the affair, and there is to be an interesting display of prints of some of the Russian artists, a variety of pottery, batiks and a number of hand-woven articles.

The list of patrons and patronesses for the affair includes Mesdames Wallace Alexander, Frank C. Havens, George W. Percy, Norman de Vaux, H. C. Brougher, Dr. William S. Porter, Dr. Thomas Winslow, Oscar Fitzalan Long, Horatio Bonestell, Walton N. Moore, Clinton Walker and Harry East Miller.

EMINENT PLAYERS OF THE ARTICULATE AND SILENT DRAMA

Mari Carmi (the Princess Matchabelli) originated the role of the Madonna in "The Miracle" in London twelve years ago and was imported by Morris Gest for the New York engagement. Lady Diana Manners played the part of the nun in the same production and also appeared as the Madonna in this country. The former is seen here in a sports costume as she appeared recently at a Fifth Avenue fashion pageant, and the latter in an outfit topped by a small antique hat developed in black satin with felt crown and a sweep of uncurled ostrich feather, both conceptions of Henri Bendel. Betty Bronson is the new Peter Pan, wearing the costume designed for her appearance in the film version of the Barrie play. Lois Wilson and Ernest Torrence are shown in a scene from the photo play of Emerson Hough's "North of 36."

ON THE SCREEN

by Quinn Martin

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—There is about as much drama in such a picture as Pola Negri's "Forbidden Paradise" as there would be in a series of erotical and daringly posed colored post cards. And the eagerness on the part of the public for a peek is just about equal as between the two.

The sidewalks outside the house where the picture was being shown were crowded last Sunday and all week long, and once inside the theater, men, women and children sat charmed before the passing whims of a seducing, tempestuous and white shouldered queen. I can understand this. Miss Negri is a lady who has done more toward putting sex appeal on a sound paying basis in this country than anyone else. Probably there is not an actress on the screen who seems more deserving of attention from the men.

Miss Negri has her good points, and she sees to it they are properly employed in the progress of her film plays.

ELUSIVE ADDITION TO TONE OF PLAY.

Ernst Lubitsch, who directed the star in her first big emotional sex puzzle, called quite aptly, "Passion," is the man who put her through her scenes in the screen version of "The Czarina." If he has added anything to the general tone of the play, it has eluded me. Nothing broader in its intent has been presented for weeks. At the same time, I think Miss Negri performs these bold boudoir rendezvous with a minimum of vulgarity. There is nothing in all her round of philandering with the soldiers of her guard which compares, for example, with the cheapness of at least one scene in Cosmo Hamilton's new stage comedy, "Parasites."

I cannot help thinking Miss Negri is cast to utter perfection in this type of thing. And I can add that, even so, the drama is not being elevated to any great extent as a result.

CONVICTION DROPPED BY WAYSIDE IN FILM.

The Frederick Lonsdale comedy, "Spring Cleaning," which set out to preach a sermon in morals, was unbelievable and far fetched in the beginning. And still it was acted well on the stage, and the Selwyns reaped a fair reward as a result.

The big scene was that in which a poet-husband, disgusted with the fast company in which his wife was traveling, decided to bring in a street waker and seat her at the dinner table with his wife and her friends. This, he believed, would reflect, in some way, into the eyes of his wife the kind of life she was gradually leading to live.

As "The Fast Set" there was no great change made in the running story, and still what little of conviction there may have been to bolster up the original seem to have been dropped by the wayside. Adolphe Menjou appeared as one of the smirking hangers-on, and did a good, smart job of it. Menjou has risen so rapidly and to such a solid success within the last year or so that he has

Screen Actor Is Named Head of Lambs' Club

Thomas Meighan, was elected Shepherd of the Lambs at their annual meeting in New York recently. This is the first time a motion picture actor has held the office of Shepherd, that post having been filled for the last fifty years by famous actors, stage directors and widely known persons in professional life.

The Lambs is the oldest and most celebrated theatrical organization in America. Founded in 1874 in the Blue Room at Delmonico's (Then at Fifth Avenue and Fourteenth Street), following a supper given by George H. McLean, the club attracted to its membership practically all the stage celebrities of the later Nineteenth century.

His first shepherd was Henry J. Montague. Subsequently that post of honor has been held by such famous characters as Lester Wallach, Harry Beckett, John R. Brady Clay M. Greene, De Wolf Hopper, Augustus Thomas and more recently, Wilton Lackaye, William Curtleigh, R. H. Burnside and Albert O. Brown.

Meighan's election was unanimous, there being no other candidate to oppose him. Other officers elected were: Boy, Arthur Hurley; corresponding secretary, Gene Buck; recording secretary, Grant Mitchell; treasurer, Harry N Allen; librarian, Priestly Morrison; directors, to serve three years, Albert O. Brown, A. M. Briggs, William David, Robert L. Hague and Denis F. McSweeney.

Alec B. Francis will complete work in a featured role in "The Bridge of Sighs," a Warner Brothers production this week.

Cinema Version of Heaven Being Made As New Fantasy

Henry Otto, who transferred "Dante's Inferno" to the screen, has been asked to film a fantastical version of the more pleasant hereafter, by a prominent producing company. A story carrying the title, "There is a Heaven" has been prepared and is now in the director's hands for consideration.

Otto has become recognized as a specialist in this line. His pictures "Undine," "The Loreley of the Sea," "The Temple of Venus" and now "Dante's Inferno" are all exceptional box-office attractions as well as artistic triumphs, hence producers are extremely desirous of placing the artistic megaphone wielder under contract.

Lloyd Bacon Is Directing Mack Sennett Comedies

Lloyd Bacon, comedy director and son of the late Frank Bacon, is directing two-reel comedies at the Mack Sennett Studio.

Bacon has been handling the megaphone on two-reelers for a number of years, having directed several series of Lloyd Hamilton pictures.

He is at present engaged in directing Ben Turpin in a new Sennett burlesque, in which Trilby Clark and Jack Cooper have important parts.

Exterior location scenes were being made last week for Virginia Valli's fifth starring picture, "Up the Ladder."

Girl As Boss Has Miner Whipped in California Drama

"Bertie Clark," played by Wanda Hawley in "The Man Who Played Square" starring Buck Jones and directed by Al Santell at the William Fox West Coast Studios, is a girl who, through untoward circumstances, is obliged to step into her father's shoes as the owner of a gold mine in Northern California. She is compelled to deal with rough miners who understand but one law—force. In the presence of the men she is of necessity hard-boiled and implacable, even to having to witness the whipping of an offender.

On the other hand at heart "Bertie" is distinctly feminine and even enjoys a good cry as women have done since the dawn of history.

SEEING THINGS at NIGHT

~By Heywood Broun~

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—My belief in my aesthetic sensitivity has been shattered. It never was very strong. The cause of the trouble is "Silence," a melodrama. "Silence" is an excellent melodrama, but it is by no means a perfect piece of craftsmanship and so I am filled with remorse when I report, as truthfulness impels me to report, that it held my attention more closely than [illegible] play of the season.

There is no possible way by which I can argue this play into the first rank of current productions. There are at least five or six things on Broadway more important in plan and more finished in execution. But a man's likes or dislikes in the theater are only partially moulded by his reason. That is why criticism contains such a high percentage of stuff and nonsense. The reviewer is entirely competent to say "I liked" or "I didn't like," but most of the explanations which he offers for his enthusiasm or his rancor are quite beside the point.

APPROACH TO ESTATE OF GREAT DRAMA.

Of all the plays produced here in New York this season it seems to me that Eugene O'Neill's "Desire Under the Elms" more nearly approaches the stature of great drama. It does not quite get there, and in failing to reach its objective it may possibly fall below even the ledge where good plays maintain themselves. Perhaps in this fact I may find some justification for my emotional surrender to "Silence," the melodrama. The writer of melodrama does not aim so high as his fellow playwrights who seek to interpret and explain life. There is no pretense of revelation in a good blood and thunder tale.

Character drawing is merely incidental. The folk concerned need not be directly from the life. They may even falsify quite obviously many human values, for your good melodrama writer will keep his people moving about so rapidly that no one in the audience will have an opportunity to study any of the figures in its relation to recognizable human types. The interest is not what, these people are but what they do.

Of course, they must roughly approximate known human beings, and that is ample. Jim Warren of "Silence" is a cheap and cowardly grafter and yet when the big test in his life comes he gladly sacrifices himself to save another. This is probably a false report so far as life is concerned. The cheapness of cheap grafters cuts deep, and noble motives are found in them infrequently. And yet just as long as "Silence" was passing in front of me I found no difficulty in accepting the conduct of Jim Warren as entirely plausible.

There was no element in the motivation of his acts which sent me raging off into disbelief. And that may have been because Max Marcin, the author, didn't bother his head about the man's motivation. He merely told us that here was a character who did this and that and the playwright offered us no explantion of the whys and wherefores of the business. This is a rather effective device. When an author sets out to write a "problem" play he shoulders the necessity of making many explanations of everything his people do. Accordingly he runs a double risk. The audience may accept the deed and wholly reject the explanation. The melodramatist may be indicted on only one count.

EXCITEMENT PUTS LOGIC TO SLEEP.

I, myself, saw nothing to cavil at in the proceedings which went on in "Silence." Upon sober second thought there is much of the play which my reason rejects, but none of that happened while the play was on because from the very beginning I was thrown into a state of excitement. "Silence" is shrewdly built. The basic formula of the story is not particularly novel. We have a criminal and his daughter whom he never sees until twenty years after her birth. She is by this time a great lady, or at least a respectable one, while he has remained an outcast. And when the test comes his love for his child overshadows all his other emotions. To be sure, this probably isn't so. Propinquity and great deal to do with father and mother love. Also [illegible] who was out of sight

Sabatini Lauds Picturization of His Best Novel

Rafael Sabatini, British-Italian fictionist, has commmended Frank Lloyd, producer-director, upon his picturization of "The Sea Hawk."

Sabatini was one of the audience of over 8000 who witnessed the British premier of "The Sea Hawk" at the Royal Albert Hall, and his comment on the production reached Lloyd's Hollywood studio a few days ago.

Says Sabatini: "I have just witnessed the really superb picture you have made from my book, and I am simply without words in which to express my delight.

"The story has been handled in a masterly manner, and with an appreciation of dramatic values and a sense of proportion that I have never seen equaled in any film adaptation."

Auto Men Boost Fulton Theater Show

When "A Regular Feller" is produced at the Fulton today the auto dealers will combine with the Fulton management to make an automobile show of it. The theater lobby is crowded with automobile accessories and valuable gifts of this sort are to be given away from the stage each night by Ruth Renick and Norman Field.

"A Regular Feller" has to do with the adventures of a city chap who tours in a high-powered car through the country, and encounters some naval and humorous adventures.

Those who love the wit and the fun that are to be encountered in good rural plays will especially enjoy "A Regular Feller."

Tom Mix in 'Teeth' Is Feature at Fox

"Teeth," starring Tom Mix, heads the current program at the Fox-Oakland theater as the screen feature.

Assisted by "Tony," the wonder horse, and "Duke," the famous canine performer, Mix and cast present a story that abounds in thrills. There is a forest fire, a near lynching, fights galore and a charming romance in this latest thriller. As "Dave Deering," a desert prospector, Mix has an exciting role.

In addition, the program offers "The Race," one of the well-known and popular "Van Bibber" playlets; "Salt of the Earth," kinograms and the Fox-Oakland news magazine, in which are combined two of the leading news weeklies of the world.

Leon Belasco and his fifteen versatile artists present a well balanced musical program on the new bill. The new musical organization has proved popular with the patrons of the Fox-Oakland.

Wednesday, to run for three days only, a new program is to be offered at the Fox-Oakland, in which "The Masked Dancer," with Helene Chadwick and Lowell Sherman as the featured players, will be the main attraction together with comedy and novelty films and a concert directed by Strasnun.

'Ten Commandments' Opens Second Week

"The Ten Commandments," a motion picture combing ancient spectacle and modern drama, produced by Cecil B. De Mille from a story by Jeanie MacPherson, will open the second week of its engagement at the Oakland Lurie theater at the matinee this afternoon.

The making of the picture occupied ten months on various West coast locations and the services of more than 5000 persons.

De Mille's spectacular exordium picturizes the Exodus with a view of a "New Kingdom" of Pharaohs, the escape of the enslaved Children of Israel, and the work of Moses their deliverer in handing down the law and enforcing it against the orgiastic Golden Calf idolatry.

Theodore Roberts and Charles De Roche as Pharaoh, Estelle Taylor, James Neill, Lawson Butt, Julia Faye, and Clarence Burton assume the principal roles in the ancient story. The four leads in the modern story are played by Leatrice Joy, Rod La Rocque, Nita Naldi and Richard Dix, with Agnes Ayes in a short episode.

Garden of Weeds at American Theater

"The Garden of Weeds," Paramount's latest production, starring Betty Compson, is this week playing at the American theater. Miss Compson is again seen in a "miracle girl" role and is supported by a Paramount cast headed by Warner Baxter and Rockcliffe Fellows.

The picture is an adaptation from the play of the same name and has been transferred to the screen by James Cruze. Equipped with a knowledge of technical difficulties and an instinct for unusual camera angles Cruze adds a sure dramatic touch that has much of imagination in it.

On the same bill is presented Mack Sennett's latest comedy, "Cannonball Express," a news reel and a concert by Owen Sweeten and his orchestra.

Harold Lloyd in 'Hot Water' on T. & D. Bill

Lloyd's side-splitting comedy situations in this production are original, and not at all like anything he has done before.

The story opens with Harold as a care-free bachelor, immune to the wiles of cupid and very boastful about it. Soon his indomitable will is conquered by Jobyna Ralston, dreamy of eyes and inviting of lips. Events take their natural course and soon Harold is found trying to prove that two can live as cheaply as one. The bride's family occupy the young benedict's house and supply him with more grief than Noah had on the ark.

One of the most hilarious periods of the film comes when the proud hubby takes the family out riding and wrecks the town in an effort to satisfy their craving for trouble.

Fanchon and Marco are giving Oakland more high class vaudeville this week. Diero, master of the accordion; and Johnny Perkins, sob song artist, are the individual stars. Walt Roesner and the supersoloists are heard in concert numbers of both the jazz and semi-classic type.

Zane Grey Picture At Chimes Theater

Reginald Denny in Broadway Picture

Reginald Denny, sensational automobile racer in "Speeding Youth," persists in injecting thrills into his newest comedy, "The Reckless Age," which will be shown Sunday and Monday at the Broadway theater.

Denny does a little of everything he ever did before in an atmosphere of the laughs of Earl Derr Biggers' Saturday Evening Post story, "Love Insurance," from which the play was made.

The cast is good. Ruth Dwyer is charming as the heiress, and William Austin convincing as the perturbed nobleman.

The Broadway program for Sunday and Monday also includes a complete "Leather Pushers" story.

Century Theater to Offer Varied Bills

Carmel Myers, George Walsh and Bessie Love in "Slaves of Desire," Viola Dana in "The Five Dollar Baby" and Alberta Vaughan in another of H. C. Witwer's "Telephone Girl" series will open a two-day engagement at the Oakland Century theater this afternoon.

"Slaves of Desire" was adapted to the screen from the famous novel by Honore de Balzac entitled "The Magic Skin."

Viola Dana's latest comedy drama, "The Five Dollar Baby," is a screen play taken from the Saturday Evening Post tale by Irvin J. Cobb.

Alberta Vaughan is seen in the Witwer serial.

Coming to the theater on Tuesday and Wednesday is Matt Moore and Patsy Ruth Miller in "Fools in the Dark" and Florence Vidor in "Woman, Wake Up." The features on Thursday and Friday will be Charles Ray in the screen version of the George M. Cohan stage success, "The Tailor-Made Man," and a Hallroom Boys Comedy. Constance Talmadge comes to the theater on Saturday in "East Is West."

"Listen Lester" to Be Shown at State

"Listen, Lester," which will open a three-day engagement at the State theater today, is heralded as one of the fastest comedies produced in some time. It is adapted from the stage production of the same name.

The screen version is portrayed by an all-star cast which includes Eva Novak, Louise Fazenda, Harry Myers, George O'Hara, Lee Moran and Alec Francis.

Chic Sale Held on New Orpheum Bill

"Chic" Sale, character comedian, who has been a drawing card at the Oakland Orpheum for the past week, is to be held for a second week at the Orpheum on account of the demand for seats which the Orpheum has been unable to fill. For his second week Mr. Sale will give an entirely new series of characterizations entitled "The Sunday School Benefit."

In the new features for the week is the headline attraction of The Sherwoods and their orchestra.

An important place on the program is to be given the photoplay feature which marks the first Oakland showing of "The Price She Paid" from the novel of David Graham Phillips and which stars Alma Reubens and Frank Mayo.

Moore and Freed, phonograph artists, have a novel musical and comedy turn entitled "Spooning and Ballooning."

George Ford and Flo Cunningham bring a new laugh-fest entitled "Even as You and I."

A fast and interesting dancing production is offered by Babb-Syrell and Lorraine.

Achilles, modern prototype of the strong man of old, has as a partner one Newman, who is as funny as his hefty partner is strong.

Shutters Click On Film Form of Musical Hit

"Sally" has come to Hollywood. She has deserted Broadway and Flo Ziegfeld and the followers of musical comedy; left them flat, so to speak, and is making her debut upon the motion picture screen in the person of Colleen Moore, who is starred in the film version now being made from the Ziegfeld play of the same name by First National.

Actual shooting began last week in the United Studios under direction of Alfred E. Green. June Mathis has been chosen editor-in-chief and prepared the continuity.

Leon Errol will play his original role of the Duke of Checkergovina.

The star's leading man is Lloyd Hughes, who is cast as Blair Farquar, the youthful foster son of a multi-millionaire who brings the first touch of romance into the drab girlhood of Sally and later has much to do with aiding her to achieve stage fame.

Other roles have been assigned to Eva Novak, John T. Murray, Ray Hallor, Myrtle Stedman, Dan Mason, Carlo Schipa and Louise Baudet.

Second List of Forty Started For Paramount

Paramount's "famous forty" are now on the last lap of completion and the second "famous forty" are being started.

In the high-tide of production are four pictures in the first "famous forty." Herbert Brenon's "Peter Pan," Cecil B. DeMille's "The Golden Bed" "East of Suez," starring Pola Negri, and "Tomorrow's Love," starring Agnes Ayres.

The second "famous forty" is already away to a flying start. Included in this series is Betty Compson's "The New Lives For Old," which is being directed by Clarence Badger, a new director at the Paramount studio.

On the heels of this production is James Cruze's "The Goose Hangs High," which is being handled in typical Cruze style.

Being produced for release at the United Studio is "Sackcloth And Scarlet," taken from the novel by George Gibbs. The picture is being presented by Robert Kane and produced by Henry King.

Nearing completion are Alan Crosland's "Contraband," Zane Grey's "The Code of the West," which was directed by William K. Howard and Victor Fleming's "The Devil's Cargo."

Allan Dwan, Paramount producer, left for Europe last week to resume directing Gloria Swanson. While waiting for Miss Swanson to complete "Madame Sans-Gene" Dwan and his cameraman, Dick Rosson, will enjoy a short vacation. They are to make exterior scenes for Miss Swanson's next picture, "The Cost of Folly," in parts of France.

Joe Weber and Lew Fields to Enter Movies

Weber and Fields, the most famous of all stage comedians, will appear in a motion picture, featured by Belasco Productions, Inc., entitled "Friendly Enemies."

This is the information emanating from A. H. Sebastian and Edward Belasco, recently in Hollywood, but both San Franciscans.

"Friendly Enemies" is one of the big stage successes of recent years. It is ideally suited to the national holders of the comedy belt—Weber and Fields.

It will be an elaborate production, with a famous director, a powerful cast and all that is essential to real entertainment.

The picture will be released by Producers Distributing Corporation, which also released "Welcome Stranger," the first of the Belasco Productions' output.

To mention Weber and Fields is to have said the last word in comedy. For a score of years and more they have reigned supreme and lately in vaudeville have proved the possession of all their old time vim and talent. Their biographies recently published in a national weekly have won them many friends who never saw them on the stage. But they will see them on the screen early next year in "Friendly Enemies."

Work will start in about a month in one of the big Hollywood studios. Adam Hull Shirk, former newspaper man of this city and latterly with Famous Players-Lasky, is now publicity director for Belasco Productions.

Explorers Help

Three African explorers, men who have traveled the tropical wilds and have familiarized themselves with the habits of the various tribes, aided Director Gasnier in placing into action for B. P. Schulberg's Preferred Picture, "White Man," the highly spectacular dance of the Guas, considered the most picturesque and uncivilized in all Africa. This dance and the unusual sport of elephant hunting are but two of the highlights of "White Man." Director Gasnier has surrounded himself with a staff of technical men to insure perfection of detail in this screen version of George Agnew Chamberlain's novel in which Alice Joyce, Kenneth Harlan and Walter Long play the leading roles.

Author Gets Film Job

Ben de Casseres, the New York author recently engaged by Universal as an addition to its literary staff, has assumed his duties at Universal City. He will supervise Jewel production titling and will write the titles for "Eyes of Fools," the new Clarence Budington Kelland story Edward Luemmle directed with Alma Rubens and Percy Marmont.

Comedy Director Back

After a brief vacation in New York, Del Lord, Sennett comedy director, returned to the studio this week to start shooting on a new two-reeler. Lions will play an important part in the new comedy, which will feature Billy Bevan, Madeline Hurlock and Andy Clyde. Sunshine Hart and Louise Carver are also in the cast.

Oakland Actor Gains and Loses Fortune and Returns to Films

Born in Santa Clara, the career of Edwards Davis, screen character actor, reads like a romance of the movies. Horatio Alger would have titled his history: "From Pulpit to Pictures," or something f the sort.

Edwards Davis was educated in Oakland and San Francisco, and received his M. A. from Kentucky University. When young enough to be called "the boy preacher" he was called from the pastorate of First Christian Church at Mattoon, Ill., to the Central Church of Oakland, his old home town.

Invited to the Louden Temple pulpit, in Melbourne, he suddenly determined to become an actor. In January, 1900, he made his stage debut as the Viceroy in "The Cherry Pickers" at the Third Avenue Theater in New York. After a season he was engaged by Charles Coghlan and played the juvenile lead in "Citizen Pierre" and the leading support in "The Royal Box."

It was during this engagement that Davis wrote his first play, "The Seventh Commandment," produced by Robert Downing, with Davis in support. Later Davis starred in "A Man of the World" which he wrote, others following, and meanwhile he was featured by the Belasco management of the Alcazar Theater, San Francisco, for a tour of the Pacific Coast in "The Dairy Farm."

Davis was with the Orpheum road show under Martin Beck's management in which the actor played 1000 or more performances of "The Unmasking," a tabloid tragedy. Followed other sketches to be topped by "The Kingdom of Destiny" a rhymed drama. Twelve years on the Orpheum and Keith's—the big time—and all in sketches written or adapted by Davis himself. In nearly all his vaudeville experience Davis was associated with his wife, professionally known as Jule Power.

His most recent legitimate engagement was under David Belasco in "Daddies," playing a year in New York. He was three times made president of the Green Room Club of New York and was two years president of the National Vaudeville Artists of America.

Not until recently has Davis devoted his attention to pictures exclusively. He had played numerous important film roles while in the East and started this phase some ten years ago. Recently he again was seen in support of Norma Talmadge in "The Only Woman," playing a Hitan of Wall Street. This role seemed particularly apropos since, only recently when he retired from the profession, he entered the financial world, spectacularly pyramiding a fortune in "The Street" which through the vicissitudes of Fate went the way of many other fortunes when the market broke.

Now Davis is coming back via his old profession, and acting for the screen he finds himself once more in constant demand by the big companies. His latest completed film is "Contraband," in support of Lois Wilson.

Gish Girls Brought Together Again By New Screen Contract

Lillian Gish, through her contract with Charles H. Duell, Jr., now becomes an exclusive Metro-Goldwyn player. She will be starred in a series of special productions, according to the announcement just made by Nicholas M. Schenck, vice president of Metro-Goldwyn. The deal is regarded as one of the most important that has occurred in the film business this year. It not only marks the first independent production of Charles H. Duell, Jr., but it sets at rest endless rumors regarding the future affiliations of Miss Gish.

As the star of "The White Sister," and "Romola," shortly to be released, she has been spoken of for several famous roles, and her services have been sought after by every American company and several foreign producers. "Romola," is a Henry King production, directed by him at Florence, Italy, and was over a year in the making

The new arrangement follows almost directly on the deal closed several weeks ago between Duell for Inspiration Pictures and Metro-Goldwyn for the distribution of "Romola." The screen version of George Eliot's novel brings the Gish sisters together again, as Dorothy Gish is featured in the production with Lillian, who is starred.

Miss Gish's new series of productions will be made on a scale comparable with the greatest successes of her career. To this end Miss Gish will be given, according to Duell's announcement, every advantage in stories, casts, directors, and details of productions.

Peters' New Film

Work has started at Universal on the scenarizing of House Peters' next starring vehicle, "The Love Cargo," adapted from A. M. Sinclair's famous novel, "Head Winds." E. T. Lowe, Jr., is making the adaptation. This is the third of six pictures in which Peters will be starred under his present contract with Universal. His first was "The Tornado," and the second "Raffles," which has just been completed. King Baggot directed both pictures, but it has not been decided who will direct the third.

Photography has been completed at Universal City on "Find the Man," starring Jack Hoxie, and directed by Edward Sedwick. This is the first picture Sedgwick has directed with Hoxie.

Gibson Unit Busy

The Hoot Gibson unit of Universal Western productions is at Kings City working on "The Taming of the West," under direction of Arthur Rosson. Marceline Day, Albert J. Smith, Francis Ford, Herbert Prior, Edwin Booth Tilton, Morgan Brown, Louise Hippo, George Grandee, Lola Todd and Frona Hale are in the supporting cast.

After watching the successful start of his first starring picture for Paramount, "Manhattan," at the Rivoli Theater, New York, Richard Dix left for California for a business trip which will last about two weeks. When he returns he will begin work on "The Maker of Gestures," under the direction of Paul Sloane at the East Coast studio.

Hospital Ward In Belgium Is Named for Star

An unusual honor was conferred on Gloria Swanson by the Belgian government when a ward in the post-war hospital, Woluwe Saint Pierre, was named after her.

Colonel Drousie, commandant of the hospital, notified Miss Swanson of the honor which was given in appreciation of the time which Miss Swanson gave to the hospital during her recent visit to Brussels. Colonel Drousie wrote:

"My dear Miss Swanson, I will never be able to tell the impression your visit made on all our invalids, the greater part victims of the war. Like all the Belgians they have admired and applauded you in your films, but the time you gave up to them so deeply touched them, they will always keep an everlasting souvenir of your visit. They ask me to tell you how grateful they are for all your kindness and generosity."

In rememberance of your visit one of the pavilions of the hospital will be named after you. In the name of all our wounded, accept our sincerest thanks."

Miss Swanson's signature follows that of the Queens of Italy and Belgium on the "Gold Book" of the hospital. The star has now returned to Paris from Compeigne, where some of the exterior scenes for the picture, "Madame Sans-Gene," were made.

It would be immodest of me if I mentioned I was the birdie who through this column originally whispered into the ear of a producer that Adolphe Menjo ought to be given a chance. So I shall say nothing about it.

SCISSORS RECOMMENDED AS POSSIBLE HELP.

In the regular weekly round of new films, "K—the Unknown," taken from Miss Rinehart's novel, was seen. This is a laborious, occasionally bright and well acted picture. It is laborious because it is at least thirty minutes too long in showing itself and it embraces so many different and varied counterplots, phantom plots and minor plots as it proceeds on its way that the average spectator, much as he may admire the work of its principals, wilts in his chair and thinks of going to sleep.

Miss Virginia Valli is a pretty and a gifted actress. She was extremely effective in "The Signal Tower." She does well enough as the small town nurse in "K—the Unknown." But the mass of things and persons surrounding her load her down and all but bury her with trivialities and unimportant goings on. Scissors, and plenty of them, are urged in this particular case.

GIRL UPSETS ETERNAL FITNESS BY THRUST.

In "The Siren of Seville," a bull fight was featured. It was very well pictured, I learn. But at the crucial moment, at the precise instant in which the enraged animal is charging upon its hepless victim, a girl leaps into the ring and gives it the deft and mortal thrust. Damn clever, these Spanish.

very successfully out of mind in twenty years. But "Silence" moved along much too rapidly for me to engage in any such speculations.

I was harried when Jim Warren, the grafter, gave himself up to the police and confessed that he had fired the shot although he had not. A considerable factor in carrying conviction is the acting of H. B. Warner. From the days when he sandpapered his fingers in "Jimmy Valentine" down to the present he has developed a superb technique for playing the criminal with the heart of gold. His method is gloriously economical. He wastes nothing of voice and of gesture. And he himself believes in these theatrical figures literally. He does not patronize a melodrama but accepts it as gospel and preaches it with all the intensity of one of the true faith.

And it is an excellent company throughout which has been gathered for "Silence." There is an amazing performance by a man named John Wray, who is, I believe, almost brand new to Broadway. He plays a crook whose heart is not pure gold inside and in an episode in which he becomes furiously angry he gives a tingling simulation of a man blazing with ratlike fury.

But none of this really explains why I was so enormously smitten with "Silence." The most accurate report I can make is to say simply "I liked it."

Robert W. Service Novel, "The Roughneck," Recorded in Films

The screen version of Robert W. Service's best seller "The Roughneck," which was completed at the Fox West Coast Studios under the working title of "Thorns of Passion" will be released with the original book title. The decision was reached in view of the success of the novel.

"The Roughneck" is a tale of action, adventure and romance, that sweeps the chief characters from the waterfront of San Francisco to the South Sea Islands The novel received an ovation from all literary critics when it was first published and was hailed as a worthy successor to Service's songs of Alaska and his poems of the fighting in France, which are known wherever the English language is spoken.

George O'Brien, who is featured in "The Iron Horse" "The Man Who Came Back" and "The Painted Lady," is starred in this picture. "The Man Who Came Back" is an outstanding photoplay success, but "The Roughneck" is expected to exceed it in dramatic value

Billie Dove is cast in the leading feminine role as Felicity Arden, the girl who falls in love with O'Brien when he is an outcast in the South Seas and brings him back to his home and happiness. In his role of "Jerry Delany," O'Brien has a fight with a pugilist on the San Francisco docks, stows away aboard a Pacific steamer, battles for his life with sharks and finally becomes a beach-comber in the South Seas.

The other principals in the cast include Harry T. Morey, Cleo Madison, Charles A. Sellon, Anne Cornwall, Harvey Clark, Maryon Aye. The story was adapted for the screen by Charles Kenyon.

Fishing Village Planned For Film Play Starring Nazimova

Edwin Carewe has engaged Alla Nazimova to star in "My Son," his film version of a current New York stage play. Ian Keith will appear opposite the Russian actress and Buster Collier will play the name role. Production will be launched December 1. A fishing village is being constructed near San Francisco where the picture will be filmed.

Following "My Son," Carewe plans to photograph five stories for First National Pictures in as many countries. The first will be an English story and made in London. France, Russia, Germany and Spain will later furnish atmospheric backgrounds for photo-dramas. American actors will be used in Carewe's foreign pictures.

A previous announcement stated that Carewe would film Philip Gibb's English novel "Heirs Apparent," but First National officials decided that "My Son" offered greater opportunities for the director's flair for realistic simple life.

Carewe brought Nazimova back to the screen six months ago in "Madonna of the Streets" in which she co-featured with Milton Sills. The success of the picture proving that she has retained her popularity, "My Son" will see her as a star—the position she seems to have held securely since her triumph in "Revelation" more than six years ago.

Public Opinion Will Insure Healthy Plays, Sennett Says

The drama of suggestiveness and innuendo, just now at the height of popularity hasn't a long life to live, according to the belief of Mack Sennett, the comedy producer.

"Many of these dramas made with a wink and a shrug," said Sennett. "are based on a misunderstanding of American life and American opinion. In large degree they are made by men of great ability and genius who have come here from Europe without a fair chance of knowing where the heart of America is located.

"They will discover that the big cities are not the test of American opinion.

The real acid test of what America thinks—the real gauge of our prejudices—is in the small towns.

A great national advertising agency, in feeling out public opinion, regards Des Moines, Iowa, as the sample of what America thinks. Personally I should say a smaller city or town would be a more accurate criterion.

"This is particularly true in regards to the prosperity of a suggestive or risque play.

"People in small towns are ruled by public opinion. In a large city you do what you choose. In a small town you do what public opinion tells you that you ought to choose. The son of old man Moneybags, the village banker, can't afford to be seen taking his best girl to a play which is "off color." He would be talked about in every tea party in town.

Official censorship by appointed boards of review has been called unconstitutional, un-American and a lot of other things. It is quite likely that this is true. The main objection to censorship in my opinion, however, is that it is impractical. No board of officials can be selected to tell folks what they ought to think. Leave them alone and they will do the thinking.

"Take it by and large, the public opinion of any American community is sound and right—where it has a chance to function. And it functions to the limit in the little town."

Star Embarrassed When Her Dress Gets Too Near Heater

The scene called for Miss Ray to rush into a living room drenched to the skin, apparently to protect herself from the storm outside. The star stood under a shower for a few moments and then enacted the scene. Seitz discovered before the action was completed that one of the lights was not adjusted properly to secure the correct effects of the rain outside. The scene must be made over.

"You'll have to change and dry those clothes," he said.

Miss Ray smiled and retired to her portable dressing room on the stage, which was equipped with a large electric heater. She hung the dress near the stove and donned another while waiting for it to dry.

During the delay Seitz decided to shoot another scene. After this was over Miss Ray went back to change into the rain storm garments. But—

Upon entering the dressing room she was greeted with the odor of burning cloth. The dress was burning! She rushed hastily out to Seitz.

"Oh, we—we can't shoot that rain scene," she exclaimed.

"Why?" questioned Seitz.

"Well, you see, it's just this way," she stammered. "I left the dress too near the heater—and, well, I don't think the censors will let me wear it now."

Holds Record

Rupert Julian holds the year's record at Universal City for the number of assistants engaged in a single production. In the big crowd scenes of "The Phantom of the Opera," which Julian is directing every assistant director at liberty was assigned him, in addition to his regular staff. While the crowd scenes of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" were being filmed ten assistant directors were employed.

Davis Novel on List

Another addition to the White List is Elmer Davis' novel, "I'll Show You the Town." Eric Kenton, who was director of Jack Dempsey's "Fight and Win" series, will direct, and Tom Geraghty has already prepared the continuity. Reginald Denny is the star.

"Declasse" Star Goes East For New Wardrobe

Chief among the productions on the schedule of United Studios this fall, is Corinne Griffith's "Declasse." Work on this picture will begin December 1 and all available space in the big United plant is being reserved for the sets required.

Miss Griffith, just having returned from New York, is taking advantage of the few weeks lapse in production by consulting with her dressmaker and designers. Her wardrobe will be the latest word in fashion

Robert Vignola, who will direct the picture, is spending considerable time with the continuity writers and expects to have his script in shape on scheduled time.

"Wilderness," Miss Griffith's last production, is now out of the cutting rooms and en route to First National Pictures' offices in New York. First National will distribute the Corinne Griffith pictures, a new distribution arrangement having been entered into between that organization and Asher last month.

Married Life Is Big Theme of Cinema Drama

"Mock Marriages," a compelling story of modern married life, is to be the second of a series of four motion pictures produced by C. Gardner Sullivan Productions at Culver City.

The first of the series, "Cheap Kisses," is ready for release this month. "Mock Marriages" will go into production early in December.

For his second production Sullivan has written a dramatic story of modern married life, with mah jongg parties, bridge fiestas, roadhouse escapades and other colorful incidents of the present-day social activities predominating.

The heroine is a temperamental fortune teller who is attracted to the stolid, easy-going husband of a jazz wife. The complications that ensue are the result of this strange friendship, together with the wife's inclinations to enjoy the company of young men of the "lounge lizzard" type, give a plot of unusual twists and interest-holding situations.

Book Reviews and Literary Notes

Novels

Five of the Latest Additions to the Christmas List Are Given Brief Review; Are Suited to Varied Tastes.

The Christmas shelf is full of worth-while novels promising acceptable gifts and an easy solution to the problem and pleasure of giving. Because of the number, these reviews are condensed and can do little more than offer an indication of the suitability of the volumes to the individuals in mind. There is a book for each reader in the productions of the fall. The one sought may be in the group here mentioned, but if not, it is somewhere on the shelves or tables.

"Laura," by Ethel Sidgwick, is a surprising and admonitory book. It warns against the unrestricted imagination and against conceding too much to the one who is "different." Laura, daughter of a writer, is possessed of a romantic turn of mind. She invents a hero for herself to astonish and confound her companions, is a leader and a source of mystery. What to do with Laura becomes a perplexing question and Laura, with her mind running riot, drives others to distraction, embarrassment, and even death. The writer is so skillful and graceful that the book will take a firm hold on all readers and, in particular, upon those who, like Laura, have lively imaginations.

It is a welcome and reminiscent sight, to see a new book out bearing the loved name of Thomas Nelson Page. "The Red Riders" was all but finished when this writer died. The notes were complete and a brother, Rosewell Page, finished the task, doing no more than completing the last few pages. The Old South has had no better advocate than Page and this book has its scene on a plantation in South Carolina. The hero is too young to serve in the Confederate army, but not too young to serve with the home guard against Sherman. There is an effective interview with Abraham Lincoln and some stirring and colorful scenes. Here is a book by a writer who was well beloved and one which comes like a legacy from the past.

Alfred Noyes is revealed as a short story writer of first magnitude in his "The Hidden Player." The name comes from the Kipling simile, comparing life to a game of chess with a powerful unseen opponent. The stories are varied, some humorous, some exciting, and others mystifying, but each is brought to a dramatic conclusion. Lovers of the short story will appreciate this volume for it bears the stamp of good writing and well executed plots.

("The Hidden Player," by Alfred Noyes: New York, Frederick A. Stokes & Co., $2.

Ian Irons is a new writer and one who will bear watching. In "Simples" he has written a character story of delightful humor, a quixotic fanciful tale of a family of Kents and Alban who was never practical and always, in the opinion of the others, wrong. The family, including the scapegrace, kept bearing down on Alban, who could not tolerate wrong and the manner of the bearing down and the squelching of the man makes the theme of the story. There are sentiment, vivacity, and fun in the book and, above all, an engaging manner.

("Simples" by Ian Irons: New York, Thomas Seltzer, $2.)

The gift of satire and the sense of humor are possessions of Richard Pryce, who has written a noteworthy novel in "Romance and Jane Weston." The heroine comes out of the scullery of the Welsh inns for the crowded life of London and her adventures are related with an insight and appreciation of the possibilities. The reader of Pryce's other books will recall his ability to portray feminine characters and his strength in making his personages reveal themselves by their words and actions. He will vote this book the best of the Pryce list.

("Romance and Jane Weston," by Richard Pryce: Boston, Houghton, Mifflin Co., $2.)

George Agnew Chamberlain's wandering life is reflected in his facts in the course of its tale of the birth, growth and development of one of the most famous books by scenes laid in Brazil Africa, Mexico, and different sections of the United States. Besides traveling all over the globe, he has lived in the following cities in Brazil: Bahia, Sao Paulo and Pernambuca; in Lourenco Marques, Portugese East Africa; in Mexico City; in Santa Barbara, California, Brooklyn, and New York City. Two years ago, he took up his residence in Bridgeton, New Jersey, with his widowed mother, and there he acquired the intimate knowledge of the background for his latest novel, "The Lantern on the Plow" just published by Harpers.

ARTHUR TRAIN in his study, below the portrait of Mr. Tutt, immortal Yankee lawyer of his legal stories. Mr. Train, according to the current idea, has again drawn from life, in his latest novel, "The Needle's Eye." A composite of the literary criticism of the book discloses conjecture regarding the identity of almost every character as a living person prominent in social or professional life.

"Miss Pilgrim's Progress"

There are many stories of girls who fight the world, beautiful girls who determine to win position with their brains and who learn that their looks are a handicap. Some of those stories are cheap, some merely sensational, but the one which Concordia Merrel has written is a fine tale because it does not use all of the frayed and worn-out situations.

Hetty Carol is such a girl as the reader may know. She has a sincere desire to do right and good and with this desire throws her slender strength into the game of making a living and a reputation. Of her experiences, those which she seeks and those which are thrust upon her, the book is concerned. A girl's life in a large and bewildering city, her triumphs and defeats, her confidences, and her hopes are described and pictured by a woman who understands her sisters.

There is, of course, a love story—maybe two. Hetty wins, loses then—but that is the secret. It may be said the writer sounds the depths reveals her character convincingly, and presents a story which will be appreciated in particular by women readers.

("Miss Pilgrim's Progress," by Concordia Merrell: New York, Thomas Seltzer, $2.)

"The Land of Youth"

The best time to go to "The Land of Youth" is on All-Hallows and the conveyance is that which comes to mind. James Stephens is a worthy conductor for he has written a story of how Nera won the king's gold-hilted sword and followed the men of the Shi into that land where every person sees what he is able to wish for." Then there is the story of Etain, the beautiful wife of Midir, a Lord of the Shi, who was stolen away by her husband's pupil, Angus, pursued by the Druid Besel, and transformed into an insect. Again, she was born as a daughter to the Lord Etar and married to King Eachaid only to be won back again in a game of chess by Midir, who carried her off into the land of Faery.

Fancy and whimsy, high romance, brave deeds and surpassingly beautiful women, these are of the Land of Youth. The stories are fairy tales for grownups, extravagances well done. They carry spells and magic.

"The Slave Ship"

One expecting to find the thrill and swashbuckling that made "To Have and To Hold" one of the ten best sellers of its day will find "The Slave Ship" a disappointment. There is little of adventure in Mary Johnston's latest novel and small excitement.

The story deals with those years following Culloden, in which the Scotch hero fought on the wrong side and finds himself in prison as the tale opens, in which the slave trade was at its height and not yet become opprobrious. David Scott, through whom it is told, is sold to slavery in Virginia by his political masters. There, through long days spent in company with chattel blacks, he sees slavery from their viewpoint and later, when he escapes and takes passage on the "Janet," a slave ship captained by an accidentally discovered cousin, he carries with him the obsession against slavery. Years at the trade abroad the "Janet" fail to more than temporarily lull his Scotch conscience until finally he quits the sea and by what readers of these modern times will reckon "boneheadedness" thrusts himself upon the notice of his former slave master in Virginia and is again taken in bondage.

For a picture it gives of the slave trade "The Slave Ship" has scant excuse for print. Others have portrayed the evils more vividly and convincingly.

"The Slave Ship" is well done, of course. So practiced a writer could scarcely be expected to do otherwise. Its characters are sharply portrayed for the reader's imagination.

("The Slave Ship," by Mary Johnston: Boston, Little Brown & Co., $2.)

"Child Labor and Social Conscience"

Child labor dealt with as one of the foulest blots on the national escutcheon, treated directly and in the words of the poets and authorities, this in "Child Labor and the Social Conscience," by Davis Wasgatt Clark. In this little volume will be found arguments and instances, quotations and pictures of leaders in the fight.

("Child Labor and the Social Conscience," by Davis Wasgatt Clark: New York, The Abingdon Press, $1.)

Train Booklet For Those Who Read Him

A booklet on "Arthur Train, Man of Letters and Man of Laws," is published by Charles Scribner's Sons for free distribution. It is by Dorothea Lawrance Mann and, in a brief treatment, covers the author's life and works.

W. E. Woodward, whose latest satirical novel, "Lottery," has just been published by Harpers, will sail with Mrs. Woodward for France, on December 6, for a stay of several years. Woodward plans to do some writing there, undisturbed.

Morris

"Keeping the Peace" Not Designed to Win California Writer Favor With Feminine Audience; Is, Yet, a notable Novel.

"Keeping the Peace" is not destined to make Gouverneur Morris popular with his feminine audience. It is a severe arraignment, too severe, some will say, of woman of the present day. Into the mouths of his characters the author has put sentiments that will be vigorously contradicted, if nothing else. And yet, with all of it, the novel is a notable one, of a high order of craftsmanship and interesting to "Finis."

"Every trouble I've run across in this world or heard tell about has had a woman at the bottom of it." It is John Eaton talking, the eldest son of the minister who asserted his independence of a "horse-faced" mother and ran away to sea. "It's always either what the world calls a bad woman, or else it is what the world calls a good woman."

And then the minister himself:

"In my experience there is nothing that the average woman won't stoop to in order to get her own way. She usually gets it, and usually it is of no especial benefit to herself or anybody concerned."

It is this same man of the cloth who advises Edward, the youngest son, to lie to his mother when the youngsters discovers that the truth is not believed. Anything, he argues, to keep the peace. With Edward the book is mostly concerned. He is a young man of talent amounting to genius. Interference by women with the development of that genius—even from the start by his mother—forms the basis for the story.

("Keeping the Peace," by Gouverneur Morris: New York, Chas. Scribner's Sons, $2.)

"Bed Rock," Story of Unusual Turn

"Bed Rock," by Jack Bethea, is a usual story with an unusual turn. In it Warren Blackford as the mine superintendent, overcomes the usual difficulties with which a novelist can surround the strong, virile personality seeking achievement. There is defiance of constituted authority, strikes, moonshiners and other mountaineers, the superintendent suffers an injury which the doctors say will cripple him for life but which you know will be cured before the end of the book by a delicate operation, and there is a love interest, of course.

But it is the love story woven through the book that is unusual and that to a large degree sustains interest in it. Blackford, accused by his father-in-law of having married for position, is browbeaten into admitting it in the hearing of his bride of a week. To avoid scandal she refuses to leave him and together they go to the coal mining town in Alabama where she punishes him in a rather catty manner by making him love her and then ridiculing him. Father-in-law, to break him and discredit him to his wife, connives at strikes and other devilry quite possible in a mining town.

Those who have the time and inclination for fiction and do not demand too much of style or artistry will find Bed Rock entertaining. In description of coal mines, mining towns and customs it carries a certain information to the reader.

("Bed Rock," by Jack Bethea: Boston, Houghton, Mifflin Company, $2.00.)

"Impressions of Great Naturalists," Osborn

Henry Fairfield Osborne of Columbia University has written a book which will be warmly received. His "Impressions of Great Naturalists" is filled with facts, anecdote, and new lights on such men as Wallace, Darwin, Baltour, Pasteur, Leidy, Cope, Muir, Burroughs, Roosevelt, Bryce and Butler. Osborne has written many works on anthropology, evolution and other subjects and has a wide circle of readers who will welcome him in this new field of service. The chapters avoid the pedantic style. They do not recite data and events in schoolbook manner. Instead the reader is given the pictures of the men, the significance of their works, and the touches which reveal character.

Anne Douglas Sedgwick, whose novel, "The Little French Girl," was brought out a month ago by Houghton Mifflin Company, won her reputation as a writer through the portrayal of such characters as Tante, Adrienne Toner and others whom many people considered disagreeable. Perhaps the extraordinary success of "The Little French Girl," which has already reached its fifty-eighth thousand, is due to the fact that the heroine, Aly, has an utterly charming and fascinating character.

The "The Little French Girl," by Anne Douglas Sedgwick, which Houghton Mifflin Company published recently, has been selling a little short of two thousand copies a day. The prediction of publisher and critics that the book would take its place as one of the leading novels of the year seems to be justified in the fact that the sixth printing, making 85,000 has been ordered within six weeks of publication.

Cabell

"Old Fellow Who Wrote Jurgen" Writes of Himself and Others in "Straws and Prayer-Books." Sets Forth His Theory of Writing.

At least it may be said for those critics whom James Branch Cabell despises, they have penetrated his armor. The disdainful artist has felt called upon to reveal his theories; he tells why he writes as he does and, at times, comes near to assuming the defensive attitude.

"I, who was but four years ago a dangerous revolutionary upstart," he says, "begin, even among editors and publishers, to be treated with something of the gingerly respect with which one handles antique glassware of a veteran of the War Between the States. Among the really 'vital' writers, still in the strenuous practice of their lack of art, 'th old fellow who wrote Jurgen' is relagated at best to the Middle, or as they call it, the Muddle generation in American letters, and I am become a relic vaguely associated with bicycles and hansomcabs and cigar-store Indians and cast-iron deer and other coeval items of extinct Americans."

"The old fellow who wrote Jurgen" does not like to be called that. And he is not content to be relegated to the past, if, indeed, he believes his vogue is passing. In "Straws and Prayer Books" he writes for the first time of himself and of other writers, and relieves the task of what may, to him, be monotony by including some fantastic yarns done in a way that is his alone. "The Thin Queen of Elfhame" occupying a chapter is a Cabell gem, polished on all its facets and throwing out tinted rays.

Of the "virile" writers Cabell is scornful. For the fanciful Donn Byrne he has nothing but praise. There is a chapter on George Moore which is one of the finest essays in critical literature. Always Cabell is Cabell, taking no man's word but his own, and writing for the sake of the writing. Thus, he says:

"Whenever people had unfavorably criticised my writing—I now perceived—my first emotion had been, always, surprise at their imagining. I had especially tried to give pleasure to them. I had, instead, for nearly a quarter of a century, been trying to divert myself. That might or might not be the correct principle upon which to write novels; it was most certainly a principle to which I was committed in any justifying in the form and scope of the biography.

"So I tapped out upon my typewriter, first of all, as a self-obvious axiom 'the literary artist labors primarily to divert himself.'"

There will be some surprise in this classification on a later page.

"Some Tale-tellers find themselves most readily bedrugged by yearning toward loveliness unknown and unobtainable: These are, we say, our romanticists. To them are technically opposed such Polly-annas among fiction writers as Mr. Theodore Dresser and Mr. Sinclair Lewis, who can derive a species of obscure aesthetic comfort from considering persons even less pleasantly situated than themselves—somewhat as a cabin passenger on a sinking ship might consider the poor devils in the steerage—and so turn rhyparographer, and write 'realism'."

This may suggest the content of the book. It is Cabell who is not the old fellow who wrote Jurgen but the hero unbending and a little defiant. He does not admit an apology, nor does he seek a compromise—but he does explain. Doing so, he sets forth with all of his artistry the theory of writing for one's own pleasure.

("Straws and Prayer Books," by James Branch Cabell: New York, Robert M. McBride & Co., $2.50.)

A. A. Milne's new book, "When We Were Very Young," is ready for immediate publication by E. P. Dutton & Co. It is a charming collection of child-verses in which Milne has given free play to that ingenious imagination, delicate fancy and light-footed humor for which he is famous. The little volume, which is delightfully illustrated by the English artist, Shepard, will take its place in the front rank of that small company of verse for and about children which is equally charming to the youngsters and their elders. And it shows Milne's many-sided talent in still another phase, although it has already proved itself entertaining and deft in drama, fiction and essay.

Miss Nora A. Smith, sister of the late Kate Douglas Wiggin, author of "Children of the Lighthouse," published by Houghton Mifflin Company, has left Quilicote, the old home in Hollis, Maine, for the season. She will be in Portland for some time, where she will be busy in connection with "Children's Week" and an exhibition of her sister's books, and plans to spend the remainder of the winter in New York.

Nomadic Navajos

If a cliff dweller in our congested cities were told that there were hundreds of square miles in the United States which have never been entered by a white man, he would be incredulous, lands where not even an Indian can live and few animals. This little-known country is situated east of the Colorado river with the boundary line between Arizona and Utah crossing it like an equator. Navajo mountain, an isolated giant monolith, 10,400 feet high, is its hub, the Rainbow Bridge, its jewelled center. Rainbow Bridge is a graceful natural arch, so high that the Capitol at Washington could be easily placed under it. Beautiful from whatever angle it is viewed, it rises from among vivid rocks, delicate wild orchids, yucca and exquisite cacti. Charles L. Bernheimer has visited Rainbow Bridge and explored the surrounding "Bad Lands" with a pack train each year since 1921. The trips have been full of hazards, lost trails, trails to be blasted, treacherous climbs, unforeseen accidents and countless inconveniences which but served to develop the ingenuity of the explorers. The oatmeal poultice that was used instead of linseed when one of the party stumbled into quicksand and developed blood poisoning in extricating himself and the black stocking that affected a time exposure when the shutter of a Kodak refused to work are but two of the expedients that Bernheimer tells about in his account of these explorations, "Rainbow Bridge" (Doubleday, Page & Company).

Bernheimer found the nomadic Navajo Indians who roamed about Rainbow Bridge country a colorful tribe, governed by age-old legends and superstitions. On the 1922 expedition one of the Indians in the party saddled a mule to ride a short distance. He failed to use a tail strap or take the precaution of tightening the front strap holding the mule in place, a measure always necessary as mules are built wedge-shape, the front part of their bodies being narrower than their rear. On a sharp decline the saddle slipped forward, throwing the Indian's weight on the mule's neck. The mule, as mules do, kicked and threw his rider. The Indian was brought back to camp with ankle and wrist badly swollen and a large black spot on his back. He was treated with compresses and left on a cot. A little later, the men discovered him completely covered with a messy sauce. Left alone, he had crawled into a bush of poisonous jimson weed, dug it out, masticated it into pulp and then applied it to his bruises. He was a filthy-looking object, but contented in the belief that he was affecting a certain cure.

At another time a huge Navajo stalked into the house of Bernheimer's guide. He stood silently before the company for a few moments, then began to converse with the hostess in the soft, melodious Navajo tongue of slow, measured cadence. She left the room, but soon returned with a woolen blanket, a leather moccasin and a wooden arrow. With his knife, the Indian severed a strand from the blanket, a fringe from the moccasin and a chip of wood from the arrow, then without a single word of thanks or leave-taking he strode from the room.

The hostess explained, that the Indian was a Medicine Man who was seeking a cure for a squaw of his tribe. He had been in quest of some objects of Piute origin as the stricken woman was of that tribe. With the bit of wool, which he had taken from the blanket, the moccasin fringe and the chip of wood, he planned to compound a medicine to cure his patient of fatal tuberculosis.

The "sweat houses" of the Navajos were a common sight on the trails, some of them built neatly in the sides of canyons. A small, square-topped entrance leads into a low-ceilinged chamber about six or eight feet square. The Indian places within it heated stones and sometimes jars filled with steaming water and closes the entrance with a blanket. In this heated place he remains for hours at a time to emerge at last with a bleached skin. It is his equivalent for a Turkish bath.

The Navajo offers a stringent, but withal humorous, solution of the mother-in-law problem. He minimizes the danger of her making domestic trouble by proclaiming through his leaders and his medicine men, that, if she would preserve the eyesight of her daughter's husband, she must never visit the new home except in the absence of the son-in-law.

SECOND POETRY AWARD

The editors of The Stratford Monthly announce that the $100 prize for the best poem published by them during the months of July, August and September has been divided between Miriam Pomeroy, author of "Lilith" (July) and Keene Wallis, author of "Bughouse Square" (September).

The next quarterly poetry prize of $100 will be awarded by the editors of The Stratford Monthly in January. There is no limitation of space or theme.

Manuscripts should be addressed to The Stratford Monthly, 231 Boylston street, Boston, Mass.

Elsie Singmaster, when asked if there was any basis of fact in her latest story, "A Boy at Gettysburg" (Houghton Mifflin Company), wrote "Yes, it is founded on the actual experience of a resident at Gettysburg, who lived near the old mill and who, at the age of 15, was the chief agent in assisting the slaves over the border. I passed the ruins many times without knowing their history. When I learned that the boy was still living I went to see him. He was over 80 years old and remembered all the experiences of his youth not only at the mill but afterwards in the army. He has died since, however."

A book said to be very learned and also very readable which is promised for early publication by E. P. Dutton & Co. is "The History of the Temple, London," by J. Bruce Williamson. It is an authoritative work, as the author has compiled it from the original records, and it tells the history of this famous institution from the date of the beginnings of the Order of the Knights of the Temple in 1118 to the close of the Stuart period. The narrative is said to present many quaint, human and interesting episodes, events and of London institutions.

Drama

"Conversations on Contemporary Drama," by Clayton Hamilton, and "Mary Rose," the Last Play by Barrie, Make Appearance.

"Here is a book that was not written at a desk, but improvised upon a lecture platform in the presence of an audience. It is a stenographic record of a series of informal lectures delivered in Earl Hall, at Columbia University, on nine successive Monday mornings, from February 11 to April 7, 1924."

Thus does Clayton Hamilton explain "Conversations on Contemporary Drama."

The volume is a valuable addition to a rapidly growing library of works on the drama. Discussions of contemporary playwright—Barrie, Shaw, Galsworthy, Pirandello, Maeterlinck and O'Neill among others—and estimates of some plays of recent seasons are full of stimulus to thought and argument.

The author doubts whether we have an American drama in the sense in which the phrase is used when we speak of the French, the Norwegian, the British or the Irish drama. But he admits that this land is in the midst of a wonderful period in dramatic creation."

("Conversations on Contemporary Drama" by Clayton Hamilton: New York, The MacMillan Co., $2.)

"Mary Rose" comes to gladden the hearts of Barrie enthusiasts, a volume of the last play by a dramatist destined to live in the archives of memory as long as whimsy and full-flavored splendor have a place among material things.

Barrie, the Kreisler among the authors, has strung another Strad with "Mary Rose." It is more a strain of music than a mingling of words and phrases; more a haunting melody than a thing to be told on the stage or read before a fire.

("Mary Rose," by J. M. Barrie: New York, Charles Scribner's Sons, $1.)

Marie Zakrzewska's Life Story Is Told

Marie E. Zakrzewska had a name hard to pronounce but it is remembered by women physicians the country over. Coming to America at the age of twenty-four and just before the Civil War she fought the fight for the recognition of women in medicine. In those days the idea of a "lady doctor" was revolutionary. This girl and woman gave her life to the cause of altering the standards and her record is one of a forceful personality conquering heavy odds.

"A woman's Quest" is the story of the life of the Polish-German girl who went to a strange country and made her way in her chosen field. She taught German to earn her way, did many other tasks, and her triumphs included the making of friends in the literary and professional circles.

The book is a human document of remarkable qualities.

("A Woman's Quest," Life of Marie Zakrzewska, edited by Agnes C. Vietor: New York, D. Appleton & Co., $3)

"The Week-End Book" Will Solve Problems

"The Week-End Book" is what it is called, a sociable anthology. In it one may find a delightful selection of poems, songs, games and recipes, inspiration for quiet half-hour readings, for amusing recitations, or for group singing around the piano. The songs are of the old, quaint, and unusual sort, and the recipes are of the tried and relished kind.

The house provided with this volume will have handy a constant inspiration for fun or illumination. The book will save situations, remove wrinkles from hostesses, and speed the lagging hours. Moreover, it has, in the back, space for addition of verse, songs, or—anything.

Post Folk Hold Tea-Dance At Officers' Club

PRESIDIO, MONTEREY, Nov. 30.—Post society enjoyed a tea-dance at the Officers' club here last night, which was one of the gay events of the month. During the evening, returns of the Army-Navy football game were received over the radio.

Later in the evening officers of the post who are West Point graduates went to Del Monte for a "West Point dinner."

Another interesting affair of the week was the "Farmers' Dance" given on Thanksgiving eve at the Officers' club. Guests came in costume, and preceding the informal affair there were a number of dinners.

Captain and Mrs. Rohland A. Isker were hosts to a party of twenty-six. The guests were seated at one large table in the dining room, which had been arranged to represent a farmhouse kitchen. The centerpiece was a huge pumpkin, filled with fruit and surrounded by leaves in all the autumn tints. Present were: Colonel Herbert J. Brees, Majors and Mesdames James Babauch and Charles B. Hazeltine; Captains and Mesdames Norman E. Waldron, Francis Gustites, Raymond Gibbs, Jesse Derrick, James Adamson, William Siefert and Mrs. George Gillis; Lieutenants and Mesdames James H. Phillips, William Withers, George Stutsman, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Breen.

Lieutenant and Mrs. George F. Stutsman were hosts at an impromptu party recently. Dancing and music were enjoyed and delicious refreshments were served. Among those present were Major and Mrs. H. D. Hurley, Captain and Mrs. Rohland A. Isker, Lieutenants and Mesdames John P. Eckert, William Withers, Mesdames George Gillis, Dorris Koch; Lieutenants Martin Fennell, Charles Meehan, Donald Galloway, Clark Ruffner and J. P. Riepe.

Lieutenant and Mrs. William Withers were hosts at the meeting of the Post Bridge club Friday evening at the Officers' club. Those present included: Majors and Mesdames Charles Daly, James Labauch and H. D. Hurly; Captains and Mesdames Wallace Redner, William Gustites, Dohland A. Isker, Norman E. Waldron, Raymond Gibbs and James Miles Webb; Lieutenants and Mesdames Charles Whitmore, John P. Eckert, Paul A. Noel, James H. Phillips and William Withers; Mesdames Lily Baxter, Ellen Davis Jordon, George Gillis and Caroline Davis; Lieutenants Martin Fennell, Clark Ruffner and John Riepe and Miss Margaret Webb.

Patty Waldron entertained a number of her little friends at a party Monday afternoon, the occasion being her eighth birthday anniversary. Her guests were Betty Kneass, Peggy Tatum, Alice Labauch, Mary Redner, Maryann Lundberg, Ada Thatcher, Sylvia Bray and Dorothy Donohue.

Lieutenant and Mrs. William Withers had three tables of bridge Saturday, having as guests Captains and Mesdames Francis Gustites, Norman E. Waldron and Rohland Isker; Lieutenants and Mesdames James H. Phillips, John P. Eckert and Lieutenant John Riepe.

Captain Ray E. Houck, army transport surgeon, and Mrs. Houck were week-end guests of Captain and Mrs. William Siefert.

Mary Borden's Book Excites Gay Parisians

PARIS, Nov. 29.—When Parisians read a book of which the scene is laid in their city they always see themselves reflected in the author's characters. An American woman novelist, Mary Borden, who is the wife of a Britisher, General E. L. Spears, has discovered this while spending a vacation here. Her book, "Jane Our Stranger," caused great excitement in certain quarters of the French capital. Quite a number of persons think they have been taken as models for characters in it. Mrs. Spears has had considerable trouble allaying fears and dispelling suspicions.

"Of course, my characters are not real people," she says.

What annoys her most is that readers should believe her devoid of the necessary imagination to create her own characters.

"It is amusing and at the same time disconcerting," Mrs. Spears concludes. "I do not and never did take any characters from real life." She is arranging for a film production of her book.

Mrs. Spears is a member of the wealthy and socially prominent Borden family of Chicago. She was in France at the outbreak of the World War and immediately joined an ambulance unit. She soon had charge of a field ambulance, and during that service met her soldier husband, who proposed to her while the guns were booming along the Somme.

General Spears won high distinction for valor during the great conflict, being mentioned in despatches five times; wounded four times and cited three times in French army orders. He holds a score of decorations, including the Croix de Guerre with three palms, and is a Companion of the Bath and a Commander of the Legion of Honor. He also served a term in the house of commons. For her war service his wife received the Croix de Guerre and the Legion of Honor. She recently paid a visit to her kinfolk in the United States.

Artists and Their Work

One of the three Maynard Dixon sketches which will be shown at the exhibition sponsored by the California School of Arts and Crafts at the Hotel Oakland.

By H. L. DUNGAN.

No greater thing has been done for the art life of California than the development of the idea which brought forth the California Palace of the Legion of Honor in Lincoln park, San Francisco. It assures a permanent exhibition of the greater artists of France and in due time of the world. It assures California a proper place as an art center and it offers an inspiration for artists of California and a home for their work.

The exhibition of French artists now showing at the palace is no small affair, either as to quantity or quality. It brings to mind the art display at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, only on a lesser scale as to quantity. But there is plenty to see. One day, a dozen days, will not do it.

Mrs. Alma de Bretteville Spreckels, through her untiring efforts, has had gathered together for California's benefit the best that France has to offer, from Millet to Matisse, from Corot to Gauguin.

CONTRASTING MODERNS.

Among the modern painters Louis Gillott exposes three canvases. "The Port of New York" and "The Thames, London," are soft in tone and full of the mysteries of haze and smoke and of great cities and the sea.

Claude Rameau, in "Stormy Evening," carries the atmosphere of the gathering storm into his foreground as well as into the clouds sweeping overhead. Louis Montagne has four canvasses, his "Dusty Road in the Suburbs of Avignon," a brilliant bit of sunshine and warmth. In contrast to Montagne's lively canvas, and as different in theme as in handling, are the rather sombre toned works of Andre Surela. His "Water Carrier" and "Jew with Pomegranates" are among the best of the several paintings he is showing.

Andre Chapuis' "Interior" is again something different. A tumbled, unmade bed, with a woman, half turned away, sitting idly in a chair, is about all. Strange enough, for a scene so intimate, the woman is quite properly clothed. The interest it has attracted lies much in the coloring—a dim purple that runs from bed sheets to shadows.

Maurice Denis' "Decoration," which, as its name indicates, is a strictly decorative painting, is one of the fine things of the exhibition.

There are two paintings by Elisa Chaplin, with a new art flavor, both good: "Young Girl at Bird Cage," and "Young Girl Among the Anemones."

Pierre Laurens has but one canvas, "Monseigneur Clement." The priest is seated in profile, reading a Bible. It would not be surprising if the finely modeled head with its startlingly realistic coloring would turn and address you. That would be tremendously annoying to impressionists, cubists and what-not.

ONE MATISSE.

Now there is also but one canvas by Auguste Matisse, he who glories in unusual forms. You many pass it by once or maybe twice as something quite unworthy of consideration. But there it is, Number 147, "Two Women in an Interior." You may be of those who see many fine things about it, or of those who argue heatedly against it, or of those who do not think it worth talking about, but it's by Matisse, who stands for perfection in the harmony of color and for unusual and beautifully proportioned spaces.

Of the masters of the older school, the exhibition is particularly fortunate in having "The Man With the Hoe." The Millet was lent by William H. Crocker, who also supplied five Corots.

There are six canvases by Gauguin, who sought distortion to enrich art. Like Matisse, Gauguin is a good starting point for a debate. One Gauguin is a still life, two are scenes in Britanny and the other three are South Sea canvases. Dreamers of the South Sea should look them over. Some there be who will find in the South Sea paintings a sudden call to romance and adventure and will straightway hie themselves to far countries, while others there be who will merely go home.

Among the older painters there are also shown representative works of such artists as Boudin, Carriere, Cezanne, Courbet, Degas, Delacroix, Ingres, La Touche, Manet, Monet and Renoir.

Aside from the paintings, of which this passing comment gives but scant idea of their number or their value to the art world, the exhibition includes notable examples of French sculpture, engravings, suites of furniture, tapestry, brassware, silverware, medals, ceramics, glassware, leatherwork, bookbinding and architecture, the last mentioned covering many historical monuments of France.

The fact that Rodin is represented by more than a score of bronzes is quite enough mention of the sculptures to fill the galleries with those who appreciate art. The Rodins were loaned by Mrs. Spreckels, to whose genius for organization and appreciation of the fine things of life, are due the Palace of the Legion of Honor and all that it represents.

In one wing of the galleries are two rooms devoted to the bronzes of, Arthur Putman, California artist by chance and world artist by gift of genius and by hard work. This collection also is due to Mrs. Spreckels. Putnam stands among the masters.

The galleries have been placed under the direction of Cornelia B. Sage Quinton and Major William W. Quinton, a fortunate choice.

An exhibition, sponsored by the California School of Arts and Crafts, will be held in the ballroom of the Hotel Oakland on the afternoon and evening of December 1 and all day and evening December 2. Among the artists showing will be Xavier Martinez, Perham Nahl, Calthea Vivian, William Rice, Isabel Percy West, Elizabeth F. Ehat, Lucy Pierce and Guest Wickson. Work done at the school will also be on display.

While Maynard Dixon, famous painter of the West, as it really is, has no connection with the school, he has, nevertheless, given three pictures which will be exhibited Monday and Tuesday, and which will be sold for the benefit of the school.

They are three preliminary sketches for an overmantel decoration which Dixon made for a California home. Hills, and plains and horses at rest, all three saturated with the sunshine Dixon knows so well how to paint.

So Antonio Corsi is dying. Word comes from Los Angeles that the famous artist's model is awaiting the end at the General Hospital there. He is penniless, yet his little studio home in Los Angeles is cluttered with hundreds of paintings, statues, costumes and various articles valued at many dollars. These Corsi hopes to place in the hands of those who will appreciate them and provide for the expense of his burial.

Turkish Women Chosen Detectives

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 25.—The chief of the Constantinople police has decided to engage a number of Turkish women as detectives. They will be entrusted with the special duty of reporting on the moral conduct of members of their own sex.

Soroptimists Will Make Pilgrimage

A pilgrimage will be made by the Soroptimist Club women of Alameda County, San Francisco and Sacramento to San Jose on Thursday evening when formal presentation is made of a charter to the San Jose Club. A dinner dance at Hotel Vendome will mark the entrance of the Santa Clara valley group into the fellowship of the new movement, which within three years has become international in its scope. The San Jose Club is the sixth to be founded in California and takes its place as the tenth in the world.

To Mrs. Helena A. Gamble, state organizer and executive secretary of the Alameda County Soroptimist Club, which has the distinction of being the first of its order, is accredited the honor of founding the San Jose group. She will be a complimented guest at the week's dinner and will make the formal presentation of the charter. Some two score guests are planning to attend the dinner dance from Alameda County. They will be joined by 25 representatives from both the San Francisco and Sacramento Clubs.

The dramatic section and the quartet from the local club have been given prominent places on the dinner program, expressing in this way their co-operation and greetings. San Francisco and Sacramento club women are planning special stunts.

The annual election will engage the attention of the Soroptimist Club of Alameda County following the weekly luncheon at Hotel Oakland tomorrow. While many rumors are afloat as to whom will be chosen the fourth president to succeed Mrs. Sue L. Ballard, retiring, the business and professional women will go to the ballot box with no advance information on the nominations.

Under the election machinery in this service club, the report of the nominating committee is kept secret until the day of the annual balloting. With seven offices to fill, the committee presents a list of fourteen candidates. Balloting upon these elect the new members of the board of directors. The club elects from these returns its officers. Under the constitution of the organization, no officer may succeed herself nor may a woman be reelected to the directorship who has served for three consecutive years.

The official ticket tomorrow will be presented by a nominating board including Mrs. Mildred Latimer, Mrs. Mollie White, Miss Alice Brookman.

French Legion Of Honor Names Poetess Officer

PARIS, Nov. 25.—More honors are ot be heaped upon France's official poet—who happens to be a poetess, the Comtesse de Noailles. She is going to be made an officer of the Legion of Honor. Whenever it is considered desirable to celebrate in verse an official event touching the Republic the Comtesse de Noailles is called in and acquits herself of the task in a manner which never fails to evoke laudatory comment from the press.

She is probably one of the most prolific poets who ever lived and versified. Her peculiar forte is richness and colorfulness of vocabulary, and she is more Oriental than Western in her extravagance of expression. Some critics do not like it. But they are shouted down by a chorus of admirers who declare she has "pearls in her inkstand," and compare her with Victor Huge, Lamartine and de Musset.

She was sixteen when she published her first book of poems. A curious feature is that despite her verbal orgies of enthusiasm Mme. de Noailles cannot bear strong lights or loud noises, and works in a darkened room which no one dares approach save on tiptoe.

The recommendation of fasting as a rejuvenator, made by Prof. Carlson of Chicago, has set Paris to thinking. Parisian women especially, always on the look-out for something to preserve their beauty and youth, have been consulting their medical advisors on the subject. Goodness knows they eat little enough already, because fashion bids them be slim, but they are willing to fast two or three days a week if that will have the effect Prof. Carlson claims.

The Parisiennes are encouraged to believe by an authority on the subject, Herbert Alexander, who is living in Paris. He not only supports the Chicago savant's theory, but expresses amazement that people should be so ignorant of the curative and rejuvenating effects of fasting, which he says were known to the ancients. He himself has practised perio ical fastinf for a quarter of a century and has not had to take medicine throughout that period.

Other medical experts are telling people there is not a disease which is not curable by fasting, except diseases like cholera and the plague, which kill before the effects of the treatment can get into operation. Still others say that fasting can make thin people fat and is a wonderful mental stimulant.

An old Frenchman has just died and left the weirdest collection ever imagined. He has spent his life going about the world earching for things ridiculous. He ended by creating a museum filled with the funniest fads men and women have ever been guilty of. His examples of human craziness include clothing, paintings, furniture and works of so-called art which appeared to him to exceed the limits of ordinary ridicule.

The collector often paid big sums for his treasures, and one of his greatest surprises came when a connoisseur offered him $4000 for a picture which he had bought thirty years before on account of its utter grotesqueness.

Although the Parisiennes cannot make up their minds to abandon bobbed hair, they have decided they want a change, and have begun to have their hair cut to fancy shapes, especially at the back.

WOMEN and THEIR WORK

Rockridge Auxiliary Has Busy Program

The Girls' Auxiliary of Rock-Ridge Women's Club comes up to the close of 1924 with an enrollment of 27 members, and an active program of work which very nearly makes as large a demand upon them as is made upon their mothers in the older group.

For be it understood that the first qualification of an auxiliary membership is that an applicant is a daughter of a member in the senior organization, and fully 12 years of age.

Upon dues of but 25 cents a month, the young girls are carrying on a program of helpful social service. They have promised to give a child a month's care at Del Valle Farm and are planning to make Santa Claus real to a large group less fortunate than themselves. Moreover, they called upon their treasury for a $25 subscription to the clubhouse, which is the dream of their parents. Divided into five sections, the serious and gay, is demanding their interest. They give attention to music, drama and philanthropy, devote themselves to cards and see that the press committee spreads word of their activities. The month's calendar holds many important dates for the group beginning with a meeting of the card section on Saturday.

When mothers need their help the daughters are right there. They are talking over the Christmas program of the senior group. They are sharing with the philanthropic section of the adult club the responsibility of providing Christmas to the young women in the California Girls' Training Home in Alameda. They have served as ushers and waitresses for the grown-ups.

P. M. Fisher, interested in the activities of the Girls' Auxiliary, has presented the official gavel to the club.

MRS. MILTON FARMER is active in the committees arranging for the brilliant Christmas dance sponsored by the College Women's Club on Saturday evening in the Twentieth Century Clubhouse of Berkeley.

Dr. Breeden to Give Reading

Rev. Harry O. Breedon numbers among his friends both James Whitcomb Riley and Eugene Field. It is perhaps because of this friendship that he has given so great a love to the verse which they wrote. Be that as it may, he has won distinction for his interpretation of their homely lines. Lakeview Parent-Teacher Association is announcing Rev. Breeden in a group of readings from both popular poets on the Thursday afternoon program.

An illustrated talk on "The 1924 Christmas Seal Sale—What the Funds Do at Del Valle Farm," will also be given.

Children from the kindergarten class under the direction of Miss Isabelle Scupham are rehearsing a quarter of an hour entertainment in compliment to the mothers.

Mrs. Carlos G. White, president, will preside as chairman of the day.

Awnings have been placed over the entrance to the school cafeteria by the parent-teacher association, which has sponsored the project from the beginning. A special turkey luncheon was served the students last week. An average of 400 luncheons are served daily.

College Women Will Sponsor Yuletide Dance

A Christmas dance and card party, combining all the traditional features of the Yuletide, will be the brilliant function sponsored by the College Women's Club on Saturday night. The Twentieth Century clubhouse in Derby street will be hung with holley wreaths and garlands of pungent evergreen in honor of the holiday party. Christmas trees, sparkling with tinsel and lights, will be brought from the forests to deck the supper rooms. Streamers of red and gay bows of holiday hues will add a color note.

Christmas carols will be sung by the club choral during the evening. The supper will offer the tempting dishes which belong to the season. Favors appropriate to the Yuletide will find their way into the possession of each guest.

The board of directors, of which Mrs. McDonald Robinson is president, is broadcasting to the members that no personal invitations will be extended to them. It is being taken for granted that each woman with her escort will be loyal enough to her club to participate in the holiday festivities. Guest cards, however, are being issued.

Mrs. G. R. Warren is chairman of the general committee on arrangements. Cards for the dance are obtainable from Mrs. F. I. Doane, Thornwall 3758. Reservations for the card tables are being made with Mrs. George Unnewehr, Berkeley 9374J. Assisting on the committee on arrangements are: Mrs. Milton Farmer, reception; Mrs. C. H. Jensen, supper; Mrs. G. R. Ingels, decorations; Mrs. R. W. Roberg, favors; Mrs. E. A. Richardson, Mrs. Howard Willoughby, Mrs. William Kelly, Mrs. W. R. Grieg. The carolers will be directed by Mrs. E. D. Eastman.

Roma to Sing

The choral section of the Fruitvale Women's Club, directed by Mme. Caro Roma, cooperating with the Appomattox Corps, G. A. R., will visit Letterman Hospital on Tuesday afternoon. A program of song will be given by the clubwomen in compliment to the patients in the government hospital.

Animated Ads To Be Featured At Luncheon

Animated Ads will be featured at the birthday luncheon which will be celebrated by the members of Twentieth Century Club on Tuesday in the Derby street clubhouse. Divided into groups according to the years in which they became members, the women are busy with secrets of costumes and stunts.

Each section has been called upon to exert its originality in decorating the table, planning the costume and presenting the stunt which will carry out the idea of the special advertisement which has been selected by the group. The keen interest among the several hundred friends promises an unusual program. Mrs. Warde Sorrick is chairman of the day.

Twentieth Century Club women according to a long established custom will enact the role of Santa Claus to scores of small boys and girls whom other Kris Kringles might overlook. The holiday party complete with a glittering tree and gifts for all is being planned for December 22.

A Christmas program is announced by the Art and Travel section for Tuesday, December 9.

Silver Tea And Musical To Be Given

A silver tea and musical is the elaborate function which Manzanita Parent-Teacher Association is announcing for this week. Invitations for the charmingly arranged function have gone to several hundred clubwomen of the city outside the parent-teacher movement and will draw an important group of leaders to the Fred Finch Orphanage, which will receive the benefit from the hour's pleasure. The small boys and girls who find their shelter in the big East Oakland institution have prompted the mothers to secure for them a real Christmas, observing all the traditions of a Santa Claus with a full pack, turkey and fixin's, and the surprises which the beloved child in a home knows. So it is that the Friday afternoon tea will introduce the women of the city into the mode of living of this lively household of children at the Fred Finch Orphanage.

Mrs. L. A. Farnsworth, president of the Manzanita Parent-Teacher Association, and Mrs. J. Wesley Hagen, matron, will receive the guests. Members of the hostess association will act as guides for the inspection of the building.

Mrs. Miana McCauley, well known clubwoman and interpreter, Mrs. Aileen Armstrong Piggott, songs, and the Arion Trio will contribute the program of the hour.

Presiding at the tea tables will be Mrs. Thomas Crawford. General arrangements are being made under the leadership of Mrs. Roy Grant.

When the platoon competition for the chamber of commerce cup is held by the R. O. T. C. of Oakland in the Municipal Auditorium tomorrow at 4 o'clock, the colors will be formally presented by Mrs. Sue L. Ballard, president of the Soroptimist Club of Alameda County. The gift is made on the suggestion of Colonel Lawrence. The business and professional women have given a practical support to the R. O. T. C. organization in this city.

Circle to Play Whist Friday

Renaissance circle is offering its members and their guests an opportunity to play on Friday afternoon. For once the claims of art, music and travel are to be ignored while the score of women assemble about the card tables in celebration of the holiday month. Bridge, whist and mah jongg will divide the interest of those who are saving the important date on the week's calendar. Town and Gown clubhouse in Berkeley will offer the setting for the early December function.

Mrs. Wilfred Henderson, chairman of the general committee on arrangements, is receiving reservations for the tables. The committee assisting her includes Mrs. M. F. Beukers, Mrs. C. D. Hillman, Mrs. M. C. Elwell, Mrs. G. Owens, Mrs. J. Brennan, Mrs. B. V. Hobson and Mrs. G. C. Bohannon.

Dr. Ng Poon Chew Addresses Lakeview Club

Dr. Ng Poon Chew, distinguished Chinese scholar, will be the speaker before Lakeview tomorrow afternoon. "Education in China" is the subject which the oriental editor will discuss. Music numbers will be rendered by Mrs. Samuel Davis, Mrs. Jeanette Dunster, piano; and Mrs. James Baxter Sarratt, vocal, assisted at the piano by Mrs. Charles Erier.

A piano duo, "Il Trovatore de Virde," arranged by H. Alberti, will be given by Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Dunster. Mrs. Sarratt has chosen as one of the group of songs which she will sing, "The Sound of the Sea," by Miss Bertha Weber, a local composer.

Mrs. W. W. Dennis will be chairman of the day. In the receiving line will be Mrs. Benjamin Harvey, Mrs. F. G. Wight, Mrs. F. N. Morcom, Mrs. B. A. Stewart. Presiding at the tea tables will be Mrs. Charles Christensen, Mrs. A. A. Alexander, Mrs. H. D. Bell, Mrs. H. P. Brown, Mrs. A. B. Coleman, Mrs. Thomas Earlesome, Mrs. D. J. Cornell, Mrs. Walter Eader and Mrs. Gilbert Loken.

At the business session which will precede the 3 o'clock program, Mrs. Norman Campbell, chairman of the junior auxiliaries, Alameda district, California Federation of Women's clubs, will present plans for organizing a junior auxiliary among the daughters of Lakeview club's members. Mrs. Campbell is a past president of Lakeview.

A benefit theater party at the Fulton on January 27 is already interesting clubwomen who have begun their sale of tickets.

Development In Character Is Studied

Development in the character of children is being studied this year by members of Claremont Parent-Teacher Association. The second in a series of talks by experts will be given at the regular meeting in the school auditorium on Thursday afternoon. J. R. Sutton, vice-principal of the Oakland High School, will be the speaker. He will discuss character development between the ages of 6 and 9 years.

The annual holiday bazaar sponsored by the Claremont Mothers will open its doors at 5817 College avenue on Tuesday, continuing its brief business career through Wednesday. The child welfare treasury will receive the benefits. For weeks the busy women have devoted themselves to the work of the holiday sale, making by hand a large part of the stock which will be offered. The pantry shelf will lure the housewife with its delicatessen and home-made dishes. Luncheons will be served at noon.

Thanksgiving was not permitted to pass without recording some kindly deeds. The Day Nurseries received their gifts from the Claremont clubwomen.

Christmas Fete Plans Engage New Century

A Christmas luncheon will precede the December business meeting of Oakland New Century club in the Fifth and Peralta streets building on Friday. Garlands of evergreens, masses of red berries and perhaps, even a glistening Christmas tree, will suggest the Yuletide season. At any rate, the discussion which will follow will be inspired by the Christmas spirit. Plans will be adopted for the holiday festivities at the clubhouse.

The Sphinx club of San Francisco, which has established the tradition of sending 100 tightly packed bags of Christmas goodies and toys to the children for whom the Oakland New Century club makes itself responsible will be the guest of honor on Friday.

Mrs. E. K. Taylor, who is a member of both groups, will be the day's hostess. She will be assisted by Mrs. O. H. Fanning and Mrs. O. F. Olsen. Mrs. L. F. Helmond is the club president.

Thanksgiving was made the happier in the neighborhood of the community center by the generously planned baskets of staples and holiday dishes, contributed by the women and distributed by Mrs. George Barnes Bird, housemother.

GOOD TIME, WHEN WE GIVE OUR ANNUAL THANKS, TO SIZE UP THE SITUATION AND SEE HOW FAR WE STAND OUT IN THE CLEAR.

The Knave

FRIENDS OF NED HAMILTON SAID "PLEASANT TRIP" LAST SATURDAY WHEN HE TOOK SHIP TO SAIL AROUND THIS THRALLING SPHERE.

SAN FRANCISCO, November 29.—This has not been a casual year. Important things have happened. The world has quieted down an appreciative degree, it may be reasonably claimed, and this country is certainly on a more restful basis. Material things undoubtedly are in a more satisfactory shape than they were a very few months ago. California has prospered, and is in a way to prosper as it has not done before. An event of the year that intrigues the educational world and attracts general attention took place last week—the football game of the State's two leading colleges. When close to a hundred thousand persons assembled exclusively for a pleasurable purpose the event must be considered important. It has been in quite recent times that in a day as many could assemble from their homes for recreative purposes. The automobile is responsible for this. That the great gathering at Berkeley was so successful and safe to its horde of attendants is a matter for congratulation to the community that may be held immediately responsible. As good citizens we may rejoice that affairs are looking up all along the line, and we certainly are justified in community satisfaction over the affairs that have eventuated and are foreshadowed for California.

Thanksgiving Observance

The recent observance by National edict and proclamation of Thanksgiving Day has inspired publications various. The day has come to be suggestive of big dinners, family and other social gatherings, and occurrences calculated to develop the proverbial good time. My attention is attracted to a publication in a Philadelphia paper, an article of a rather different trend—that the national recognition of Thanksgiving is due to Sarah Josepha Hale, who was the well-known editor of Godey's Lady Book, and who plied her pen till, in 1864, President Lincoln heeded her persuasive advocacy and issued his message "setting apart the day of grateful acknowledgement." Without expressly declaring it, this gives the idea somehow that Thanksgiving Day is a quite modern institution; but as far back as 1621 there is account of "our governor" making preparation for feasting some of the early immigrants who "had gotten our harvest in." The first Thanksgiving Day publicly appointed was February 22, 1630. November 4, 1631, Governor Winthrop wrote: "We keep Thanksgiving Day today in Boston." There is no certain record when it became the fixed annual observance in New England, but in 1742 there were two Thanksgiving Days, Massachusetts and Connecticut celebrating without regarding each other's observance. When national proclamations were first issued by the President is not readily found, but it may have been in 1864, as stated.

The Next College Contest

There have been some quite recent physical college contests, particulars of which do not need to be gone into; and now there are to be affairs wholly intellectual that may more thoroughly engage that section that did not give itself up altogether to the other. The University of California is to enter a debate with Oxford University, which is to take place January 19, and another with the University of West Virginia, to eventuate February 9. The Oxford event gathers importance from having as one of its contestants Malcolm MacDonald, son of the late premier of Great Britain, who is now in the United States. If the weather is nice it is expected the Oxford debate will be held in the Greek theater; otherwise it will take place in Wheeler Hall. It is sub rosa information that there is to be something socially important around the Oxford visitors. Interest centers in young MacDonald not alone because he is the son of his father, but [illegible] developed qualities on his own account, being author of political pamphlets and a leader in socialistic thought at Oxford.

A Different Proceeding

Quite a different proceeding is that which is being taken in behalf of Peter McDonough of this city. As must be generally known by all who keep abreast of the news, this McDonough brother was convicted of bootlegging. The law's subterfuges are by no means unknown to this contender. He has had occasion to evince this fact before. After having been convicted he resorted to every delay, move, appeal and subrerfuge to ward off consequences, but none of the devices answered. When the supreme court of the United States passed it up there was nothing but appeal to the president. This is now being done. The appeal is strongly signed—the names of the mayor, police judges, district attorney, a police commissioner, city tax collector, treasurer, auditor and recorder; secretary of state, various powerful and political attorneys and many others who stand for something in public life, appearing. But Calvin Coolidge is president of the United States, and clemency petitions are not believed to get any farther with him than with the generality of hard headed officials. But anyhow, there seems nothing for it but to wait and see what happens. There is no doubt that "Pete" McDonough has many personal friends.

Significant Announcement

The Oroville Register, under date of November 20, in what purports to be a despatch from Sacramento, says that Herbert C. Hoover will be a candidate for the United States senate two years hence, when a regular election comes on. The article carrying this news, appearing in a newspaper owned by A. E. Boynton, who was and is perhaps the closest of Hiram Johnson's political friends, includes that Hoover has by no means ceased to think of a tenancy of the White House, but that with his advisers has concluded that a senatorship is the best approach; that to get an impressionable distance in that direction it will be desirable to get in with Senator Johnson, and to do this it will be well to have it appear that Senator Johnson determines the candidate for governor in 1926, which determination, it may be considerably assumed, would make it necessary to hunch Governor Richardson, and if that would not be a sufficient process, to get out in undoubted array against him. Although all this appears in a paper undoubtedly friendly to Senator Johnson and controlled from sources which have never been friendly to Richardson, the concluding paragraph is: "It is very doubtful whether any such program could be put across, as Senator Johnson is anything but an admirer of Hoover, and there is little probability the reactionary leaders could talk Richardson out of seeking another four years as governor."

Possible Treaty Quiz

It is not surprising to see it announced in the news that a congressional investigation is likely as the American body takes up next week, to inquire into the manner in which three leading nations—England, France and Italy—are living up to the terms of the naval disarmament treaty. Such unusual prompt action may not eventuate, but its possibility is foreseen because of the controversy that so very recently occurred over the partly built dreadnaught Washington. The reports have been that $35,000,000 had been expended by this government in getting this giant warship along, but that a decree of the commission was that it should be scrapped. The effort to save it from the ignominious fate of serving as a target for lesser craft attracted national attention. The old-fashioned way in which Egypt is treated, that country having kicked up its heels somewhat, is given as inspiration for the proposed investigation.

California History

No state has a more romantic history than California. At every stage it presents an alluring spectacle. Its wild state: its pastoral life: the mission era: the discovery of gold, with its ruthless invasion: the grain era; its adaptability to fruits and many semi-tropic products: its extreme desirability for residence, in fact, all its features, have given it a great reputation. A record of some of this history has been made by Judge Waste, associate justice of the supreme court. It is given on the "Romance" period of California, but as has been said, all the state's history has been romantic, so that the judge's period need not be deferential. A recent notice tells of his delivering this lecture, illustrated, before a social organization recently, and suggests that such presentations would be of incalculable value if systematically promulgated in parts of the country not as familiar with the history of California as its residents. Being largely a work of taste it is likely of greater value than would result were it manufactured especially for show.

School Improvements

The complaints as to the Hetch Hetchy project have gained a hearing and action, and now there is agitation as to the considerable school improvements that are either under way or shortly to be inaugurated. But complaints as to the schools may not be as compelling as in the Hetch Hetchy project. The detail is less specific, and may be expected to rest in some measure on the fact that the supervising architect is a brother-in-law of the mayor. His capability is not directly questioned, but it is a fact that the position of supervising architect of the public schools of such a considerable city as San Francisco, with the official backing that must adhere from the fact that incumbent's brother-in-law is the city's mayor, puts one in a powerful position. There has been an amiable indifference to things that have been going big for a considerable time, and it is not considered strange that there are outcries now in more than one direction. The embarrassment to the impartial historian comes in the inability to refer to these matters without seeming to egg on a controversy.

The Roman Choir

Frank Healy departed Tuesday for New York, to be on hand when the Roman Choir arrived on the Italian steamer Conte Verde, which was due Saturday, November 29. Healy had such success in handling the Sistine Chapel Choir last season that the enterprise is to be repeated, with a different cast and under a somewhat different name. It is announced that the choir will make a tour of the principal cities of the United States, Canada, Mexico and Cuba. The plans originally included Australia, but the necessity that some of the participants must be in Rome in the Spring months for Papal service made it necessary to eliminate this part. Fifteen general participants, a maestro and an artistic director comprises the artistic participants. There are four sopranos, three contraltos, four tenors, three baritones and a basso, all, it is to be understood, masculine voices. The programs are to include sacred compositions, operatic selections and Neopolitan folksongs, all rendered in a manner that will be new to those who have not extensively patronized music renditions as they must be in the old world centers—which not every American who goes over takes the trouble to do.

Walter Johnson at Sea

Walter Johnson excited a large share of a popular division of the athletic attention for a couple of weeks. It was stated with so much positiveness almost immediately after the world series that he expected to purchase the Oaks that the California baseball mouth was pretty well set for that outcome: but all the time I was advised that nothing approaching the definite had been done. It was all talk. The price set upon the Oaks was represented to be $385,000. It now appears that everything was provided—except the $385,000. I didn't see how anybody could pay such a price for such a property, but I didn't have to see it. When the perplexity was sorest I remembered about Willie Kamm being sold for $100,000, or reported to have been sold for that, and did my best to avoid worry over the matter. The latest from Johnson came from Reno, where he lives, and to which he returned when the Oakland deal no longer figured. Immediately he joined a hunting outfit and went into the sagebrush wilds, and we will hear no further of the minor club which he will take over and manage till he emerges again in baseball territory.

Political Complications

The sudden severe illness of a son of Mayor Rolph may complicate a situation. In an instant he was called to the other side of the country, leaving the chairman of the Finance Committee as his understudy, the law not specifically making such provision. All at once up came this Hetch Hetchy proposition, a matter of such moment that one temporarily at the head of the city government might reasonably have sidestepped it till the mayor in the [illegible] of events resumed the reins. But the temporary mayor elected to act, and that drastically—which was to order the cessation of work that had been under way continuously for more than ten years—which brought a court action and judicial order that the work shouldn't be stopped, and there we are. The city's legislative and executive body is composed of eighteen members, and is presided over by the mayor, though he hasn't a vote in it. Those who seem to be most poignantly pained over the debacle have fears that the spectacle will injure the city, as showing a lack of business acumen, and developing antagonisms that may persist. The taxpaying public already sees that a water system that was to cost the city $45,000,000 will cost it at least twice as much, and this situation is not improving it.

"Passing On"

One of the comics in the summing up of events of the Presidential term now so near its close is the inroads that have been made in official life and the ranks of the great by the final summons. The subject is one that might be treated lengthily, but a glance will be of interest. Those who have passed on include one President, one former President, a President's son, a cabinet officer, wife of a cabinet officer, a former White House physician, the wife of a supreme court justice, six United States senators and a dozen members of the lower house. Among the Senators was Henry Cabot Lodge, considered a great and genuine American. Then there were Senators Philander C. Knox and Boies Penrose. Senator Brandegee committed suicide. Others who passed were Senator Nicholson of Colorado, Senator Colt of Rhode Island and Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesota. Many others related to and connected with official life in Washington attracted notice for the time. Toll seems to have been taken unduly as even such a brief summing as this reveals.

Cruelties at Rodeos

The American Humane Association announces that it has taken steps to give advice to towns, agricultural societies and other organizations, how to pull off events that gain popularity without such glaring instances of cruelty as characterizes them. Passing up the question whether such instances would be popular were they innocuous that way, the subject is an interesting one to consider. There are more than 600 societies which are affiliated with this national organization. The principal talker seems to be George A. H. Scott, secretary. He has made a study of the application of humane laws. There may be some surprise over the announcement that "the Middle West has successfully quenched shows involving steer roping and bulldogging." Also the information that about three years ago such shows invaded the Middle West, but local societies interfered, and the shows didn't pay. "We have had nothing since that time in the Middle West." Brutalities are undesirable anywhere and under any condition, and this is republished to show how far they have progressed in the "Middle West."

Hark, from the Subterranean!

At the banquet given in San Francisco by Mark L. Requa to the recognized workers of the most recent Republican State Committee, Secretary Herbert Hoover was the guest of honor. Chester Rowell, who may have earned the right to hold forth on all phases of Republicanism, announced that he felt that he had been commissioned by the President while a guest on the Mayflower to extend the olive branch to all California Republican factions. But as Senator Johnson was not present he may not have been apprised, or something. The Woodland Democrat, whose politics aligns precisely with its name, makes a note of this, but becomes amiable to the extent of saying that Senator Johnson will have no difficulty as to his party standing if he will agree to support Hoover for President in 1928. There is a rather long fallow political season ahead, and there is opportunity for a good many observations in the meantime.

Stronger Navy

All discussions and proposals that relate to the navy in any way interest the Pacific coast and its chief commercial city particularly, and consequently there is a pricking up of ears over the hunch that there is likely to be something doing that way next week. Republican leaders, it is intimated, are likely to bestir themselves in the direction of starting a movement to bring the fleet to the 5-5-3 ratio permitted under the arms limitation treaty. While the house busies itself on the naval appropriation, the senate will not lose time on the $120,000,000 construction and repair program, held up by the combination of events in which the presidential campaign was by no means the least. We are in more intimate relation to naval "territory," and as is considerably believed, naval events of the near future, than any other point of the Great West, and in that light this should particularly interest San Francisco.

"Marbelite" Standards

Not everybody may understand the controversy that is making its way through the city's cash box—indeed, some may not know of it at all from the news accounts. It seems that the city purchased a number of pretentious illuminants for the city hall park, the aggregate cost of which was $7884.80, and which when the bill came in, with its supervisoral okeh and everything, the city and county auditor failed to approve. His objection seems to have been that a purchase of that dimension should have been made by City Purchasing Agent Leavy without advertising for bids, according to law. The purchasing agent explained, "Marbelite" standards being patented, no competition was possible, and for that reason none were advertised for. The purchasing agent produced letters from the supervisors' lighting committee, however, instructing him to go ahead. Whether this will meet the law's requirements will have to be threshed out. The real trouble seems to be objection by San Francisco dealers to apparatus made in Los Angeles and advertised as such.

"Cat and Canary"

There were a number who "didn't know" about Harry Duffy's enterprise at the Alcazar theater. It will be remembered that he proposed to bring a company here from New York to present the play, "The Cat and the Canary." Since the formation of the Equity, which looks after the interests of actors, shifting combinations across the country is not the simple achievement that it formerly was. Their salaries and maintenance have to be provided before they start, entailing the posting of a bond. It was told on this page how Duffy gave over his original idea of fetching his entire company, which would have necessitated a $5000 bond, and brought only four, who waived their bond rights. As it turns out, the venture is singularly fortunate. It has completed its third week, and is still going strong. There are not as many performances brought out intact as formerly, undoubtedly on account of this Equity provision. Formerly managers often ventured, but sometimes failed of a profit, when they had to get off as best they could. If they are compelled to post bonds they can't take as many chances as formerly.

To Dry-Sleuth Themselves

I am unable to learn everything about the report that hotels and cafes are joining in a protective agency by which they are to sleuth themselves, but there seems to be something to it. For more than five years the prohibition law has been in effect, with results more or less questionable. There have been many actions under the law, but always there have been reports of indulgence, of more or less readiness with which liquids have been obtained and consumed in public resorts. Latterly the federal authorities have been getting more particular, and the effects on a reputable place where irregularities are disclosed have been such that a proposition from an organization that makes it a business to watch hip-pockets and see that liquor is not lugged in, handled and drunk in a way that lays the proprietorship liable is finding takers. It is not a temperance movement by any means, but one that will keep down surreptitious drinking, and even one that may be feared by the roughneck who would unsheath his flask regardless when the thirst comes on.

Around the World

Those who were intrigued that "Ned" Hamilton should suddenly disappear from the realm of political news while the presidential campaign was at its height, and after he had discussed it in his own independent fashion from its inception, having thus performed in all presidential campaigns for more than thirty years, may be interested that he sailed last Saturday on the President Monroe on a tour of the world. THE KNAVE affects no knowledge of the arrangement, but assumes that he has been retired with honors by Mr. Hearst, and this is part of the arrangement. He will not reappear in these parts till next summer. It was his plan to spend a month in Egypt, and the required time in doing European countries dear to the heart of the tourist. Mrs. Hamilton goes with him, and there is every reason to predict a most enjoyable voyage. A long line of friends, newspaper and other, gained in a remarkable journalistic career both as to its length and achievements, will certainly wish so.

Pauline Frederick's Suit

A good many interesting things come out of Los Angeles. Latterly these have not been wholly divorced from the movie business and those having to do with that industry. One of the very latest stories concerns Pauline Frederick, and given the once-over seems serious as far as dollars and cents are concerned, but being analyzed by one of the hard headed sort may not be so bad. Pauline Frederick has been adjudged indebted to George Edwin Joseph in the sum of $28,691. It is set forth that he acted as her agent in securing a $7500 a-week contract, for which service he was to receive ten per cent. The contract ran thirteen months, and was then cancelled by the contracting parties, but agent Joseph claims it was cancelled without his consent, and sued for his ten per cent for the remainder of the term of the original contract, which was three years. The suit was tried in April, 1923, the judge's decision rendered in August of that year, but not filed until last Saturday. There are persons hereaway who will not mourn if Miss Frederick emerges unscathed from this mysterious jumble of dates and occurrences.

Scores Again

San Francisco scores again. As a general proposition this may not be thrilling, for this city has emerged unusually so many times and in so many ways that to do it again is not startling. But the incidental facts make it worth recounting. Anything that Charlie Chaplin does is an event, and that he marries a San Francisco girl, and goes away off to Mexico to do it, gets a big heading. The affair is given zest by specific and particular denials of Chaplin and others that a wedding was contemplated. But it seems to be a fact that the famous performer and his leading lady, Miss Lita Grey, are at Guaymas, where another line of news states they went for filming purposes, and that they were married in that unusual haven. They must keep things going in the films, and it makes a good story, whether it lays the foundation for a household or not.

Belle Bennett Married

San Francisco theater-goers will not need a ceremonious introduction to Belle Bennett. Before all actresses went in the movies she was of the recognized theatrical world here. Some eight months ago she excited some surprise by a matrimonial story. A marriage with Fred Windemere was rather unusually interrupted by Jack Geller, who claimed to be her husband. It seemed to be the considerable opinion that he wasn't, but anyhow circumstances have so shaped around that she was married to Windemere at Hollywood last Thursday. Windemere is rather prominent in the filming business, and Miss Bennett is now wholly devoted to pictures. Miss Bennett is not a stranger to the love god, and is not of the recent vintage that might be thought from her youthful appearance. Fifteen years ago it is represented she incurred a youthful marriage which was annulled in a friendly manner. In her other years she won the heart of a southern youth in Georgia, but he died before a ceremony was performed. Then this Geller experience. Now from the accounts there is a sure thing.

SAN LEANDRO PROGRESS IS REPORTED

Planning Commission Tells of Building Programs, New Sub-Divisions, City Zoning, Etc., to Take Place Soon

Various important developments in San Leandro are announced by D. A. Breed, secretary of the San Leandro Planning Commission. These developments are listed by Breed as follows:

"The old Beiger and the Sheppard-Henry property is soon to be put on the market and a large building program is contemplated.

"The opening up of Bancroft avenue to Estudillo avenue will make available for subdivision large undeveloped acreage and bring in added residences.

"A fine new $350,000 high school for San Leandro will soon be started.

"A beautiful subdivision is also contemplated on the land adjoining the County Infirmary."

Breed also states much building is going on in Broadmoor, the well-known residential section. Particular emphasis is placed on the fine gardens in Boardmoor where Luther Burbank had his experimental gardens in 1915, and where he pronounced the soil to be exceptionally good.

The San Leandro Planning Commission is especially concerned with the proper zoning of the residential, apartment house, and industrial sections of the community

NEW SANTA ROSA HIGH SCHOOL IS MASTERPIECE

SANTA ROSA, Nov. .—This week marks the completion of Santa Rosa's new $375,000 high school building. The building is completely equipped and ready for the hundreds of students who have been temporarily housed in churches, lofts and basements since the old high school was destroyed by fire.

The Tudor Gothic design has been splendidly executed in Tapestry brick with Terra Cotta ornament and trimming. A roof of English pan tile in variagated colors adds a marked touch of beauty to the picture. The building is of reinforced concrete construction with a veneer of face brick on the exterior walls.

The school has a capacity of 1000 students, which allows for ample future growth. A large and spacious auditorium, seating 1250, is one of the features. The auditorium is connected to the main building by a covered cloister. The building on the right is the future gymnasium unit, while the central unit is the academic building.

The academic building has a complete administrative suite with principal's and vice-principal's offices, board of education room, teachers' conference room and student activities offices.

A library and study hall, each seating 150 students, form part of the structure, and the academic rooms are located on the main floor.

All laboratories are located on the second floor in the science wing. A little theater seating 200 is also on the second floor. This room will be used for one-act plays, elocution, class meeting and other small assemblies.

The music department and band room are on the third floor in specially "deadened" rooms.

The household arts and cafeteria are housed in a separate wing on the main floor.

The second floor is reached by fireproof inclines or "ramps," which are covered with noiseless cork linoleum, similar to the corridors.

The new Santa Rosa High School is considered by those speaking with authority to be one of the finest school buildings in the state.

The building was built from the plans and specifications of W. H. Weeks, architect, with offices in The TRIBUNE Tower, Oakland.

Extension Given To Key System Co.

Key System Transit Company has been granted an extension of time by the Railroad Commission until February 28, 1925, to construct additional passing tracks on San Jose avenue in the City of Alameda, called for in the proposed improved service authorized by the commission. This extension of time is necessitated by the City of Alameda requiring further time in which to pass upon the application of Key System Transit Company to install these tracks.

JUDGES PICKED FOR PAC. SLOPE SHOW AT OAKLAND

Men of very wide prominence in the dairy industry have ben invited, and have accepted invitations to sit on the board of judges at the Pacific Slope Dairy Show, according to Manager Robert E. Jones, who today made public the list.

The man who will come from the greatest distance to serve at Oakland is Prof. M. Mortensen, head of the dairy department, Iowa State College, Ames, Iowa. He will serve on the boards for butter and cheese and is regarded as one of the foremost authorities in America.

A complete list of the judges follows:

Milk and Cream—S. J. Pearce, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Salt Lake City; M. E. McDonald, California State Department of Agriculture, Sacramento; C. E. Tegner, Los Angeles.

Cheese—H. R. Lochry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Salt Lake City; Prof. M. Mortensen, Iowa State College, Ames, Iowa; C. A. Phillips, dairy division, University of California, Davis.

Butter—Professor Mortensen; C. J. Benkendorf, manager Milk Producers of Central California, Modesto; S. L. Denning, Premier Machinery Co., San Francisco.

Some of the above judges also will serve on the board for the High School Dairy Products Judging Contest, for which the list follows:

Milk—S. J. Pearce; F. W. Wilson, University of California, Davis.

Cheese—H. R. Lochry and C. A. Phillips.

Butter—Lee Neilson, Golden State Milk Products Co., San Francisco; G. D. Turnbow, dairy division, University of California, Davis.

The Junior Amateur Band Contest will be judged by Modeste Alloo, University of California, Berkeley; William Bickett, Bickett School of Music, San Francisco; Arthur Conradi, Institute of Music, San Francisco.

The county exhibits are intended to show the attractions offered for the dairy settlers and will be judged by Fred Brosius, State Department of Agriculture, San Francisco; F. L. Tomaschke, president Oakland Advertising Club, and Charles Keeler, secretary Berkeley Chamber of Commerce.

U. S. foodstuffs, particularly dried raisins and canned salmon, may be adversely affected by the reciprocal trade agreement recently concluded between Canada and Australia and now awaiting ratification, according to Samuel Lebow of the Foodstuffs Division of the Department of Commerce.

Eastern Manufacturing Concern and Compressed Gas Co. Buy Factory Sites

Two new industries for Oakland are reported. Both companies will immediately erect factories on the sites purchased. The statement of the Chamber of Commerce reads:

"The Barrow-Pringle Co., a subsidiary of A. C. Barrow & Co., Inc., Lynchburg, Va., manufacturers of overalls with national distribution, has purchased a factory site of 15,000 square feet on the southeast corner Shasta and Kennedy streets, and will erect immediately a two-story overall factory which will be completed and ready to move into by January 2, 1925.

"The new building will be 80 feet by 106 feet, with 16,000 square feet floor space. It will be a well lighted two story class "C" building with brick walls, steel sash, first floor concrete, second floor maple, with modern offices and all modern facilities including freight elevator.

"A. C. Barrow & Co., Inc., is one of the large makers of overalls in the country with subsidiary plants in Springfield, Ill., (Barrow-Smith Co.), and in Tacoma, Washington (Barrow-Scruggs Co.) It is capitalized at $500,000 and distributes its products through such concerns as Montgomery Ward & Co., J. C. Penney Company chain stores, and similar organizations having a large output and in addition it makes up special exclusive brands for large jobbing interests.

"The new plant will employ 75 to 100 people to start, increasing up to 200.

"The new plant will be built by the Austin Company of California under the direction of J. P. Hayes, construction manager, and A. R. Pease, Oakland manager.

"LeBallister & Canfield, industrial engineers, handled the real estate transaction.

ACETYLENE PLANT.

"The California Compressed Gas Co., D. J. Will, manager, has purchased a one-acre factory site on the west side of Wood street, between 22nd and 24th streets, and will build immediately a plant for the manufacture of acetylene gas used for welding metals and cutting steel. The first unit will be a one-story structural steel corrugated iron building, with concrete floor, 6000 square feet of floor space, and of modern factory construction. Bids are now being solicited for its immediate erection. The factory will start production in January, 1925.

"This will be the first acetylene plant to be built in Oakland, an industry of this type being needed by many local industries in their metal welding and steel cutting work. The new plant will employ ten people to start, increasing the number as business grows.

"The real estate transaction was handled by George Fitch, representing E. B. Field Co., industrial engineers.

"The California Compressed Gas Company will continue its oxygen plant at Third and Adeline streets, both plants as well as an oxygen plant in Seattle being under the management of D. J. Will."

BERKELEY REALTY BOARD SEEKS REPRESENTATION

BERKELEY, Nov. .—Representation on the Berkeley City Council, Board of Education and various other municipal and civic organizations will be sought by the Berkeley Realty Board, under plans outlined for a more active interest in public affairs.

That the realtor, as the real builder and father of development in the community, should take his place at the head of affairs concerning development of the city was the argument advanced by President Austin Bailey, Percy Nutt, Secretary Eugene Stephenson, D. L. Jungck, J. Henry Wolbold, Richard B. Cadwalader and others sponsoring the plan for a realtor as a city councilman and school director.

National advertising by large billboards placed at strategic points along highways beckoning motorists to visit Berkeley was again brought up by D. L. Jungck and in this respect the advantages of a more active participating in public affairs was stressed toward gaining support to such a program.

It was announced by Jungck, who a few months ago with C. C. Emslie, conducted an investigation, that forty signs could be erected and maintained at a cost of $4000 a year.

A letter was received from Henry P. Barbour, past president of the state association, thanking the Berkeley Realty Board for the support of its members during his administration.

Plans for a membership campaign to be conducted December 6 to 13, in line with a state-wide movement were discussed, it being decided that each broker should submit one new member. In this respect, it was recalled that the membership initiation fee would be increased from $10 to $25 at the beginning of the new year.

MUCH BUILDING IN SAN LEANDRO REPORTS BANK

Building activity in San Leandro is increasing rapidly. The cherry city is growing fast, according to Charles H. Hale, manager of the San Leandro branch of the American Bank.

Building permits for San Leandro during last month totaled $95,680, as against $86,231 for the corresponding month of last year. This is substantial increase, points out the banker. During the previous month, September, the building permits in San Leandro were $80,743. This, too, was an increase over September of last year. As practically all of the permits issued were for home construction, it can be evident, said Hale, that the city is growing.

Realtor Chief Elected Director Of C. of C.

RECOGNITION of the important role played by the Oakland Realtors in the development of the Eastbay community was given during the past week by the election of Willard W. White, president of the Oakland Real Estate Board, as one of the seven new directors of the Oakland Chamber of Commerce.

President White, who is also a member of the Oakland Community Council, as well as of various other civic organizations, was elected to serve on the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce for a period of three years, beginning January 1.

WAKEFIELD BLOCK IS LAST WORD IN OFFICE BUILDING

Charles W. McCall Is Architect of New Professional Building Here.

Swelling the list of new office buildings in Oakland and dominant because of its imposing design, modern facilities, skilfully devised offices is the new Wakefield building, on Seventeenth street at Broadway, opposite the Federal postoffice

Oakland keeping pace with the times, required a centralization of its physicians to provide mechanical equipment and promote fraternity Dr. W. H. Wakefield, realized this and caused this building to be erected.

The services of Charles W. McCall, architect, and his associates, were solicited. They developed a T-shaped plan designed to secure the maximum number of rooms with outside light, there being no inner courts in the building This has proven a most efficient form of plan as the elevators, stairs and toilet rooms utilize the inner angle at the intersection of the two corridors which in most buildings is wasted for lack of outside light, thus the entire space for a distance of 16 to 18 feet back from all outside walls is given to income-producing floor area.

Another original feature secured in this plan is the bringing of elevator traffic to the center of the building on the ground floor, creating arcade stores of value on the rear end of lot.

With this form of office plan the designers were able to secure the maximum of light obtainable in stores on interior lots.

A new material "Travetite," composed of reconstructed travetine marble, was used on the corridor floors and toilet room wainscot. This material is harder and less absorbent than the natural marble.

Care has been used in the designing of stairways by completely isolating one floor from another by self-closing fire doors. This item alone reduced the first insurance 10 per cent.

Oak flooring has been added on top of concrete, which will permit of the installation of conduits in pipes to the outside stacks without any annoyance to tenants on floor below.

The heating and plumbing installation was designed by George T. Arkins, in association with Mr. McCall. Unusual care has been given in the planning of heating, whereby each vertical riser may be drained independent of the rest of the plant, saving both water and fuel in case of repairs.

The building has a most complete equipment, including compressed air, power, light, cold and hot water placed in stacks on the outside walls permitting tenants to connect up their individual dental or medical fixtures. These stacks are in addition to the equipment furnished in commercial offices.

The construction is of reinforced concrete built with the Pan system concrete joists, which insures the lower initial cost and the maximum ceiling heights.

DAIRY MAIDS ENTER CONTEST

A great honor is in store for some girl of high school age at the Pacific Slope Dairy Show in Oakland, December 13, for that is the time and place for selection of the All-Western Champion Milker. Elimination contests are being held under direction of high school agricultural instructors, who will certify the local winner as eligible for the grand contest at Oakland.

There is a definite purpose back of this contest declares Robert E. Jones, manager of the show. Honors galore are paid to the girl who excels in sports or arts, and fittingly so, but the industrious farm home girl should not be forgotten when there are roses to be pinned. It is to turn public notice aside, for once, from the queens of other realms and upon the farm girl that this contest is organized.

Throughout California and Nevada the local service clubs—Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions and others—have seen in this contest an opportunity for public good. Some of the clubs are offering to the winner of the local elimination contest a trip to Oakland as a prize. In Fresno, the Lions and Rotary Club each is sponsoring a contest in a nearby rural high

Handsome trophies are offered by the Pacific Slope Dairy Show Association to the first and place winners at Oakland, in addition to diplomas for every entrant. Arrangements have been made that the girls, while in Oakland, shall make their headquarters at the Young Women's Christian Association and chaperonage from that source will be provided.

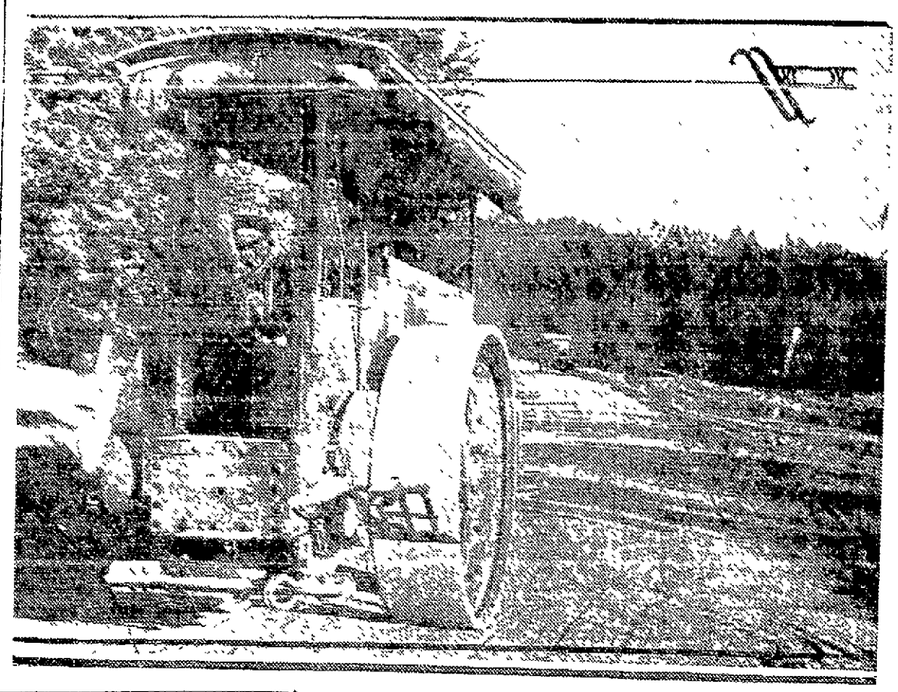
Among the high schools that are planning to send entrants to the Oakland contest are Fresno, Santa Rosa, Santa Cruz, Lodi, Madera, Chico, Santa Maria, Marysville, Hanford, Lessen Union, Antelope Valley and Ukiah.

Change in the date of holding the annual midwinter meeting of the National Association of Real Estate Boards to include an extra day for round-table meetings of its seven divisions, and approval of an amendment to the constitution so as to permit modification of the association's one-board-to-a-city membership rule in the case of cities of over 500,000 population were two important actions taken by the board of directors of the association who met with the officers and the advisory board of past presidents at Columbus, Ohio.

Production of crude petroleum during September amounted to 59,-000,000 barrels representing a decrease of 3 per cent from the preceding month and 9 per cent from September, 1923. Stocks of crude petroleum increased over both comparative periods.

Making Montera Streets

A splendid system of wide streets is now being laid out in Montera by DeLaveaga and L'Hommedieu, who are subdividing the scenic property.



OCT. BUILDING PERMITS SHOW SLIGHT INCREASE

Building permits in the United States for October showed an increase or 3 per cent over October last year, also an increase of about 16 per cent over September this year, according to the National Monthly Building Survey of S. W. Strauss & Co., made public yesterday.

Every section of the country except the Pacific west reported a gain over October, 1923; the south leading with a gain of 29 per cent. The east reported a gain of 8 per cent and the central west 2 per cent, while the Pacific west had a loss of 19 per cent The Pacific west was also the only region to show a loss from September this year.

The October gain is indicative of a continued stable, healthy trend throughout the construction industry. The tenth month should normally show an increase over September. The gain over October a year ago is an additional indication that building is progressing at a rate which should lend strength to business in general.

The 338 cities which reported to the S. W. Straus & Co, Survey for October had a total of $305,-056,214 compared with $295 571 -973 in October, 1923, and $264,-037,736 in September of this year In 94 eastern cities the figures were $138 165 166 for October this year; $125 910.930 for October 1923, and $109.100 702 for September this year. In 112 central cities the figures were $101 515,-475 for October this year; $99 -392,361 for October, 1923, and $90.609 097 for September this year. In 52 southern cities October figures this year were $27,-664.989; October, 1923, $21 395,-600, and $25,031.125 for September this year. In 80 Pacific western cities the figures were $39 710 -584 for October this year; $45,-873,082 for October, 1923, and $41,-296 509 for September this year.

The twenty-five leading cities (selected according to volume of permits issued in October this year) reported a gain of about 4 per cent over October, 1923, and about 23 per cent gain over September this year. This gain over October, 1923, was despite losses reported from seven of the twenty-five, including New York and Chicago

While the percentages of increase over October, 1923, and September, 1924 in these leading cities are slightly greater than the percentages of increase reported from the 338 cities, for corresponding periods, it is nevertheless evident that building is progressing proportionately throughout the country.

In the twenty-five cities leading on October the total was $153,-535,127, compared with $155,-473,117 in October, 1923, and $157,058 921 in September this year. Greater New York reported a loss from October, 1923 of over $3,000,000. Manhattan and the show gains. Chicago also reported a loss this October of more than $4,000,000. Gains in a number of large cities, however, were sufficient to make a total gain of more than $8,000,000 in the list of twenty-five leading cities

Record Growth In Farm Sales

The number of farm sales made in 1924 shows an increase of 42 per cent over the number in 1923, according to a national survey of the farm land market which has just been made by the National Association of Real Estate Boards. There has been an increase of 44 per cent in the number of acres sold, and an increase of 65 per cent in the total consideration paid for farms purchased.

Nine office buildings in New York City have, in the aggregate, more telephones than the whole of Peru, Ecuador, Columbia and Paraguay combined.

KNITTING CO. OPENS STORE IN OAKLAND

D S Hoffman, of the Hoffman Knitting Mills, has opened The Knittery, at Telegraph avenue and Eighteenth street. Hoffman states:

"In establishing the Knittery, we have brought the only industry of its kind to Oakland Its policy will be Direct from the factory to you' While this concern will specialize in the manufacture of sweaters, bathing suits and athletic goods for men, women and children, we will manufacture knit goods of every description."

Hoffman is well-known to the retail trade, having had 18 years' experience in the manufacture and retailing of knit goods. During the past 10 years he has opened several stores, selling their own product exclusively.

A fancy stitch knitting machine has been installed in the window of the Oakland store. This machine, which is used for demonstration purposes only, actually knits 60 yards of woolen goods a day, Hoffman says.

A. Herman has been appointed manager of this local concern

BIG HOME IS PLANNED FOR MONTERA TRACT

DeLaveaga and L'Hommedieu Say Many Homes to Be Erected.

The sale of a wooded knoll in the upper part of Montera to a family that plans to erect a handsome home is reported this week by DeLaveaga & L'Hommedieu They state:

"The sale is important because it indicates the type of residents who are arranging to build in Montera. This house will occupy the center of four large lots and the spacious grounds around it will be artistically developed. The home will be one of the show places of the Park boulevard district and will set a high standard for other homes in Montera.

"Almost every Montera buyer has purchased a lot with the intention of building a home, and this fact interests all other prospective buyers of homesites who want to build in a fast-developing district."

Radio Used as Fog Protection

The value of radio as an aid to navigation, especially as a protection against fog, the greatest of all dangers to the mariner, has been further demonstrated during the past year, George R. Putnam, Commissioner of Lighthouses, points out in his annual report submitted to Secretary Hoover and released today by the Department of Commerce. The U. S. Lighthouse Service now has twelve radio fog-signal stations in operation, with three lightships equipped for relief, and is proceeding with the establishment of other stations as rapidly as funds permit.

Packing Goods Production Grows

The Department of Commerce announces that, according to the data collected at the biennial census of manufactures 1923, the establishments (not including textile mills) engaged primarily in the manufacture of steam and other packing, pipe and boiler covering and gaskets, reported products valued at $29 497,021, an increase of 33.6 per cent as compared with 1921, the last preceding census year.

HOME BUILDING LOANS
F. W. BLANCHARD
ALAMEDA CO TITLE INS BLDG

Big Building Program at 64th Ave. and East 14th St. Enterprise of C. A. Birch

A building program, calling for the erection of 125 homes in the neighborhood of Sixty-fourth avenue and East Fourteenth street, has just been announced by C. A. Birch, builder and contractor. The homes are to contain four rooms, with breakfast nook, bath, fireproof garage and basement storage room, and will sell for $3850 on easy terms.

Birch, in making the announcement, says: "A new era in homebuilding is dawning for the wage earner, an era of lower costs and greater comforts. This is being brought about through the wider scope of the individual builder's operations, the consequent better financing, the ability to purchase material in larger quantity and to discount bills in payment, and in many other ways, all tending to minimize costs. Broadly speaking, it is the application of the same methods as those used in the automobile industry."

"Our choice of location for this building program was governed by several considerations. Inasmuch as these homes are being built to meet the requirements of industrial workers, transportation and proximity to Oakland's industrial zone are of prime importance. This tract lies between East Fourteenth street and the ultimate extension of East Twelfth street, so that these properties will eventually lie between two main arteries connecting the manufacturing area with the rich agricultural communities of our rural districts. Street car service is already there, and the Key Route, which now reaches Forty-second avenue, will be extended as soon as practicable. Markets, stores and churches are handy, and the Lockwood school is close."

Speaking of the construction features of the homes, Birch says: "Quality has been maintained throughout, and modern conveniences have been included. Each house contains a large living room and hall, with varying finishes in gum, gray enamel, mahogany, and Circassian walnut, with oak flooring; two bedrooms, one elevated, with enamel finish, and door panels in different colors; bathroom with up-to-date fixtures, including shower, fully cased in with white magnesite, also magnesite floor, roomy Dutch kitchens with plenty of cabinet space, cooler, combination wash tray, and concealed fixture ironing board, finish of two-toned light colors with inlaid linoleum to match; a prettily decorated breakfast room is also included. Wallpaper and electric fixtures are of good design and in excellent taste. Each house is equipped for heating with a new labor saving and economical device known as the Electro-Gas supplied by Frank L. Pollard company. The garage is fireproof, and located below the elevated bedroom. Ample closet room is provided for."

"The lots are 125 feet deep, lawns are in, also fences. The depth affords space for gardening or other hobbies at the rear of each home. Soil is considered fertile. Windows are washed before the houses are turned over to the purchasers. In fact, everything is made ready to "just move in."

Of the total price of $3850, only $350 need be cash; the balance may be paid as rent. Drive out East Fourteenth street to Sixty-fourth avenue, and turn to the right. The houses are ready for inspection today."

Ice Cream Mftrs. To Meet at Show

Five hundred or more ice cream manufacturers from all sections of the West will gather at Oakland on December 10 for a three day convention which will be held in connection with the Pacific Slope Dairy Show and is expected to establish several records for the ice cream industry, declares Jay Kugler secretary of the arrangements committee.

It is the first time that the California and Southwestern States Ice Cream Manufacturers' Association and the Pacific Ice Cream Manufacturers' Association have ever met in joint convention and the committee in charge of the program has made an effort to provide something worthy of the long trip that many of the delegates will have to make.

SMALL HOMES HEATING PROBLEM HELD SOLVED

Electrogas Floor Furnaces in Big Demand, Says F. L. Pollard.

The problem of heating the small cottage without a basement has been a serious one, and the advent of the Electrogas Floor Furnace some four years ago was therefore welcomed, declares Frank L. Pollard. He stated:

"This little furnace has a very small register, 11x16 inches, and does not require the cutting of a floor joist. One of the greatest features of this furnace, however, is their lighting system. A small spark plug attached to a dry battery or a transformer provides a spark that eliminates all the lighting with matches or the burning of a pilot. All that is necessary is to turn a key and instantly your furnace is burning and throwing enough heat to quickly heat five thousand cubic feet of space. There is no chance for gas fumes, odors or moist re in the home.

"The radiating surface is so arranged as to give greater heat for less gas consumption.

"Last month the Frank L. Pollard company installed one hundred and thirteen of these wonderful furnaces and expect to duplicate their high record this month."

The Department of Commerce announces that, according to the data collected at the biennial census of manufactures, 1923, the establishment engaged primarily in the manufacture of beverages reported a total output valued at $226,188,562, a decrease of 4.8 per cent as compared with 1921, the last preceding census year.

EASTERN MONEY IS INVESTED IN APARTMENTS

M. G. Kendall Says Investors Here From Eastern and Middle West Points.

Eastern money, middlewest money, local money is being converted into income property on a larger scale than ever before, according to M. G. Kendall of the California Builders' Company, veteran Eastbay apartment builders and apartment building loan experts.

"Nearly every day a newcomer to Oakland walks into our office and announces that he is anxious to build an apartment in Oakland or nearby. Grand Rapids, Mich., Syracuse, N. Y., Brooklyn, N. Y., Chicago, Salt Lake, Boise City, Great Falls, and a small town in North Dakota are among the communities represented on our books," said Kendall.

"Oakland is growing at the rate of 5000 new families a year. And a great many of these families have come to Oakland to put their money into sound building investment.

"They naturally turn to the apartment field which we have proven is one of the most profitable there is. Then, too, there are many local men and women. For some of these we have built as many as five apartments or apartment-flats. Each is more than pleased with the income return.

"The California Builders' Company not only furnish all the money to build an apartment but our long experience has taught us to save the owner money by keeping down construction costs.

"Our superintendent of construction, H. D. Jones, has made a special study of apartment construction. We have a trained corps of workmen, skilled men who have been with this firm as long as nine years.

"Then, too, we purchase our equipment in quantity lots, benefiting in buying at the wholesale rate, a benefit we pass along to our clients."

PROPOSE FARM LAND APPRAISAL COMMITTEE

Organization of special appraisal committees to do for farm lands what the appraisal committees already functioning in real estate boards are doing for urban property is urged in resolutions just passed by the Colorado Association of Real Estate Boards. The resolution recommends the formation of farm land appraisal committees in every real estate board in the state in order to facilitate the sale of farm lands.

Appraisal committees are now functioning in more than 125 real estate boards within the membership of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. These bodies, made up of men chosen for their expert knowledge of values. Real estate board appraisals are becoming of increasing importance in estimating land values for income tax purposes, for sales, for condemnation proceedings, for court proceedings, and for the acquiring of lands by municipalities and by the federal government. Through "appraisal schools" conducted by the boards the factors making up urban land value have been analyzed and a knowledge has been built up of the weight and relation of these factors.

Officers of the National Association of Real Estate Boards point out that the setting up of special land appraisal committee in real estate serving an agricultural territory should not only clear the way for a better farm land market by setting up machinery through which buyer and seller may obtain an authoritative measurement of the actual present value of any piece of farm land under consideration, but it should also be a first [illegible] understanding of what makes farm land value.

Locomotive shipments by principal manufactures during October totaled 96 as against 104 in September and 310 a year ago. Orders unfilled as of October 31, called for 462 locomotives as against 386 at the end of the previous month and 977 a year ago. Tin deliveries in October amounted to 5090 tons as compared with 4985 tons in September and 5540 in October, 1923. Stocks of tin in the United States on October 31 were less than on September 30, or October 31, 1923.

REDUCTION IN INDUSTRY WASTE NOTED BY HOOVER

American industries are giving more serious attention now than ever before to the reduction of industrial waste arising from excess variety in styles, sizes or types of manufactured commodities, says a report of the division of simplified practice to Secretary of Commerce Hoover, who established this division three years ago as an agency to cooperate in checking the tremendous drain on the nation due to waste in industry.

During the year ending June 30, 1924 there was an increasing demand for the services of the division in bringing together the producers, distributors and users of various industrial products to take joint action in eliminating the unnecessary diversity. There were also many requests for information as to the economic importance of simplified practice, the report says, and as to the experiences of other groups which have increased production and sales; and overcome seasonal employment; while reducing inventory and production costs and thereby saved millions of dollars.

RED-LETTER DAYS.

July 1, the report shows, was a red-letter day for a number of industries. This date had been selected by joint conferences of manufacturers, distributors and consumers in several industries as the time for "simplified lines" to become effective. Most notable among these was the lumber industry in which grades, sizes and nomenclature for soft woods were standardized, and a nation-wide correlation of inspection service developed for the protection of consumers. The estimated reduction through simplification in the lumber industry is 60 per cent in the number of yard lumber items. It is predicted that the simplification undertaken will be an important step toward checking the waste which totals $250,000,000 in this industry every year.

Other simplifications which became effective July 1 were: Metal lath, reduced from 125 to 24 varieties; hotel chinaware, in which 700 or more items were reduced to 160; forged tools, in which an elimination of 46 per cent was made in types, sizes and weights; paper, in which eight sizes and their "doubles" were adopted as standard for all general uses, and were declared to offer enormous economies; roofing slate, in which the reductions were from 21 thicknesses to 10; 60 sizes to 30, and 17 descriptive terms cut to 8; and blackboard slate, simplified from 90 sizes to 3 for fixed wall blackboards, 141 sizes to 14 for portable boards, and 20 sizes to 8 for school and memorandum slates.

Another of the red-letter days was January 1 of this year, says the report, when asphalt penetration limits for paving and construction work were reduced from 88 to 9; woven wire fencing simplified from 552 styles and sizes to 69 and the package sizes cut from 2072 to 139; milk bottles reduced from 46 to 9 varieties and the size of milk bottle caps from 29 to 1; while hollow building tile was simplified from 36 types, sizes and weights to 10.

NEW YEAR IMPORTANT.

January 1, 1925, promises to be almost equal in importance from the standpoint of simplification, the report shows, for simplification of brass lavatory and sink traps from 1114 to 72 varieties will become effective then; as will a 63 per cent reduction in steel barrels and drums; a simplification of 1500 varieties of bolts and nuts for farm equipment to 840; a reduction in varieties of hot water storage tanks from 120 to 14; and a simplification in structural slate which will reduce plumbing slate items 87 per cent and 61 per cent on items for sanitary purposes. In builders' hardware a reduction of 71 per cent in the number of recognized finishes offered by leading manufacturerers will be accompanied by a decrease of 26 per cent of the 7000 catalog items in this class, effective on the same date. Hospitals will likewise begin to make use of simplified practice with respect to the dimensions of hospital beds, 33 variations of length being reduced to one standard; 34 widths being reduced to one standard and two special widths; and 44 height variations giving way to one standard on that date.

While this work has been progressing on land, the American marine standards committee has undertaken a similar effort in the many elements of ship construction in the three technical divisions of hull details, engineering details, and ship operation. Thirty-eight subject committees are at work on tentative standards for the various items of these three groups. From the progress made thus far, the report says, many simplifications are forecasted. The division is cooperating in this effort to improve the efficiency and lower the cost of operation for American shipping.

Typical of the industries which are now using the services of the division to promote simplifications in their fields, the report states, is the concreate block industry. Concrete blocks are now made in 30 variations of length, 20 different widths, and 26 heights. One height, one length and two widths are being sought by the Concrete Products association and the American Concrete Institute, and a general conference is to be held soon.

Cafeterias and lunch rooms are following the example of hotels in a study of varieties of chinaware, in order that reductions of variety may be recommended for action at the annual convention of the American Restaurant association.

An excess of varieties and sizes of refractories used in steel manufacture is being surveyed for an early simplification; and similar action is planned in the case of steel lockers, now manufactured in 46 size combinations, steel reinforcing bars, warehouse forms, oil storage taks, sheet steel, [illegible] sash and doors, and other items.

Initial surveys are in process, says the report, for the following industries: Automotive parts, gas water heaters, steam boilers, copper boilers, hacksaw blades, screw drivers, pocket knives, collapsible tubes, loaded shotgun shells, dental supplies, cotton fabric colors, wood handles for tools, lockwashers and nut locks, drills and reamers, milling cutters, taps and dies, and some in some 20 other fields.

In addition to the simplification in the lumber industry, a member of the division staff is preparing reports on the utilizatio of waste in the lumber industry. One is based on surveys in the Pacific Northwest and the other on studies in the Southern states. These will be embodied in reports on causes for present waste, and will analyze briefly the various solutions offered as possible remedies for the prevention of wasteful practices. The reports will be issued in the near future.

The division, the report says, has had the active cooperation in its services of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the American Engineering Standards committee, and the former personnel of the War Industries Board.

CALIF. BOND & MORTGAGE CO. HEAD ON TOUR

M. A. Strang, president of the California Band & Mortgage Company of this city, left on a business trip through the East last week. Strang will visit Chicago, New York, Boston, Washington, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis and Kansas City on his trip. He will call on several large insurance companies and other financial institutions to whom the California Bond & Mortgage Company sells its mortgages. Strang said, "I am making this trip in order to make preparations for the large volume of business which our company expects to do in Oakland in the coming year. We sell many of our mortgages to life insurance companies which of itself speaks well for the type of investments we have to offer the public, as there are no more conservative investors than the insurance companies. During the company's years of successful business we have sold many hundred thousand dollars worth of our mortgages to these companies. We also number among our investors, endowed schools, attorneys, trustees of estates and numerous individuals. The service our company renders to investors adds to the attractiveness of our investments, as we attend to the collection of interest and principal, and relieve investors of the details in connection with loaning money on ordinary mortgages."

Both the exports and the imports of chemicals and allied products from the United States showed losses during the first nine months of 1924 as compared with the corresponding period of 1923, the former, 9 per cent, and the latter, 18 per cent, according to the chemical division of the department of commerce. The exports had an aggregate value of $102,910,087, and the imports $132,094,514.

MANY FEATURES IN LAKESHORE HIGHLANDS

"Children are the potential home buyers," declared Harry E. Leimert of the Walter H. Leimert Co., owners and subdividers of Lakeshore Highlands, in speaking of the lure of Lakeshore Highlands.

"Mothers and fathers who are looking about for homes and homesites choose those districts where the youngsters will have plenty of play space, where schools are conveniently located and where transportation is good.

"And that is why so many families are buying in Lakeshore Highlands. Here we have developed a real home park. The homesites are of ample frontage. There are trees and parking spaces and wide streets. There are hills to wander over. The schools are close by. San Francisco and local transportation are at our doors. There is everything that goes to make a home appealing to boys and girls, grownups and kiddies.

"If every home tract that is laid out, is laid out first of all for the children, why the selling of homesites is easy. Parents think of their children first. So should realtors. And that is what we have done in Lakeshore Highlands. Practically every home in Lakeshore Highlands (and there are more than 450 of them), boasts a family of children, from one to four and more."

VENTURA CO. TO EXHIBIT AT SHOW

Ventura County will have an exhibit in the counties section of the Pacific Slope Dairy Show at Oakland, December 10-16, according to word received today from A. M. Robertson, secretary of the Oxnard Chamber of Commerce by Robert E. Jones, manager of the show.

Ventura has taken its place among those other California counties where the dairy industry is of outstanding importance and will have an interesting story of tell through its exhibit at the show. San Joaquin, Stanislaus, Alameda, San Luis Obispo, Kings, Yolo and Sacramento are among others that will have community exhibits.

In arranging their displays at Oakland, the counties seek to tell a story of what each has to offer the prospective dairy settler and, in the judging, selling appeal will be one of the points considered.

The department of commerce announces that, according to data collected at the biennial census of manufactures, 1922, the establishments engaged primarily in glass cutting, staining and ornamenting reported products valued at $25,026,557, an increase of 12.7 per cent as compared with $22,209,476 in 1921, the last preceding census year. The principal classes of work done by establishments included in this industry are glass cutting, glass beveling, bending sheet glass, engraving on glass, making glass labels, and staining or ornamenting glass.

Among the forty-eight states that make up the United States of America, there are five each of which has more telephones than the entire continent of Asia.

FISHER & JAMES TAKE PARADISE BALLROOM LEASE

Formal Opening Is Attended by Large Gathering of Friends.

Announcement is made that Bud Fisher and George J. James, well-known Oakland business men, have taken a long-term lease on Paradise Gardens at Twelfth and Oak, where they will conduct an institution devoted to the art of dancing. A formal opening was given last Tuesday night, with over a thousand people in attendance.

The management states that it has secured the services of Madam Carita, formerly with the Shuberts and Flo Zeigfeld shows, who has been trained in the technique of Russian ballet and social fancy dancing. There will also be a revival of the old school dances under accomplished teachers, who will preside at the various studios provided.

The Paradise Gardens orchestra consists of nine musicians. When the necessary equipment is installed they will contribute to the regular radio concerts, it is stated.

Outside of the main ballroom, which has 8000 square feet of dancing area, there are four studios devoted to dancing classes. Roof garden studios are also a feature which will be developed for open air dancing.

EXAMINATION IS ASKED BY BOARD

A flat requirement that all persons admitted to the board as active or junior (salesmen) member shall first pass an examination to prove his knowledge of real estate methods and form has been enforced by the Indianapolis Real Estate Board since January. The provision was adopted as part of the by-laws of the board.

A membership examining board of at least three members makes the rest. The applicant is required to be familiar with the code of ethics of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, and to answer in writing questions.

Albers Brothers Milling company of San Francisco, has filed a complaint with the railroad commission against Southern Pacific company, alleging that defendant is collecting excessive rates on cereals and cereal products from central California to southern California points, and asking reparation for the alleged excessive charges.

Eastbay Cities Are Foremost In Building

THE Eastbay cities stand ninth in the United States in building permits for the first nine months of 1924, displacing Milwaukee and yielding eighth place to San Francisco by a margin of only $3,600,000, the Chamber of Commerce points out. Building permits of the Eastbay exceed such cities as Baltimore, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Washington, D. C. and Newark, New Jersey.

HACIENDAS DEL ORINDA ATTRACTS MANY FAMILIES

The advantages of a country home, particularly to residents of the Bay region, are set forth by DeLaveaga & L'Hommedieu with reference to the Haciendas del Orinda, the new country club and country home community situated in Contra Costa County, about ten miles from Oakland. A recent statement of the company says:

"How can we inculcate into our children a true love of the out-of-doors in these days of the automobile?

"The answer to the question, we believe, is in having a country home that is made possible by the automobile.

"At Haciendas del Orinda the dominant spirit of the community is outdoor play. Golf, swimming, tennis, horseback riding and all the other forms of recreation are only an indication of the delights to be enjoyed. Children here will have this big homesite as a playground.

"Haciendas del Orinda is near enough to town for the man of business to commute daily if he desires and for the older children to drive back and forth to school. The smaller children are to be provided for by the beautiful new schoolhouse nearing completion immediately adjoining Haciendas del Orinda.

Haciendas del Orinda is not a project that is merely planned. Already the largest part of the construction work has been completed and the rest is rapidly being finished. About 200 representative families have purchased sites for their country homes and some very elaborate residences are being planned. The organization of the Orinda Country Club, a separate corporation of the property owners at Haciendas del Orinda, has been completed and members are joining as they purchase homesites."

There are more telephones in use in the single state of Pennsylvania than in France, Italy, Russia and Austria combined.

NEW TITLE CO. TO OPEN OFFICES IN OAKLAND

Central Title Company to Occupy Premises at 1727 Webster Street.

The Central Title Company, a California corporation, is about to open offices in this city, it is announced by P. A. Smith, the manager. The location will be at 1727 Webster street, and the offices will be open for business, Monday, December 8. Commenting on the opening, Smith said:

"The company is a closed corporation, that has been financed by the officers and employees actively engaged in the conduct of its business. This plan of operation makes for the highest economy and efficiency.

"For the present, operations will be confined to the issuance of certificates of title only, though at a later date the scope of activities will probably be widened. The service is one intended to appeal particularly to home buyers, or other realty transactions."

FEW COAST RADIO STATIONS CAUGHT EUROPEAN SIGNAL

"Radio Week" a Disappointment to Pacific Fans Seeking for Distance.

The first confirmation of the reception of a European station in this locality was received in Oakland late yesterday from Radio Broadcast. Thomas Beebe of Oakland received 2LO on a 3-tube super hetrodyne on the evening of Nov. 24. The reception was confirmed by cable and telegraphed to Beebe. The set was one constructed by the E. M. Sargent company of Oakland.

By SETH T. BAILEY.

International radio week resulted in only a limited amount of success in picking up programs broadcast by foreign stations, in so far as the Pacific Coast is concerned. There were but four days of the test in which coast fans could listen in, and there were some complaints because this time was not extended throughout the entire week, as was done in the east. On the other hand there were thousands, who, during the four quiet hours, did not hear a single station, while others picked up Salt Lake, Calgary, some of the middle western stations that were obliged to broadcast programs during the quiet hours, and Fort Worth, Texas.

During the four quiet hours of listening in there were not more than a round dozen who heard European signals. Many thought they did and were filled with enthusiasm to the point of calling up everyone who would be interested, only to learn later that the signal they thought to come from Europe emanated from some source in America.

NO CONFIRMATIONS.

To date there have been no authentic confirmations from European stations of the reception of their signals on the coast. Those who reported the call letters of European stations and parts of the programs heard were for the most part residents of the mountain country where interference from power lines and other sources of electrical disturbance is practically negligible, compared with the interference the city listener-in has to contend with. Wilfred Carpenter at Oakley, California, received 5NO located at Newcastle, England. The reception occurred at 8:40 Pacific time and was held until 8:50. The music was clear but very faint with practically no interference.

Much interference was caused from single circuit sets. Many reported picking up signals they were sure would have proved to be from Europe had the signal circuit sets not chopped it up so badly.

Tuesday night was the best evening for the reception. Thursday night also proved to be good. Monday and Wednesday nights were both choppy. Interference from several coast stations which were compelled to go on the air at some time between 8 and 9 o'clock because of the nature of the programs or because of previous arrangements which could not be altered, also broke up the reception.

QUIET AIDED MANY.

Because of the quiet hour many fans heard stations in the United States that they had never picked up previously.

On Tuesday night many reported picking up a soprano solo at about 370 or 380 meters sung in German. Two spark stations, however, ruined the reception for everyone. A few minutes of a piano solo was picked up by the same listeners-in. The announcements were in a foreign tongue, but again on account of the two spark stations it was impossible to identify the call.

Several reports of the reception of 2LO at London were made, but to date I have not learned of any of them having been confirmed.

Of those who believe they heard 2LO, Vincent Long of 1812 Thirty-ninth avenue, Oakland, seems to have the most authentic information from which it may be possible to verify the reception. Working with a two-tube Harkness Reflex set, he heard poetry and piano music at 8:15 Thursday evening and heard the announcer say "2LO at London, England." He produces two witnesses who also heard 2LO.

It will probably be several days before an authentic check can be made to determine the result of the tests.

One thing was obvious. American broadcasting stations are far superior to those of Europe, for there is no spot in Europe where American stations are not heard distinctly, especially those on the Atlantic coast.

International Radio Barred by Time

Special Correspondent of The Oakland TRIBUNE.
(Copyright, 1924, by The Oakland TRIBUNE.)
BY CONSOLIDATED PRESS LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—Now that the fortunate among radio fans have tuned in on Europe for a brief bit of unusual entertainment they can turn right around and switch back contentedly to their old favorites among American stations, certainly it will be quite a little while before international broadcasting for pleasure becomes a popular pastime.

Strange thrills will continue tonight and Saturday night for those with receiving sets which will gather in the strange babble of French, Spanish, Italian, German, Dutch, Russian and English voices that penetrate distances and static to trickle into American earphones. But after that radio internationalism will lag again.

Time, just plain time, government radio officials here say, is cause for the damper placed on the enthusiasm of distances seeking fans who prefer listening in on other lands to confinement to programs this country has to offer.

Trouble comes in the fact that while it is 12 o'clock and time to shut down in Europe its only 6 o'clock out in this part of the United States. While Europeans are enjoying their evening's entertainment, Americans are only getting warmed up to the day's work. And Europeans on the their part are about ready to arise for another day when Americans are just finishing their night's program.

This divergence in time causes an insurmountable difficulty to a real internationalism in radio entertainment. It is found here, too, that difficulties are increased by static that appears to be setting up a barrier to European sound waves. Then on top of that interference from local sending stations puts any thought of distance receiving out of the question unless they agree to quiet periods.

Experiments of the week have shown, however, the government officials declare, that radio can knit together the radio audiences of a good share of the world. The fact that stations in England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, Belgium, Holland, France, Germany, Italy, Spain and Russia have been heard by persons here in the middlewest during the internationally arranged quiet hour, shows what can be done with broadcasting.

Point is made of the fact that some day during an international crisis, broadcasting may be brought into play to avert trouble by appeal to the radio audiences. There comes, too, the suggestion that Esperanto, or some other form of international language may receive an impetus.

But at the same time despite the enthusiasm of those who've connected with stations from the other side of the Atlantic it is a far cry to the day when this country can swap broadcasting programs with Europeans as a regular thing.

INDIA TAXES UP RADIO.

In India, radio clubs have been organized at Bombay, Calcutta and Madras, and another is projected in Allahabad. The Dacca University at Bombay now includes in its curriculum instruction in wireless telegraphy. A receiving set recently installed there brings in broadcasts from Calcutta.

RADIO FACTORY WORKS AT NIGHT

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 29.—The present healthy condition of the radio business is an interesting contrast to what was considered to be the outlook four years ago, when broadcasting first began. Then it was predicted that radio was merely a fad which would quickly run its course and take its place in history with all other fads. But today the "invisible audience" in this country is estimated at 10,000,000 persons; a quarter of a million persons are connected with the industry itself, and last year a total radio business approximating $115,000,000 was done in this country alone.

Further proof that public interest in radio is even greater this year than it was last is seen in the announcement of the Atwater Kent Manufacturing Company, of this city, that it has been necessary to inaugurate a 24-hour working schedule in an effort to catch up with the demand for receiving sets and loud speakers.

The announcement is of particular significance in view of the fact that Atwater Kent is occupying a new factory, completed only last spring, which is said to be the largest plant in this country devoted exclusively to radio manufacture. It covers 10 acres and has 416,000 square feet of floor space.

The building, one-story in height, was designed to afford daylight illumination for the workers, but so great has been the volume of orders that factory output has fallen far behind, and it was decided to resort to night work, and some departments have been running without cessation night and day with the workers on three shifts of eight hours each.

RADIO STANDARDS IMPROVE IN YEAR

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—As part of its work in establishing electrical standards, the Bureau of Standards, has increased the accuracy of radio-frequency standards and measurements during the year. Broadcasters, as well as other radio stations, were directly aided in keeping on their assigned wave lengths, which naturally aided the radio broadcast listeners in tuning and eliminated some interference.

In the annual report, the radio section of the bureau points out that progress in the reduction of radio interference depends on the maintaining of transmitting stations on their assigned frequencies. Stations were directly aided in holding their frequencies constant by the establishment of standard frequency stations, by measurements of station frequencies at the bureau laboratory, and by the transmission of standard frequency signals from the bureau station WWV.

Two advances in radio beacons were made recently. One was the completion of the development of a directive system which enables a ship or aircraft to follow a specific course with the aid of ordinary receiving apparatus. The other was the construction of a low-power beacon apparatus which will be placed in service on buoys and may become an important new aid to navigation.

In cooperation with government and manufacturing interests the electron tubes used in radio, and methods for testing have been standardized. Applications of the tubes have been made in numerous practical radio receiving problems. In its radio standardization projects and technical investigations the bureau has cooperated with the various national engineering and scientific societies and with the other government departments and boards having to do with radio. Direct service has been rendered to various branches of the government on a large number of technical radio problems.

U. S. Radio Expert Quits Public Service

Laurens E. Whittemore, for the past two years Secretary of the Interdepartmental Radio Advisory Committee of the Government and formerly of the Bureau of Standards, has resigned to accept a position in the development and research department of the American Tel. and Tel. Co. He will not go to New York until the first of the year, before which time it is expected his successor will be appointed.

Swedish Government Station Opens Dec. 2

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 29.—The government's new high-powered wireless station at Varberg, on the west coast of Sweden, is to begin commercial service on December 2, facilities to be extended to the press later. The station cost $1,350,000.

'EUROPEAN' RADIO STATION BARED AS AMATEUR'S HOAX

Foreign Pick-up Proves to Be High School Quartet in Healdsburg.

HEALDSBURG, Nov. 29.—Radio listeners-in who have been "getting" foreign stations during the present week, when each evening between 8 and 9 o'clock regular American broadcasting stations have been silent, will be rudely shocked to learn that it is likely they have not heard foreign stations at all.

The operator of amateur station 6WS, located at Healdsburg, was caught Thursday night about 8:30 o'clock operating his set on a meter length estimated at between 340 and 360 meters, and sending out programs consisting of male voices furnished by a quartet of local high school boys. A local listener-in, becoming suspicious, invaded the "studio" of this station at 8:40 o'clock Thursday night, just as the operator was giving a station call for "Station 5SC, Glasgow, Scotland." A complaint will be made to Radio Inspector Dillon on account of the alleged violation of the law prohibiting amateurs from operating in wave bands not set apart for them, for operating during the period of time all amateurs are prohibited from broadcasting, and for sending fraudulent messages.

In the meantime listeners-in in Sonoma county and the North-of-Bay section are wondering if they really have heard any foreign stations broadcasting.

LONDON.—A church in Northwestern London put up a sign reading, "Hello, everybody, God calling. Come and listen-in." It brought the largest congregation ever seen there.

RADIO FREQUENCY SPEED INCREASED BY ARMY EXPERTS

Transmission to Be 10 Times Faster Soon. Says Chief Signal Officer.

By Washington Radio News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Radio messages of the future, including diagrams, photographs and the sender's signature, will be transmitted by radio frequency at a rate ten times faster than is now possible by hand transmission, according to Brigadier General Charles McK. Saltzman, chief signal officer of the army in his annual report just released.

"Mechanical transmitters with higher speed qualities are becoming stabilized and American invention seems to be making further and rapid progress in associating photography with radio, which bids fair to revolutionize fundamental methods of transmission," General Saltzman points out. "Military messages of the future, particularly in active operations, may contain diagrams and sketches or even entire sheets of maps, all transmitted as part of the same message, and in a method by which detection or listening in will be reduced to a very low minimum," he continues.

EXPERIMENTS CONTINUE.

The signal corps is keeping abreast of this process and will undertake experiments to establish the military value of this invention. The process referred to is understood to be the invention of C. Francis Jenkins of Washington D. C., who has sent such matter by radio, or the method of transmitting pictures by wire of the American Tel. & Tel. Co., which is also said to be applicable to radio transmission.

The navy as well as the signal corps of the army is known to be interested in the military application of these processes. At one time it was planned to ask for bids for transmitting and receiving apparatus, but it is believed that this plan was abandoned recently due to lack of funds. In any event, both the navy and army radio experts realize that the old system of manuel sending by dots and dashes is reaching its limit, due to demands for speed and accuracy. High speed mechanical transmitters and recording receivers, such as are used in trans-oceanic radio commercial circuits, are being used in important government radio circuits, and it is evident that the fighting arms of the Government plan test of the new photo-radio transmission schemes.

107 STATIONS USED.

The army nation-wide radio net now comprises 107 stations, the chief ones being the Washington message or control center operating the Sayville transmitter, Boston, Mass.; Ft. Howard, Md.; Ft. McPherson, Ga.; Ft. Hayes, Ohio; Chicago, Ill.; Ft. Omaha, Neb., Ft. Douglass, Utah; Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.; Presidio, San Francisco; Ft. Leavenworth, Kans., and Governor's Island, N. Y. In addition there are 46 Corps Area stations, 13 air service fields, 19 coast defense posts, and 17 stations in the U. S. Insular possessions. During the past fiscal year ten KW transmitters were installed at Fort Douglass and Fort Leavenworth, forming two important units in the trans-continental communication circuits. The next undertaking is to equip Annapolis with a 20 KW set to replace Sayville. This set will be controlled from WAC at Washington, and used in communicating with San Antonio, Texas direct, at least during the winter months.

Authority for 431 more enlisted men for the signal corps is sought. With a total personnel of 243 officers and 2289 enlisted men the signal corps has handled 75 per cent of the government's official messages, besides doing its regular routine work and research and development. The year's work shows remarkable success in designing radio apparatus for the several military arms, particularly in short-wave researches, which bids fair to work remarkable changes in modern radio equipment, according to the annual report.

Although the regular army is reported fully equipped with radio apparatus, the national guard is said to be only about half equipped and has no modern sets. Because radio equipment is always becoming obsolete, it is estimated that the cost of signal equipment in a national mobilization would be $17,000,000. In the event of war, the signal corps would have to buy radio equipment in the open market.

RADIO FINANCES BEING TAKEN UP BY WALL STREET

Capital Has Ceased to Look on Industry as Trivial, Stock Reports Show.

SPECIAL BY WIRE TO THE TRIBUNE

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The interest of Wall Street and some of its most conservative houses in the rapidly growing radio industry is taken by those engaged in the industry as a most favorable indication of its future.

Capital has ceased to consider radio as a toy that is having its popular day. It is now being taken seriously in even the most conservative and exclusive financial circles as the most remarkable development of an industry since the advent of the automobile and as such is attracting real sound capital that can have but one effect on radio in general—stability, quantity production of quality apparatus at lower prices and the interest of those whose financial support is responsible for the development of every industry of the world.

The head of one of New York's most conservative banking houses, in a statement issued to the press is enthusiastic in his belief that the present era of the industry is only the foundation of a far greater future.

"Less than three years ago," he said, "radio, was considered by many to be at the cross roads. One led to the future that comes to a toy which has its popular day and then passes on into oblivion to make way for a new novelty. The other road presented a picture of remarkable development and the creation of a stabilized nation wide industry.

The prospective finances of the new industry were in doubt as to which road it was destined to take. The conservatives of the country just marked time waiting for a more positive indication.

"That indication has come, according to the interviewed, who said 'The future of radio is bounded by possibilities that for the present can be only dreamed.' It is now playing a most important part in the education, entertainment, commerce and industry of the world. And even now in its great development this is only the beginning.

"In its earliest days the manufacture of radio equipment had to a large degree been in the hands of mushroom groups; no standardization, few scruples about producing worthy apparatus and haphazard distribution by manufacturers with little knowledge of the requirements of the industry or the ability to fill them. The market was glutted with clap-trap apparatus manufactured by fly by nights under impossible promises of performance and in most cases incapable of rendering any other result than that of dissatisfying some one with the whole business who in turn dissatisfied many others, all of which greatly retarded the advance of radio's popularity with the public.

"That period is past now. Very few of the irresponsible manufacturers have been able to stand up solvently before the growth and methods of the responsible manufacturers and the path of radio's advance is well strewn with many well deserved failures.

"The stabilization of radio has made it a most attractive field for the investment of large capital. Hard-headed capitalists see in it attractive returns in the future, with manufacturing on the large scale that is now possible and the ready absorption of all reliable apparatus by an even growing market. Under up-to-date factory methods, economies make it possible to turn out goods better in quality and at more attractive prices to the buyer. This in turn naturally stimulates consumption of radio apparatus and parts, resulting in benefit to both the manufacturers, the dealer and the buyer.

"Another important result of the stabilization of radio is the entry into the radio manufacturing field of men best qualified to produce on a large scale. Men who held aloof while shoddy equipment was the rule now see a field for their best endeavor. The midnight lamp ... in the laboratories at many a point where experts are giving the best that is in them for the advancement of radio art."

BRITISH DOCTORS SAY DRUNKARDS SHOULD NOT WED

Distinguished Alienist Asserts Alcoholism Breeds Degeneracy.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Dr. T. R. Hyslop, the distinguished alienist, who was for some years medical superintendent of Bethlam hospital, has published a book discussing problems of insanity that may become the centre of discussion and perhaps controversy among both medical men and the laity.

Alcoholism is one of the subjects dealt with in the book, which is entitled "The Borderland." Dr. Hyslop says:

"We see so many evidences of degeneration resulting from alcoholism in parents that I am strongly of the opinion that just as the habitual drunkard is deprived of his liberty . . . . so the existence of the alcoholic habit should be considered as a bar to matrimony.

"Any person who has made alcohol a necessity, or is unable to resist the temptation to indulge in alcohol, may attain to a certain degree of success in mind or in pocket, but, biologically considered, the world would be the better had he never been born into it; and, needless to say, the marriage of such a one is, in my opinion, a biological sin, and ought to be barred by law.

"For practical purposes three convictions for drunkenness should debar such a person from the risk of polluting the community by the propagation of degenerates."

Nonagenarian Dies At Santa Cruz Home

SANTA CRUZ, Nov. 29.—Miss Louise Stewart, 90, aunt of Rev. E. C. Phileo Presbyterian pastor of Oakland, died last Friday evening at a local hospital after a long illness. She was a native of Ohio.

She had been residing with her sister, Mrs. Laura Phileo, for a number of years. Miss Stewart leaves the one sister and several nephews and nieces.

SWEARING IS AID TO HEALTH, SAYS BRITISH DOCTOR

LONDON, Nov. 24.—That one should swear for health's sake is the theory of Dr. F. W. Broderick, a well-known physician of Bournemouth.

"Worry, the enemy of civilized mankind," says Dr. Broderick, "is to the body what friction is to the machine, and will wear out that body as quickly. It is in its rather, the alternate emotions of fear and hope, succeeding rapidly.

"Fear produces in beasts all the conditions favorable to great physical effort. The stimulation of the heart and lungs is necessary to enable the animal or primitive man to make the supreme effort to fight or escape, and the increased activity of the endocrine organs to the same end increases the fuel available for the great increase of work the body must undertake.

"Civilized man inherits that reaction, and now when the emotion of fear is felt strongly, certain of his organs are stimulated and certain inhibited, and his body is immediately prepared for action.

"If worry is a modification of fear brought about by civilization, and consists of rapidly recurring stimulations caused by this emotion, then it will happen that the secretions of the endocrine glands will be continuously in the blood in greater quantities than they should be. As Nature's way of burning up these secretions as fast as they are formed, by fight or flight, is forbidden by the rules under which we live, we need to bring about the same results by other methods.

"Golf and tennis are the ideal methods for the harassed brain worker of today, and all energetic hobbies are in this way more than justified. But in many instances of worry these hardly meet the case. What other ways, then, have we of consuming our own secretions, and overcoming that vantage in the struggle, to us is a constant danger?

"Laughter and tears are muscular efforts, for both are brought about by great muscular movements of the chest wall and surrounding parts, and the relief of both is recognized in that of emotional stress. Handclapping, booing, yawning, all come within the same category.

"There are, however, times when these methods of relief are denied us, and it is here that the expletive—the more violent and explosive the better—comes in so useful. A full-hearted oath really meant, even though said under the breath, is, as we all know, very useful in helping us to bear our troubles.

"Personally I believe that men, particularly harassed men, swear not from any profane reason. Rather it shows that the persons concerned have discovered automatically that they are definitely relieved thereby and feel the better for it.

"Swearing becomes then not a wicked act at all, but rather Nature's way of keeping the body in health, acting as a safety valve to the emotions."

EXPERTS THRESH OUT SHIP, SHORE RADIO PROBLEMS

Standardization of Equipment and New Wave Rules to Promote Industry.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Radio problems affecting the public as well as radio manufacturers and distributors formed the basis of the discussions at the semi-annual meeting of the Radio Section of the A. M. E. S. (Associated Manufacturers of Electrical Supplies) held this week at the Hotel Roosevelt, New York.

The leading scientific, manufacturing and electrical interests of the country were represented at the gathering. Important questions involving standardization of radio apparatus, and the problem of interference between broadcast stations were among the subjects considered, according to a report issued by E. B Mallory, chairman of the Radio Section Mallory's address dwelt upon the phenomenal growth of the radio industry, which, he declared, already had surpassed the mark of every prediction.

Important recommendations were made at the meeting for standardization, both in nomenclature and apparatus. The general use of frequency rather than wave length to describe the assignments of broadcasting stations, was urged by the Transmitting and Receiving Set Committee.

USE OF MARKINGS.

Where tuning dial markings involved frequency or wave length values, the committee held, frequency markings only should be used. Other recommendations by this committee were:

"That the controls on receiving sets shall be so arranged that clockwise rotation of rheostat controls shall give increase of voltage on tubes or increase of volume on volume control.

"That scale markings for filament control be divided 0 to 10, with the word OFF shown separately.

"That the standard for tuning controls shall be that dial markings shall increase with clockwise rotation and that in the case of vernier controls the actuating knob shall turn in the same direction as the index."

Steps to be taken towards the elimination of fraudulent or misleading advertising of radio apparatus and supplies were discussed at the meeting and reports were read from the National Vigilance committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World outlining the character of campaign necessary to accomplish these ends.

As a result of the informative campaign conducted by the Radio Section of the A. M. E. S and the educational work by newspapers in familiarizing the general public with technical, as well as industrial developments both in the radio industry and in the broadcasting art, radio had become an all-year-round industry.

CODE INTERFERENCE.

Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, reporting for the Ship and Shore Committee of the Radio Section of the A. M. E. S., declared that efforts to reduce the interference with broadcast reception arising from code stations afloat and ashore had been measurably successful. During 1924, he pointed out, there had been an increased use of continuous wave transmitters and vacuum receiving apparatus on ships. The replacement of the older spark equipment not only lessened interference but increased the capability of the ships for handling ship-to-shore wireless traffic.

"The trend towards continuous wave operation," his report continued, "is also evidenced in the marine service shore station.

This has been particularly stimulated by the interference caused by such stations with broadcast reception and the resulting dissatisfaction to large groups of broadcast listeners. Congestion of marine traffic has been considerably relieved by the use of the longer wave lengths (1578 to 2499 meters).

"The exact ship and short station wave lengths on the East and West coasts of the United States are still under consideration, it being planned to work out a system of staggered wave lengths for the shore station such that interference will be largely avoided."

KLX REUNITES TWO PARTED FRIENDS

Check up another credit to radio.

Two friends, separated during the war, have been brought together through Radio KLX, as shown by the following letter.

"Radio KLX: On Wednesday evening, Nov. 19, also this evening, you had a Mr. Walter H. Bundy taking part in your programs and I am anxious to know if this is the same Mr Bundy that I have known for years, but have lost track of during the past few years. Would it be asking too much to have you ask him if he knows me, if so, to drop me a line. I wish to add that I get your concerts regularly and enjoy your programs very much.

"Yours very truly,
"Fred G. Heard.

More Stations Seek High Power Permits

Four more Class B stations, which have applied for increased power to 1500 watts, have been licensed temporarily under the regulations providing that no additional interference is caused.

Increased power has been authorized for KYW, Westinghouse, Chicago; WBZ, Westinghouse, Springfield, Mass.; KFI, Earl C. Anthony, Los Angeles, and WEAF, A. T. & T. Co., New York. The first station so licensed was WTAM, at Cleveland.

This puts five of the Class B stations in a position to serve listeners at an increased range, if it does not blanket neighboring stations or interfere with reception.

Pioneer Radio Man Goes Into Banking

William J. Murdock, one of the pioneers in the radio industry and president of the company that bears his name, has been elected president of the Broadway National Bank of Chelsea, Mass.

The William J. Murdock Co. was one of the first concerns in the country to engage in the manufacture of radio accessories at the time when the amateur was just beginning to dabble in the new art.

TESTS PROVE 2LO HARD TO RECEIVE

With eastern broadcasting stations being heard with such volume they rattled the earphones, signals from London or other European stations were not heard, when a party sent out Thursday night by the E. M. Sargent Radio company of Oakland journeyed to Mt. Diablo.

E. M. Sargent, who headed the party, states that all eastern stations came in with amazing volume, and that Mexico was heard so loud on the earphones the announcements could be heard 100 feet away, but that London was not picked up

"From the way we received the eastern stations, without a signal from across the Atlantic, I doubt very much if anyone in California heard London," Sargent said. "The eastern stations were so loud that had it been possible to pick up London we would have gotten them."

Mirrors Urged to Fling Glare Back To Erring Autoist

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 22.—Request that owners of automobile service stations throughout California install mirrors at least six feet wide and three feet in height in their stations in order that motorists may be able to determine when their lights are in need of adjustment is made in letters sent out by C. K. Harder, chief inspector of the division of motor vehicles.

The mirror should be so placed, said Harder, that a motorist approaching it will receive the same glare from his [illegible] on the highway at night would receive.

"We believe," continued the chief inspector, "that 90 per cent of the motorists would have their lights adjusted if they know they were a menace to others."

According to Harder the co-operation of all big distributing companies already has been promised.

RADIO INVENTOR REVEALS ROCKY ROAD OF YOUTH

De Forest Diary Tells of Hardships Overcome in Chicago.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29. — The vicissitudes of the average inventor; the hardships that seem to walk hand in hand with those inspired to creations that have revolutionized every day life and made the world a better place to live in, were the portion of Dr. Lee De Forest in a very full measure is indicated in a reprint by the Armour Institute of Chicago, of his diary written while a student there the year following his graduation from Yale University.

The inventor of the "audion," or three electrode vacuum tube that made modern radio and transcontinental wireless telephony possible, and scores of other radio and wireless telegraphy devices that are today deemed essential, but 24 years ago was employed on the staff of the Western Electrician and hazarding that job to work half time in the Armour Institute Laboratory. The following appears under date of October 28, 1900:

"I have begun to hazard my good job on the Western Electrician staff by working half time in the Armour Institute laboratory and teaching two nights a week at Lewis Institute. Shall I win or lose?"

SUBSEQUENT ENTRY.

Another and subsequent entry is apparently the copy of a letter written to a friend.

"This is a great life I lead—talk about your Yale Bohemia—it's not in it. Here one doesn't lose caste by leaving off his cuffs (they evidently wore them still detachable in 1900) or even wearing his collar for two consecutive weeks or a shirt for twice that interval. If you go unshaved you simply pass for a 'Single Taxer' and are given free range at the lunch counter.

"My pants are getting thinner each day and my coat smells loudly of fried potatoes from the Comet restaurant. Sometimes I have ten cents in hand and sometimes twice that sum. But hail gentle springtime when I can don my New Haven golf pants and hock my overcoat. I have three pairs of low shoes and calculate that by going barefoot about the house and standing up to save my trousers' seat, I can keep going until it is time to wear spring attire. I have just paid $30.79 on life insurance, leaving me the undisputed right to die any time during the next 365 days, and next week I can and will pay $55 on my patent application."

The beginning of the success and the taste of the first fruits of his later triumphs were set down in this subsequent diary entry.

"After months of patience the electrolytic detector was moulded into such shape that it was deemed capable of public demonstration. For this purpose I rigged from the top of the flagpole on the west end of the Institute building a 'birdcage' antenna of lamp cord lashed to barrel hoops. As a sender I used the Institute's big Rhumkorf coil with a Wehnelt interrupter. With this transmitter keyed by Smythe, we made our first 'long-range tests.' As I stood in the rain on the top of the Lakota hotel at Thirtieth and Michigan avenue, Chicago, anxiously listening in the telephone receiver, throbbing heart-beats pulsed the time till the sending key was pressed. I have heard the glorious symphonies of Beethoven, the thrilling measures of Wagnerian music ringing through the soul, with all joy and inspiration; yet to my waiting ear that faint "whirr-whirr," ticking the H's of the agreed signal seemed the sweetest music—the most enthralling sound ever heard by man."

W.A.R.A. Notes

During the last week, there has been two important Western Amateur Radio Association meetings, the first was the monthly A. R. R. L. meeting held in conjunction with the San Francisco Radio Club at 1830 Bush street, San Francisco.

The meeting was called to order by W. P. Dann and the monthly traffic reports read. Dann then introduced and turned the meeting over to Mr. Warner and Mr. Herbert, both from A. R. R. L. headquarters at Hartford, Conn. Mr. Warner spoke on the origin and growth of QST the monthly A. R. R. L. magazine. QST was started by Mr. Tuska in 1915 and was bought by the A. R. R. L. headquarters to become the property of all members, soon after the war. Eighty thousand copies of the last edition of QST have been distributed or sold. The main point Mr. Warner endeavored to bring out, was that QST is not owned by any one person or any small group of persons, but by all members of the A. R. R. L. All the returns from QST are spent in improving amateur radio, and not one cent goese to any one connected with the A. R. R. L. headquarters.

Mr. Hebert spoke on the management of QST and the world wide distinction of the A. R. R. L Within the last few years the A. R. R. L. has earned the distinction of being the leader in amateur radio the world over. An imposing fact he brought out is, that the A. R. R. L. is the only body representing amateur radio that is recognized by the commercial companies and the United States Government, also it is the only organization of amateur radio which will be permitted to send representatives to the world radio conference, to be held in Paris next year. This is a great honor when it is remembered that the B. C. L. is considered in the amateur class.

The third and last speaker of the evening was Mr. McGowan, of the 6 district Radio Inspectors office. His contribution was a short but interesting talk on the opening of amateur radio by the A. R. R. L. In 1921 the American Radio Relay League opened international Amateur radio for the English amateurs, the A. R. R. L. discovered the value of the short waves, they published the first hook-up of the Reinartz receiver, the first low loss receiver, the first Neutrodyne, the first one control Neutrodyne, and the first one control Super-hetrodyne receiver. They conducted tests with and put over the first two-way amateur communication with Holland, France, England, Australia and New Zaland, and they sent Mr. WNP, to the North Pole with the McMillan expedition. These are but a few of the wonderful results of cooperation of the amateurs within the A. R. R. L.

On Thursday evening the usual weekly meeting was held, and the use of the short waves thoroughly discussed It was decided they are much better than the higher wave lengths for daylight transmission.

6ARB is working his 250 watter on 80 meters, and has worked several Australian and New Zealand stations.

6WP a dyed in the wool Reinartz receiver fan, reports hearing several Australian and New Zealand stations also. This looks good for the Reinartz receiver, as a short wave set.

6CKC has at last been able to make his 50 watter work on 80 meters, but has not been on long enough to do any real "dx" yet. He is a Reinartz fan too.

6ASI hasn't completed his transmitter as yet but expects to join the gang shortly. We hope to convert him to the Reinartz side, as 6CEJ the leader of the 3 circuit tuner side, has not been able to make him see his point of view as yet.

6AUY is doing some fine work on 80 meters with a five watter, he works the east co. st regularly even if he does live in Alameda.

During the week several official reports of international radio have come to different members of the club. As most of these are not as yet public property they are listed below.

6CKC has received a report from FMH, an amateur station located in the Republic of Salvador, Central America. FMH is listening for American amateurs every Saturday night, from 8 to 11 p. m. Pacific Standard Time. He is building a 50 watt transmitter and will soon be on the air on 80 meters, at the same time every Saturday night.

6ARB reports all Australian and New Zealand amateur stations are working on the [illegible] 90 meters. This is the reason more American stations have not heard them.

The schooner Kaimaloe, now outfitting at Honolulu, for a three years voyage to the South Seas, will carry an amateur operator, the call is KFUH, and the schooner is equipped with a 1kw spark set for commercial wave lengths, a 10 watt C. W. set for 200-150 meters amateur work, and a 250 watt, 50 cycle transmitter is being installed for amateur work on 80 meters. The license KFUH is a special experimental of the same grade a Mix carried on the Bowdin WNP.

POZ the famous German Commercial station is now testing on 88 meters, with C. W. This will give the amateurs a chance to hear him without changing their seats.

6CEU the active Hawaiian station is again on the air. His wave is 150 meters, and he is ready to handle traffic for the islands. He expects to be down on 80 meters before the first of next year.

DISTANCE RECORD FOR DAY SENDING BROKEN BY KLX

Philadelphia, Washington Hear Broadcasting of Signals During 'Big Game.'

Atmospheric conditions or freakish transmission is believed to have caused the unprecedented sending from radio KLX on November 22, when the California-Stanford game was broadcast from the side lines at Memorial stadium in Berkeley.

On Thursday, reports, one of which is published in this section of today's TRIBUNE, began reaching KLX from the vicinity of Washington, D. C., stating that KLX was heard broadcasting the California-Stanford game.

On Friday six other reports from the vicinity of Philadelphia were also received. One of these reports is from a wealthy automobile dealer in Philadelphia, whose letter seems to be an authentic report on the reception. It is as follows:

"KLX Radio Station, Oakland, Cal.

"Gentlemen—About 6:30 p. m., eastern standard time, on Saturday, November 22, I received play by play description of the California University-Stanford football contest which was played at Berkeley, Cal., and upon referring to the New York Times I note that KLX was broadcasting this contest.

"The thought in my mind is this: Was I listening on California or was the game also broadcast-d by a station nearer east.

"I should be very glad to hear from you with reference to this as I am anxious to know if what I think I got is a fact.

"Very truly yours,
"E. H. SINGER,
"Packard Inc., 319 North Broad street, Philadelphia."

(The KLX signals were not rebroadcasted by any other station).

Water Acoustics Used to Locate Ships

In cooperation with the Coast and Geodetic Survey a method has been developed by the Bureau of Standards for locating accurately the position of a surveying ship when the visibility is so poor that the coast can not be seen. The method employed involves the combined use of acoutic and radio signals. A small bomb is exploded near the ship, the instant of the explosion being recorded on a chronograph on board The sound wave produced by the bomb is picked up by under-water microphones located at two or more known positions along the shore. When the sound signal reaches the microphone it is automatically sent back to the ship by radio, where the instant of its arrival is recorded on the chronograph. The time required by the signal to travel from the ship to each short station can be then found by multiplying the time by the speed of sound in sea water. With this information the position of the ship can be quickly determined. The mothod is now in daily use by the Coast and Geodetic Survey in connection with sounding operations off the Pacific Coast. Formerly surveying operations were often limited to five or six days in each month, due to the visibility being so poor that the shore stations could not be seen.

IF YOU SAW IT IN THE Oakland Tribune TELL THEM SO. THANK YOU.

Rickard Stops Broadcast of Boxing Bouts

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Radio broadcasting of boxing bouts is at an end as far as Tex Rickard is concerned, it was learned at Madison Square Garden. The reason by one close to the New York promoter is that use of the radio keeps down attendance at bouts.

Garden officials said that the radio listener has been satisfied with a blow by blow story as broadcast, and therefore has not contributed his financial share to the support of the sport. Baseball, especially the world's series, and the leading football games have been played "on the air" also.

Football fans this fall have thronged American stadiums to greater numbers than ever, and at every important contest the radio has told its story.

Gentlemen:

On Saturday, Nov. 22, I listened to a football game broadcasted from your station (KLX) direct from Berkeley, Calif. stadium between Stanford University and University of California.

It came in clear, but somewhat weak, due to its distance. I heard it about 3:35 Pacific time (6:35 Eastern time).

It will be greatly appreciated if you kindly verify the above, and am thanking you in advance for your kind attention in so doing.

I am,

Yours respectfully,

RADIO TO MARS HELD IMPOSSIBLE

BERLIN, Nov. 29—"Radio messages to Mars are a physical impossibility."

This flat statement is made by L. Vegard, Norwegian scientist. The reason, he says, is that the wireless waves never leave the earth's atmosphere. If they did, there would be no wireless, says he.

Vegard has previously advanced the theory, based on numerous researches, that the earth is inclosed by a shell of small particles of solid nitrogen. This shell is supposed to swim on the earth's atmosphere, literally cutting the earth off from the universe.

This shell, he now says he has found, stops the wireless waves from escaping into the universe, and throws them back to earth. They are thus forced to spread in the space between the earth's surface and the nitrogen shell, enabling the radio apparatus to catch them, and thereby make wireless telegraphy possible.

ISSUE OF RADIO TUBE FIGHT IN HANDS OF JUDGE

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 29.—Judge Hugh Morris, in the United States district court, heard the argument for a preliminary injunction, sought by the De Forest Radio company, to restrain the Radio Corporation of America from selling certain types of its "audion" or vacuum tubes, which are used in radio sets and other radio equipment. The complainant alleges that such equipment infringes upon De Forest patents. Both sides concluded their argument and the court took the matter under advisement.

The De Forest company asks for an accounting by the Radio Corporation of America for its sales of products The suit involves millions of dollars, it is said, and is an echo of the suit brought by the American Telephone and Telegraph company against the Radio Audion company two years ago for the alleged infringement of the De Forest's patent used in making the tubes.

The Radio Corporation claims, under its leases, the right, not only to sell, but to extend rights of sales to other concerns which the De Forest company denies. The latter corporation was represented by Samuel E. Darby Jr., of New York, and Thomas E. Haight of Jersey City; J. C. Cosgrove and A. E. Blackmar of New York were attorneys for the Radio Corporation.

TASTES SUCCESS.

Rome to Excavate "Circus Maximums"

ROME, Nov. 29.—The cabinet finally decided last week to introduce a bill to authorize the excavation of the Circus Maximus, which through the imperial period in Rome, was the largest and most famous of the Roman places of amusement.

This vast building, which had seating room for 300,000 spectators, lay in the valley between the Palatine and the Aventine, where the gas works at present stand. The removal of this eyesore from one of the most historic sites of Rome has long been felt to be a necessity, and the government's decision to begin the work is enthusiastically received.

The excavation of the Circus Maximus is part of a larger scheme to increase "the monumental area" so that it will include the Fora of the Caesars and the slopes of the Capitol. The work on the Forum of Augustus has already been begun.

High School and University Radio Courses Given

By O. D. TOLISCHUS
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

BERLIN, Nov. 29. — A "radio university" has just been opened in Berlin. Regular high school and university courses will be given in which the best professors on each subject will lecture not to a small class of students, but to the whole world.

Through the little microphone, the university is to be brought to the home and the student, instead of the student to the university.

The "radio university" is to be called the Hans Bredow school, in honor of State Secretary Dr. Bredow, who did much to spread the radio in Germany.

The school was formally opened in the presence of representative if the German Government, the Berlin University, the Technical High School and the Commercial High School.

It is planned to put the most famous researches, scientists and teachers in the service of this university.

NEWS OF GREATER CALIFORNIA

INDIAN MEDICINE MAN GIVEN RITES OF 'PALE FACES'

White Friends Officiate for Aged Character Found Dead in Cabin.

YREKA, Nov. 29.—When the body of "Colonel" Jim Brooks, full-blooded Indian, and for scores of years principal medicine man to his tribe in the Happy Camp district in the lower Klamath river, was found in his lonely cabin a few days ago, white residents in the vicinity determined to carry out his oft-expressed desire that he might have a "white man's burial."

Brooks was over 80 years of age and every year officiated at the great Indian ceremonial, the Pikiowish. He had been missing ten days when search resulted in the finding of his body by Henry Joseph. Death is believed to be due to pneumonia.

An old friend, J. B. Nesbit, read the church service and white residents placed flowers on the grave of the aged man. Brooks leaves a widow.

"JIM" PASSES ON.

ANTIOCH, Nov. 29.—"Charcoal Jim," one of Antioch's oldest and best beloved characters has passed on, death occurring at the Wayside Inn he has operated for his Chinese countrymen the past many years.

Antioch was a mere landing place when "Jim" as a youth came to settle here. He was one of the few whose sojourn dates back to the early sixties.

Establishing a laundry here, he did a thriving business, laundering the garments of some of Antioch's first families, pioneers who mined for ore and coal in this region, then something of a mining district.

In the seventies "Jim," who was adventurously inclined, tried his fortune at Bodie, Inyo county, which was then a booming mining camp. Returning to Antioch three years later, he worked for the California Distilling company, which had a plant located on the present site of the Hickmott cannery.

The aged Chinese has been a familiar figure of Antioch's waterfront for the past twenty years, operating a wayside home for his Oriental brethren.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally by Drinking Quarts of Good Water.

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Too much rich food creates acids which clog the kidney pores so that they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood. Then you get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin to drink soft water in quantities; also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone can take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby often preventing serious kidney complication. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.—Advertisement.

Where Mere Man Is a Useless Bother

CO-EDS GIVE YOUTHS OF HOLLISTER COLLEGE JOLT

HOLLISTER, Nov. 29.—The ego of the male students of the local high school and junior college is a drug on the market these days. The fair co-eds at the institution have set out to prove that the masculine half of the world is more or less of a supernumerary.

They are going to do it with a "stag party" at which girls will do all the "stagging." For one whole evening they claim they will have true bliss by ruling Adam and all his male descendants out of Eden.

"Girls don't have to have boys present to have a wonderful party," declares Redon Sherman, student body president and one of the leaders in the "girls' stag" which will be held on December 5.

"Boys flatter themselves by thinking they have to be present before girls can enjoy themselves—well, we'll show them.

"This is the one occasion of the whole year when we can all take a part, and every girl has some responsibility that she is glad to assume. It makes us an organized unit, and it will develop greater initiative and individuality than if boys were around to assert themselves and make us feel as if we were the weaker sex. No! We will take the girls' parties every time."

Among some of the features planned for the "stag" is a mock wedding in which all participants will be girls. Some have borrowed dress suits from dads.

The committee members persist on the masculine prerogative of using first initials. They are:

Creek Barrier Urged By Farm Owners

WALNUT CREEK, Nov. 29.—Petitions are being circulated today among farm owners of the Old Burgess district in a move for the reconstruction of a dam across Walnut Creek, 1½ miles below here, which was washed out 11 years ago.

Reconstruction of the dam, with others in the San Ramon Creek, is sought by a committee of land owners appointed at a meeting held here last night. The dams, it is claimed, would impound the run-off water and permit of seepage into adjoining soil, making a sub-oil reservoir and eliminating the need for irrigation.

A committee appointed at last night's meeting comprises W. D. Timm, H. A. Mitchell, G. A. Able, E. R. Anderson and W. A. Smythe.

The dams would be equipped with flood gates to be removed during the spring high water season so as to prevent floods. An assessment cost of about $1 an acre for 1000 acres affected by the Old Burgess dam is advocated by the committee.

NEWS OF GREATER CALIFORNIA

1925 EXPECTED TO BRING SETTLERS TO CONTRA COSTA

Booster Secretary Urges Steps to Induce Easterners to Visit Walnut Creek.

WALNUT CREEK, Nov. 29.—That many thousands of tourists in the east are planning on making a trip to California in 1925 was evidenced to I. E. Ray, secretary of the local chamber of commerce, in reports from eastern headquarters of the Victory Highway which passes through Walnut Creek.

Ray has been an old-time friend of Ben Blow, managing director of the highway. Walnut Creek has had a recent parliamentary fight to keep its place on the highway map, other cities having planned in diverting the road further south, according to Ray.

"This community will be visited by many thousands of tourists the coming spring, who have never yet had a look at California and this community is well prepared to show them opportunities and advantages which will make them seriously consider Walnut Creek as an ideal place to settle. This cheerful news came from Ray in preparing his annual report to the newly elected directors of the local chamber of commerce, who held their annual meeting Friday, with Dr. J. E. Clark, newly elected president in the chair.

Outlines of the work for the coming year were taken up and a retrospect of the accomplishments of the year made.

The earliest activity will be the Forty-niner dance, New Year's Eve. A membership drive is to be conducted starting Monday.

Two teams headed by Jesse B Near and Frank Marshall are heading the membership drive. Team mates to Marshall are Harry M Stow, J. F. Drury, Geo. S Barry and J. E. Clark and the Near's workers are T J. Wigel, F. R. Quigley, H. F. Spencer and Harry T. Silver

The budget for the coming year was considered but not definitely settled. Officers announced chosen at the recent election in addition to President Clark were George S Barry, vice-president, Frank A. Marshall, treasurer, and I. E. Ray-secretary.

Where It's "Table Season" All Year 'Round

TWO TOWNS PROFIT FROM AMERICAN APPETITE DEMAND

By HENRY SWEET.

NEWARK, Nov. 29. — Alvarado and Newark, two Alameda county bay edge towns, practically owe their existence to the demand of American appetites.

Two table essentials—the two diametrically opposed essentials of diet—sugar and salt are shipped in train loads from here and Alvarado each year to eastern markets

The local salt fields resemble an Arctic scene while Alvarado's share of this dietary industry is in possession of the oldest beet sugar refinery in the United States and its center of a large sugar beet raising center.

Reports of the salt industry, extending on both sides of Newark, both up and down the bay, show that it is to be listed this year with California's other million dollar industries. Half a thousand men are about through the harvesting work for this season, and the advance survey shows that 1924 will be the heaviest producer for many years, according to officials of the California Salt Exchange of San Francisco.

This year's salt harvest will exceed the bumper output of last year by at least one-fourth.

Unlike land crops, the sale output has increased with the dry season which is regarded with horror by land farmers. Dryness increases the briny content of the water. The crop this year is expected to run close to 200,000 tons, and is estimated will bring $1 250,000. This is California's greatest output. This is produced by evaporation of sea water.

So noted has California salt become that it is carried many thousands of miles to complete the Alaska fisheries pack of salmon, the boats that take the men north to catch and pack the millions of tons of salmon in Arctic regions annually, are also laden with many thousand tons of California salt.

This year's sugar run at Alvarado is the heaviest yet made, owing to the gaining of possession of a new acreage of land for beet culture in the Delta district along the Sacramento and San Joaquin regions, near Stockton. It is expected that this year's campaign will total 225,000 bags or about 80,000 tons of sugar, the finished product.

The heaviest run ever made by the Alvarado mill was in October when a maximum of 1133 tons of beets were ground. This is the record since the erection of the mill by E H. Dyer in 1869. It has run continuously, gradually increasing its output with the adoption of modern machinery and the additions necessary to care for the increasing crops.

The sugar mill is one of Alvarado's chief industries, the payroll running well over $1000 a day. It requires about 6000 tons of lime to treat the crude sugar. This lime is obtained above Sacramento. After treating the sugar the carbonated lime is sold to farmers for "sweetening" the land, mostly in the San Joaquin valley.

Another industry born of the sugar mill is the fattening of large numbers of cattle nearby from the sugar beet pulp Many of the choicest dainties in the meat line that are placed on bay city tables are from herds fed on the pulp of California sugar beets.

FARM BUREAU IS HELD AID TO TOWN BOOSTING

CONCORD, Nov. 29.—That a farm bureau can function as a civic body, aiding towns and cities to better their living conditions is proven by the annual report of the county farm advisor, A. M. Burton. The organization of fire control districts in Concord and Walnut Creek was brought about by the farm bureau centers in these two towns.

In addition to the fire prevention work done, the Contra Costa Farm Bureau and Agricultural Extension Service has accomplished the following in the year:

Carried on trials to find what specie of wheat and barley are best adapted for Contra Costa county, conducted trials of various fertilizers to improve soil conditions, held tractor repair and septic tank building demonstrations assisted poultrymen by furnishing specialists to make culling demonstrations, lectures on feeding, housing and diseases.

The department also furnished building plans free to many, and supplied vaccine against chickenpox.

PALO ALTO WATER WELLS LOWERING

PALO ALTO, Nov. 29.—Subterranean reservoirs of water from which the city of Palo Alto is drawing domestic supply have fallen at the rate of two feet a year, during the 28 years of operation of the municipal water plant, with an increasing rate in the immediate past was the statement of Prof C. B. Wing of Stanford University in an address before the "Ravenswood Day" community luncheon of the Palo Alto Chamber of Commerce here yesterday noon at the Russell Cafeteria.

Eventually, declared Wing, it could be expected that this water level would sink to a point far below the level of the waters of the bay, and that the infiltration of salt waters from the bay would become so great that it would be impossible to use the water pumped here for either domestic or irrigation purposes

"We do not face any immediate danger from this source," declared Wing. "I mean to say that it is not likely that we will suddenly be cut off from our fresh water supply next week or even next year, but that the supply will become increasingly salty as the water table drops away. A number of wells near Alviso already show this condition."

Members of the Ravenswood Chamber of Commerce in attendance at the meeting, stated that salt water was now being pumped from a number of wells in the Ravenswood district.

NEWS of the EASTBAY MUSICAL WORLD

By ROY HARRISON DANFORTH

December naturally presents limited time for things other than feting, feasting and giving, but we do manage somehow or other to squeeze in a little music as well! This year we shall do rather better than usual, several of the important musical affairs of the season being programmed for between now and Christmas.

The California Music League, under Modeste Alloo's direction, will give its second concert Tuesday evening at Harmon Gymnasium, and the following night comes the recital of Radiana Pazmor, mezzo-contralto, at the Twentieth Century Club, Berkeley. Thursday evening is set aside for the appearance of Ellen Edwards, English pianist, at Mills College.

The program by Ruth St. Denis, Ted Shawn and their supporting company is scheduled for the evening of Monday, December 8, at the Auditorium, and Friday evening Mischa Elman, distinguished violinist, will also play there. Also that Friday evening Elizabeth Witter, mezzo-soprano, will sing at Twentieth Century Club.

In the third week of the month the following are among the dates: 15th, San Francisco Chamber Music Society, Auditorium; 17th, Lydia Ferguson, song recital in costume, Hotel Oakland; 18th, San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Harmon Gymnasium. The remaining date of the month comes squarely between the holidays, Sophie Braslau, contralto, at the Auditorium on December 29.

In the Week's Eastbay Musical News

In the top row, from left to right, are RUTH ST. DENIS, who will bring her dancers to the Auditorium soon; the ARION TRIO, which will sing for the Philomels, and ELIZABETH WITTER, who will give a piano recital in Berkeley. Similarly in the lower row, are IRVING KRICK, pianist, also on the Philomel program; MISCHA ELMAN, violinist, coming soon, and HOLLIS DAVENNY, cast as Schubert in "Blossom Time."

ELLEN EDWARDS TO PLAY AT MILLS COLLEGE.

Miss Ellen Edwards, young English pianist, will be the artist at the second of the series of Mills College concerts Wednesday evening. She will play in Lisser hall at 8:15 o'clock.

Miss Edwards has been in America but a short time, and she has already chosen to make California her home. She received her musical education in England and Germany. At the age of 13 she entered the Royal College of Music in London, and during her six years of study there she took all the prizes for piano, including two gold medals. Later she studied with Busoni in Berlin, and gave concerts on the continent and in London, also playing with symphony orchestras. This past season she was soloist with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

The Mills College concert series is sponsored by the Associated Students, who during the year arrange to bring five or six artists to the campus. The series opened with a concert by Louis Graveure, who sang in Lisser hall October 31 before a large and enthusiastic audience. She is a protege of Yvette Guilbert, and has met with a well deserved welcome wherever she has appeared.

DANCERS, VIOLINIST COME SOON IN LOCAL CONCERTS.

Two of the most important concert events of the present season in Oakland are scheduled to take place in the same week at the Oakland Auditorium theater. The first is the elaborate dance spectacle to be presented by Ruth St. Denis, with Ted Shawn and the twenty Denishawn Dancers, in the Auditorium opera house on Monday evening, December 8. This is the second event of the artists' concert series for the 1924-25 season offered by Zannette W. Potter. On Friday evening of the same week, December 12, Miss Potter will present Mischa Elman, the great Russian violinist, in recital.

Ruth St. Denis is acknowledged as among the greatest dancers America has ever produced, and Ted Shawn, her partner, is America's greatest male dancer, it is claimed. A feature of their performance here will be the music provided by Louis Horst, pianist and conductor, and his string quartet composed of piano, violin, flute and 'cello.

The program will include "Music Visualizations," originated by Ruth St. Denis and danced by the star. Ted Shawn and an ensemble of Denishawn dancers, a Spanish gypsy dance, 'Cuadro Flamenco," which is the name given to those bands of gypsy dancers, singers and guitar players who form an inevitable part of every concert hall and cabaret performance in the province of Andalusia; and a series of divertisements comprising seven different types of the dance. Among the group of divertisements which the dancers will present is a new creation of Miss St. Denis, "Tragica," known as the silent dance. It is executed without music.

Seats for the concert to be given by Elman, "the king of violinists," in the Auditorium theater on Friday night, December 12, are selling rapidly, according to Miss Potter, and indications are that the house will be sold out days in advance of the engagement.

Elman stands unique among violinists of the day. It is said that he has at his finger tips almost 300 concertos, sonatas, concert numbers and smaller pieces such as encore numbers, which he plays from memory with marvelous wizardry. The violinist has arranged a program of exceptional interest for his Oakland concert. The program follows:

She will be assisted by Miss Gladys Washburn, 'cello, Miss Ethel Whytel, piano, and Miss Isabel Santana, piano. The concert will be given in Alumnae hall on the campus, and will be open to the public.

STATISTICS, SERIOUS AND NOT, OF OUR SCHOOL MUSIC.

There are now 1221 students in the Oakland schools studying the violin, according to Glenn Woods supervisor of music in the Oakland school department.

The combined racket, if laid end to end, would stretch to the south pole and somewhat beyond, but it isn't being done that way. Most of it is under expert instruction, so that Woods claims that more than half are not really tuneful, while there are more than two dozen really meritorious, and one or two geniuses.

The saxophone has 176 devotees this year, as against 167 clarionetists and 95 'cellists. Altogether, the school department has 2412 registered students, under eighty instructors.

The school department now boasts fifty-eight orchestras and glee clubs. About 75 per cent of the instruments are owned by the players. The other 25 per cent, owned by the schools, is admitted to be about worn out.

"Except for this deficiency in instruments, Oakland's school musical department can rank with the best in the world," says Woods.

FRENCH MUSIC IN SYMPHONY PROGRAM.

The second concert of the California Music League, under the direction of Dr. Modeste Alloo, Tuesday night at Harmon Gymnasium, will be a concert of French music. Beginning with Lalo, Saint-Saens and Delibes, down to the more modern Franck, the program is made up of some of the finest numbers in the literature of French music.

"Le Roi d'Ys" is the most outstanding of Lalo's works. It is an opera based on an old Breton legend, and at the forthcoming concert, Dr. Alloo is planning to play the overture.

From the music of Saint-Saens, who is perhaps best known for his opera "Samson and Delilah," two compositions have been selected—"La Jeunesse d'Hercule," a symphonic poem, and the "Concerto in A Minor," for 'cello and orchestra, which will be the solo number played by May Mukle.

Besides the above mentioned numbers, the symphonic poem, "Psyche," by Caesar Franck, and the ballet "Sylvia," will complete this evening of modern French music.

In connection with the second concert of the California Music League, Modeste Alloo, conductor, which is to take place on December 2 in Harmon Gymnasium, arrangements have been made to open a new subscription list for the remaining three concerts on December 2, 1924; February 17 and March 31, 1925.

The subscriptions can be secured at 2413 Bancroft way, Tupper & Reed, and on the night of the concert at Harmon Gymnasium.

LUTHERAN CHOIR TO SING IN SAN FRANCISCO.

High-class sacred music adequately sung is what the St. Olaf Lutheran choir promises to present at its concerts Sunday afternoon, January 4, and Tuesday evening, January 6, in the Exposition Auditorium—its only performances in this section of California.

Among the numbers programmed are Bach's "Come, Jesus, Come;" "A Crown of Grace" and "Make Me, O Lord, Pure in Heart," by Brahms; "Our Father," by Gretchaninoff; "Wake, Awake, for Night Is Flying," by Rachmaninoff; "The Three Kings," by Romeu, and several compositions by the conductor, Christiansen, including 'O Wondrous Type," "Come, Thou Savior of Our Race," and a Christmas song, "O Sacred Heart," by Hassler, and "Hosanna," by Schreck.

TO LECTURE ON OLD-TIME MUSIC.

A lecture-recital on the music of the 16th, 17th and 18th centuries is to be given by Madame Sofia Newland Neustadt, mezzo-soprano, under the auspices of the Etude club of Berkeley, on November 24. She will be assisted by Mrs. William Horace Ivie, soprano; Mrs. Clarence W. Page contralto, Mrs. William V. Bragdon, pianist, and Mrs. Martyn P. Warner accompanist.

MARIE SILVA WILL PLAY WITH SYMPHONY.

Announcing Marie Silva, pianist, as soloist, Alfred Hertz, conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, has arranged an interesting program for the Oakland appearance of the group of artists on Thursday evening, December 11, at the Auditorium theater.

With Beethoven's overture "Leonore No. 3" as the opening number, Hertz will close with Chopin's Concerto for Piano, No. 1 E minor, with Miss Silva at the piano.

The program also embraces Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony," one of the most popular symphonic works in all musical literature, and Richard Strauss' delightful tondo "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks." Till is the hero of an old folk book of the fifteenth century, attributed to Dr. Thomas Murner. Till is supposed to be a wandering mechanic of Brunswick, who plays all sorts of tricks on practical jokes on everybody and he always comes out ahead. The story is splendidly told in the symphonic offering.

Zannette W. Potter, Oakland manager of the San Francisco Symphony, also announces the program for the second chamber music recital, which is included in the nine remaining instrumental musical events of the symphony and chamber music season in Oakland. The recital is to be held Monday evening, December 15.

The chamber music program follows:

1 Quartet in E minor for strings

2 Quintet, D Major, for flute and strings .....Brandts-Buys
3 Scherzo .....Beethoven
Variations "Death and the Maiden"—from the D minor quartet .....Schubert

"BLOSSOM TIME" WILL ECHO SCHUBERT AGAIN.

Music lovers of the Eastbay region will have another opportunity to hear the Schubert operetta, "Blossom Time," when it comes to the Oakland Lurie theater for a two-day engagement on Tuesday and Wednesday, December 9 and 10, with matinee on the last day.

"Blossom Time" has completed two years in New York and is now in the fourth year of its existence. During its engagement in Oakland last season it played to some of the largest houses in the musical history of the city. It tells a delightful story of the life of Franz Schubert, composer, and makes use of many of the composer's songs and melodies.

Hollis Davenny will be seen in the leading role of Schubert, a baritone role. Others in the cast include Gertrude Lang, Teddy Webb, Patrick Kelly, Gene Leontovich, Gregory Ratoff and Amy Lester. Among the outstanding songs by the composer in the vehicle are 'Serenade," "Song of Love" "Ave Maria" "Moment Musical," "Immortal Melody" "Tell Me Daisy," and "March Militaire."

MISS ELIZABETH WITTER TO APPEAR IN CONCERT.

Miss Elizabeth Witter, University of California graduate and well known mezzo-soprano, has announced a concert for the evening of December 15, to be given at the Twentieth Century club in Berkley. Miss Witter has returned to California after several years of study in Europe.

Following her graduation from the university some years ago, Miss Witter joined the American Red Cross for service in France. After the war she studied music in New York and later in Italy, Vienna and Paris. She made several public appearances in Florence and Vienna.

MUSICAL PROGRAM TO BE RECEPTION FEATURE.

A musical program will be a feature of the formal opening of the new club building of the Business and Professional Women's club at 1608 Webster street on Tuesday night. Miss Zannette W. Potter is chairman of program and has arranged for the Arion Trio to dispense music at intervals throughout the evening. This trio includes Miss Margaret Avery, 'cello, Joyce Holloway Barthelson, piano, and Josephine Holub, violin. The piano recently purchased by the Philomels of the club will be used upon this occasion. Piano numbers will be played by Miss Eva Garcia and Irving Krick. Leon Mills, tenor, and Byron Mills, baritone, will each render a group of songs and will also sing several duets. Ethelyn Grace Minty, contralto, will sing a group of songs, including a Psalm of Thanksgiving, and Irma Randolph will contribute to the evening's program.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock the club will hold its dedicatory exercises for members only. At this time an Orphic Hymn, set to music by Miss Alice Bumbaugh, will be rendered as members march past the huge fireplace on separate floors of the new building and, deposits therein a cone to the blazing fire.

RUN DOWN

Do you have that tired, worn, run down feeling that, under the least exertion seems to drain your last ounce of strength? Do you feel as tired in the morning as when you went to bed? Is it a hardship for you to go about your daily work, in other words have you lost your pep or energy? This condition is a danger signal. Warning you of trouble existing within your body. Some part of your human machine is not functioning properly and shows that the weakness has already become great enough to send out a call for help. Nature is ever on the alert to warn us of approaching danger and if we heed the call we can save ourselves time, misery and more.

The Human Body is a highly sensitive and well constructed machine and, if given the proper attention, will perform all functions necessary for perfect health. Each and every part of your body must function in harmony but in order to do this each individual unit must have its normal amount of power or life current which it receives directly from the brain by way of the great nerve cables through the spine which is composed of bony movable links (segments) serving as a switchboard for these large nerve cables and due to the many strains your body undergoes from day to day pressure is often exerted upon one or more of these segments causing the flow of life current to be decreased or cut off thereby resulting in a weakness, sickness or disease to some part of your body.

We, as Palmer X-Ray Chiropractors, have made a special study of the spine and the nervous system and realize the importance of keeping the nerves free from pressure in order to have and maintain a healthy body. Many individuals think that because we work exclusively on the spine we cannot correct their particular condition of sickness or trouble, not realizing that every part of the body receives its power to function or its life directly from the main line there nerves. Our work is to find these pinched nerves which are causing your trouble and with our hands alone, in a very special manner, without pain, remove this pressure. We do not use medicine, surgery, osteopathic, massage, violet ray, electronic reaction or any other adjunct. Only our hands upon your spine. We do not twist your neck pull your legs or use harness.

As we do not believe in guesswork when it is a matter of getting sick people well we take an X-Ray picture of your spine bearing your name, free of charge or obligation in any way. Seeing is believing. We show and explain this picture to you in every detail. If we can't help you we say so. On the other hand even though we can help you you are under no obligations to take adjustments unless you wish. We are Palmer Chiropractors, give us a trial at least before you say we can't help you. Railroad Engine Men Given 5 Per Cent Wage Boost by United States Labor Board

75,000 MEN ON WESTERN LINES RAISED

45 Companies Affected by Decision on Increase; Carriers Granted Modification of Few Working Rules

Adjustment in Conditions Is Victory for Companies; Wage Boost Means Many Millions to Employees

BY UNIVERSAL SERVICE
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Engineers and firemen of nearly all western railroads were granted a wage increase approximating 5 per cent in a decision handed down by the United States Railway Labor Board tonight.

The decision besides fixing the wage schedules also settles a number of rules in dispute and leaves others to be settled in later conferences.

Included in the roads affected by the decision is the Southern Pacific, where engineers and firemen were reported as having taken a strike ballot early this week.

The decision is retroactive to September 1, giving the benefit of three months' back pay.

75,000 EMPLOYEES AFFECTED BY DECISION.

Approximately 75,000 members were affected by the wage increase which is practically the same as that settled on the eastern and southeastern lines when the New York Central began its movement to meet the demands of the men.

The wage increase asked by the employees was fully met, although numerous working rules which affect the ultimate wage were not. The net result of the decision, however, is a substantial pay increase which will mount into millions of dollars annually, it was indicated by members of the labor board.

The decision was issued while there is pending in the Federal court the cases in which members of the two brotherhoods are involved because of their refusal to answer the summons of the board to appear before it as witnesses. These cases have twice been decided in lower courts in favor of the Labor Board and have been appealed to the United States supreme court by the Brotherhoods.

DECISION DOES NOT AFFECT COURT CASES.

The decision does not affect these court cases, however, it was pointed out, as the Labor Board has remanded several of the working rules for further arbitration and therefore a necessity may still arise for summoning the chairmen of the brotherhoods to testify.

Included in the list of employees affected by the decision are, besides the engineers and firemen, hostlers and hostlers' helpers. The outstanding rule revision requested by enginemen, regarding "boosters," as affecting their wage scale, was adopted by the board as follows:

"It is understood that the weight on trailers will be added to the weight on drivers of locomotives that are equipped with boosters, and the weight produced by such increased weights shall fix the rates for the respective classes of service."

CARRIERS CANNOT REJECT NEW SCALE.

The application of the decision was made as follows:

"The individual carriers may adopt any or all of the rules specified or provided for and request the employees to enter into negotiations upon any or all of questions set forth but may not reject the increased rates.

"The engineers or firemen, hostlers and helpers, as two respective classes, each class for itself, employed on any individual carrier, may elect to retain rates and rules now in effect, in their entirety, in lieu of rates and such of rules specified or provided for, or negligible questions set forth in Article three (providing for negotiations between carriers and representatives of the organizations) as the individual carriers may elect to adopt."

The individual carriers are to notify the chairmen of their respective brotherhoods or or before December 15, 1924, whether the rules

S. P. to Accept Award as Made By Commission, Avers Official

Opinion Is Company Will Not Break Precedent by Contesting Action.

The decision of the United States Railroad Labor Board handed down in Chicago tonight in favor of the men, granting wage increases will stand and not be contested by the roads, in the opinion of officials of the Southern Pacific company, one of the lines affected by the controversy.

While the officials did not make any definite statement, it was pointed out that the railroad had never contested a decision of the board, and in all probability the precedent would stand in this case.

Had the engineers gone before the labor board in the first place, the wage disagreement would have never been heard of, according to one official.

EFFECT ON STRIKE VOTE PROBLEMATICAL

Just what effect the decision of the United States railroad board granting wage increases to locomotive engineers and firemen on western roads will have on the strike vote now being taken of 6000 brotherhood members of the Southern Pacific system could not be definitely learned tonight. The Southern Pacific engineers and firemen began taking a strike vote late last week when a crisis in negotiations with the management for an independent settlement of a long drawn out controversy involving wages and working conditions was reached, the management contending that the railroad would await the labor board's decision, while the men declared that the labor board had nothing to do with the controversy.

Brotherhood officials who are in San Francisco conducting the strike vote were reticent to express an opinion on the decision tonight. However, they felt that undoubtedly the favorable award of the board would serve to materially lessen the acuteness of the strike threat, which if carried into effect would tie up the Southern Pacific (Pacific system), the El Paso & Southern and the Arizona Eastern railroads.

LAWYER SPURNS COURT, GOES HOME

Vancouver Attorney Returns to Canada; Says He Will Return for Trial.

BY UNITED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 29.—F. R. Anderson, the Vancouver lawyer who was arrested in San Francisco in connection with the Quadra case, reached his home in this city this morning. He returned without the permission of the American authorities, but declared this afternoon that he intended to return to San Francisco for the trial of his case in January.

"There was naturally no difficulty from the Canadian authorities in my crossing the boundary in the usual way this morning," said Anderson. "I went originally to San Francisco, acting in the ordinary way as counsel for a client. I was routed out at night by officials who were looking for someone else, but they insisted on taking me in. I was released from custody on bail of $10,000, but the court declined my application to be allowed to return here. But I had to come back to attend to some personal business and so I am here. I can say, however, that I shall surely return and be on hand for trial, but I could not afford to spend all the intervening time in San Francisco."

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 29.—F. R. Anderson forfeited bail of $10,000 posted for his appearance after his arrest in San Francisco, by going to Vancouver, according to federal authorities. It is possible, however, that an arrangement may be made to relieve him of this penalty if he carries out his announced intention of returning to this city for his trial.

MEXICO IS IN GAY GARB TO SEAT CALLES

Peaceful Pomp Rivaling Glory of Aztecs to Mark Inauguration Rites of New Chief of Republic

Exercises Will Be Second Change of Executives in History Without War or Slaying of Predecessor

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 29.—The Republic of Mexico hung up its last garland and tacked up its last bunting today for the fete tomorrow when it will reward with its hardest job and biggest honor a man who has won distinction by serving it with the textbook no less than the bayonet.

At noon it will acclaim as its new president, Plutarco Elias Calles, farmer, schoolmaster, soldier and statesman, who came from obscurity and educated himself in a manner much like that of the rail splitter president of the sister republic north of the Rio Grande.

GOLD BRAID AND COLOR TO MARK CEREMONY.

Calles will take the office being vacated by Alvaro Obregon with peaceful pomp seldom seen in Mexico since Aztec days. He will be inaugurated in a big stadium, before a crowd in which the citizens who elected him will predominate.

The background will be speckled with color, for Mexico is going to wear its chocolate soldier uniforms designed for occasions of state. There will be good cause for this display of epaulets, gold braid, brass buttons, sashes, cockades, spurs and swords, for it will be only the second time in Mexican history that one legally elected president succeeded another legally elected president without a revolution, coups, assassination or bloodshed.

Standing at President-elect Calles' right when Filberto Gomez, president of the Chamber of Deputies, administers the oath will be the retiring president.

GOMPERS WILL ATTEND CEREMONY.

The first official act of the president doubtless will be the selection of a cabinet. It seems certain now that the "gobernacion" or chief of the cabinet, will be Gilberto Valenzuela, who was under secretary in this portfolio when Calles held it.

All during this week diplomatic delegations and trade union delegates from many countries have been arriving for the ceremony. Among them at the stadium will be 300 American trades unionists led by Samuel Gompers.

General Angel Flores, regarded as the only possible source of trouble, has feelingly protested his loyalty, saying in a telegram:

"While not entirely satisfied with the election I place patriotism above politics. A revolution would prove disastrous to the return of prosperity and I shall remain on the farm doing everything possible to discourage strife."

ERA OF PROSPERITY IS HOPE OF NEW CHIEF.

General Calles expects that his administration will usher in a period of prosperity and peace such as Mexico has never known before. The "Tiger of Sonora," veteran of many revolutions, believes that internal strife in Mexico is ended and that her citizens are ready to attain an economic and social position comparable to that of Americans.

When General Calles was the guest of American capitalists during his recent visit to New York City he spoke of the opportunities American industrialists would have in Mexico.

"We have in Mexico not less than 12,000,000 men on the fringe of civilization, who neither know of nor enjoy the material gifts and spiritual advantages of the American people," he said. "Instead, before our struggles for liberty, they were condemned by the oppression of a limited, privileged, social caste.

WOULD GIVE WORKERS STATUS LIKE AMERICANS.

"Humanity leaves us no other road than to make Mexico a community in which, on the basis of equality for all social classes, the worker in the field and in the city—now buying nothing because he has nothing and barely eats—will rise to the same economic status enjoyed by American workers. Then the American industrialist will have a magnificent market in Mexico."

Serving as a private in Madero's army, Calles helped fight the landowners who held the Mexicans as slaves. He carried on the campaign later as governor of Sonora. As minister of education under President Obregon, he taught the liberated slaves.

General Calles has been called the Ramsay MacDonald of Mexico. He is a member of the International Machinists' Union, and is solicitous for the welfare of workmen above all else.

General Calles will encourage development of Mexican oil and mineral resources by Mexicans. American and British capitalists will be given concessions, if they do not attempt to break Mexico's domestic laws.

Mexico's new president has

East Tunes in as K L X Shatters Range Records in Big Game Story

Daylight Wave Lengths of 500 Miles Are Stretched to 3000; Experts Amazed.

The eyes of the scientific world are today turned toward the broadcasting station of The TRIBUNE, Radio KLX, and the opinion is freely expressed among transmission engineers that a development in radio broadcasting may soon be reached that will make it possible for present class "B" broadcasters to be heard the world over.

Due, it is believed, to favorable weather conditions, the signals of KLX spanned the continent in broad daylight on November 22, and were received in New York, New Jersey, Philadelphia, Chicago and Washington, D. C., with sufficient volume to operate loud speakers. This is the first time in the history of radio broadcasting that any station has spanned the continent during the daylight hours.

RADIO TRANSMISSION ENGINEERS AMAZED.

While KLX is heard across the continent consistently during the night-time transmissions, the unusual reception of the KLX signals on November 22 has started radio transmission engineers to wondering.

When the first letters reached The TRIBUNE telling of the unusual reception everybody had a hearty laugh and tried to forget it. More letters came, and still more. Many were signed by several witnesses, stating KLX had been heard broadcasting the California-Stanford game during the afternoon. The time in the east when the reception occurred was between 5:40 and 7:20 Eastern Standard time, shortly after dark on the Atlantic Coast. The sun however, was shining on the Pacific Coast and it was daylight as far east as Chicago.

500 MILES ORDINARY DAYLIGHT RANGE.

The ordinary daylight range of a modern broadcasting station is at best around 500 miles. On this occasion KLX was leaping across 3000 miles and was being heard on loud speakers.

It was at first believed that some station farther east had rebroadcast from KLX. This, however, failed to materialize. Every report placed the reception at 509 meters, the exact wavelength. In New York KLX was heard clearly on the loud speaker until WEAF came on, only a few meters below KLX, and blanketed the reception.

The reception was verified yesterday in New York, Chicago, Pennsylvania and Washington by reputable men, including a transmission engineer of the American Telephone and Telegraph company. Many of those who heard KLX copied the announcement, and the announcements tallied to the letter with those given from the announcing booth on the side lines at Memorial Stadium.

QUAKER STATE FAN WANTS NEW YEAR GAME.

So clear was the reception in Philadelphia that one fan has written requesting The TRIBUNE to broadcast the California-Pennsylvania game on New Years day, in which, he writes, "I am tremendously interested. I will be interested in hearing it direct from the field."

Radio engineers shrug their shoulders when asked about the unusual daylight transmission. They say that out of it all may eventually come some new development that will make the present 500-watt stations powerful enough to be heard clearly around the world.

Rejected Suitor Beats, Kills Girl

SHREVEPORT, La., Nov. 29.—Because his love was not returned, Joe J. Bass, 24, an oil field worker of Bethany, La., today shot and killed Miss Myrtle Odom, 19-year-old employee of the Atlantic Refining company, and then killed himself.

Witnesses said they heard Bass say: "I'm going to kill you."

"Don't do it," the girl begged, but Bass pinned her down, first struck her across the head with his pistol and then fired.

CAMP CHIEF SHOT SKIPKE, JURY FINDS

Oakland Fireman Is Killed During Drinking Bout in Municipal Resort, Coroner's Verdict on Tragedy

'Charlie' Christensen Said to Have Become Crazed and Hit Friend Firing at Random; Murder Charged

Despite testimony calculated to show that the shooting was accidental and not the result of a quarrel, a coroner's jury in Groveland last night, returned a verdict of murder, and held "Charlie" Christensen, caretaker of the Oakland municipal camp in the high Sierras, responsible for the death of Charles L. Kipke, a member of the Oakland fire department, who was shot and killed Friday in a camp cabin.

Christensen, who was found in the cabin when the body was discovered, was formally arraigned on a charge of murder yesterday before Justice M. T. Merrill of Groveland.

Denial that Kipke was shot in a quarrel with his friend, Christensen, was made at the inquest by another member of a drinking party which was in progress when the bullet which struck the fireman in the throat, was fired.

VICTIM HIT BY RANDOM SHOT, SAYS WITNESS.

The witness, Spencer by name, testified that he and Christensen and Kipke were drinking together in Christensen's cabin when Christensen, apparently suddenly out of his head because of too much liquor, seized the weapon and fired at random, the bullet happening to strike Kipke, killing him.

Russell Heal and his wife, who also were present when the shot was fired, immediately left the cabin and went to Groveland where they notified the sheriff's office.

Spencer said that Christensen did not aim at Kipke and that the shooting was accidental. No quarrel had preceded the shooting, he said.

Christensen recovered from the effects of the liquor this morning in the Groveland jail and could remember nothing of the details of the drinking bout that led to the fatality.

The coroner's jury found that Kipke was killed by a bullet fired by Christensen.

LOCAL OFFICER ASSIGNED TO SIFT KILLING.

Specially detailed on the case by Captain Richard V. McSorley, head of the Oakland Detective bureau, Inspector Timothy Flynn arrived at the municipal camp last night to investigate the slaying.

When the authorities arrived, Christensen was still in the cabin. He was placed under arrest by Sheriff J. W. Dambacher, and

Man Mysteriously Slain at L. A. Beach

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29.—A possible murder mystery was unearthed at Hermosa Beach today when the body of a well dressed elderly man was discovered on a vacant lot within the shadows of the hill upon which Hermosa Beach's famous "haunted home" towers in a gloomy grove of cedars.

A scrap of paper in the man's pocket marked with a circle, and a skull and cross bones and bearing the sentence, "Show this to May," started Hermosa Beach authorities on a search for "May."

An identification card in one of the man's pockets gave his name as Royal E. Koch and asked that in case of accident A. A. Koch of Kansas City, a son, be notified.

U. S. DEER KILLING RAILS TUOLUMNE

Residents Protest Slaughter of Game in Hoof and Mouth War.

SPECIAL BY WIRE
TO THE TRIBUNE

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 29.—With residents of Tuolumne county up in arms against the slaughter of deer in that section by federal forces engaged in eradicating the foot and mouth disease, Dr. J. P. Iverson, chief of the division of animal industry of the state department of agriculture, left today for Sonora. He will confer with Dr. Rudolph Snyder, representative of the federal government and attempt to affect a peaceful settlement of the matter.

Telegrams have been dispatched to the federal department of agriculture relative to the situation, it was learned. Recommendations of the state department were not made public, but it is believed the officials in charge here have asked for authority to continue the slaughter of deer until the disease has been completely eradicated.

Two hundred residents of Sonora are reported to have signed petitions asking the federal government to discontinue killing the deer.

Arizona Governor to Permit Kaibab Killing

BY UNITED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 29.—Deer slaying in the Kaibab National Forest was to be resumed today as a means of thinning out the big herd, according to announcement by State Game Warden Willard, following a conference with Governor Hunt. The state recently ordered the arrest of any sportsmen shooting deer in the reserve despite the federal order throwing it open.

Governor Hunt agreed to allow shooting when the impracticability of the proposed deer drive to other sections of the forest was shown. Narrow defiles and single track outlets make the plan impossible.

The animals have been multiplying so rapidly there is not enough green growth available for them to eat, and many have been found starved to death.

FIGHT LOOMS AS CONGRESS ASSEMBLES

La Follette Expulsion by Republicans Holds Stage Center Due to Effect on Line-up of Groups

Wisconsin Senator Keeps Silent; Democrats Will Welcome Wheeler Back Without Giving Rebuke

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The Sixty-eighth Congress will convene for its final session Monday.

Instead of the drab, colorless, routine session that has generally been expected it now appears there is going to be action aplenty in the three months of life that are left to the turbulent sixty-eighth.

The action of the Republican senatorial conference in reading out of the party four of its members, La Follette of Wisconsin, Brookhart of Iowa, Frazier and Ladd of North Dakota, has changed the whole aspect of the situation. Little else was talked about on the hill today.

RETALIATORY ACTION OF OUSTED AWAITED.

Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, whose independence of party ties is axiomatic around the capitol, is preparing to speak his mind about expelling the insurgents. So is Senator Norris of Nebraska, who votes oftener with the insurgents than with the administration. Senator Ladd, one of those barred from future party conferences, is writing his speech in defense.

The question that was everywhere asked today and nowhere answered was: "What retaliatory action will be taken by the ousted insurgents?"

By combining with the Democrats, as they did often last session, the insurgents are in a position to make things exceedingly embarrassing for the administration. They might even force President Coolidge to call an extra session of the Sixty-ninth Congress after the fourth of March, which he is exceedingly loath to do.

LA FOLLETTE REFUSES TO ANNOUNCE PLANS.

La Follette himself appeared tonight to hold the answer. He declined in his home at Madison today to state what his course of action would be. Senator Brookhart was not in the capital. Ladd and Frazier said they would continue voting and acting independently. La Follette will be here next week.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, arrived in Washington today and found a well nigh universal sentiment among his Democratic colleagues against taking any action against Senator Wheeler of Montana, such as the Republicans took against La Follette.

About all the program there is in either house is the passage of the usual appropriation bills, the disposition of Muscle Shoals, the disposition of the Howell-Barkley bill to abolish the railway labor board, and a jumble of unimportant bills that probably never will get through anyway.

'COLORED' BRIDE WILL FIGHT CASE TO BITTER END

Attorney Says Young Rhinelander Not Willing Party to Annulment Suit.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y. Nov. 29.—Indications that the doubt thrown about the racial ancestry of Mrs. Alice Jones Rhinelander, daughter of a colored man, would bethoroughly aired in court, increased tonight where her attorney announced he would fight the case "to the end" and would prove that her husband, Leonard Kip Rhinelander, was not a wholly willing party to the annulment suit against Mrs. Jones Rhinelander, who is alleged to have "said she was white whereas she was colored."

The Rhinelander family, socially prominent and wealthy, are behind the suit and the separation of young Rhinelander from his bride, who denies she is of negro blood, declared the attorney, Sameul F. Swinburne.

Mrs. Rhinelander, who is in seclusion, was quoted by Swinburne as declaring she believed her husband was being kept prisoner by his family.

A half hour before she was served with notice of the annulment action, Mrs. Alice Jones Rhinelander received a letter from the young man, expressing the hope that she would win the case, Swinburne said.

"Honey bunch, old scout: I hope you will win this case. Get the best lawyer.
(Signed)

"I don't want any of the Rhinelander money—I want my husband." Swinburne said the bride told him today.

"I am convinced that the Rhinelander people are behind the matter and wish to separate Leonard and me. I think he is being kept a prisoner."

In explaining that he would not ask alimony pending the annulment suit decision, Swinburne said the Rhinelander family had agreed to care financially for Mrs. Jones Rhinelander.

Thomas Lipton Finds Skipper for 1926 Yacht Cup Race in Jail

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

TORONTO, Nov. 29.—Sir Thomas Lipton went to the jail farm today and after a chat with Amelius Jarvis, Sr., a prisoner there, announced he had found the man to command the Lipton yacht, which in 1926 will challenge America to defend the America's Cup in another of the classic races off Sandy Hook.

Jarvis is a noted Canadian yachtsman and an old crony of Sir Thomas. He is serving six months for conspiracy to defraud the province in a sale of bonds.

For two hours the famous tea merchant and the prisoner enjoyed each other's company. Sir Thomas made positive announcement afterward that he would challenge America's hold on the international trophy in 1926 and that he had Jarvis' promise to serve as skipper of the challenger.

The yachtsmen also virtually decided that a craft of the schooner class would be built to oppose the American defender. Sir Thomas said nothing could convince him that his old friend Jarvis was guilty of the offense for which he was serving time.

NAVAL OFFICER STAFF DECLARED AT LOWEST MARK

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The existing authorized strength of line commissioned officers represents a minimum figure for adequate naval peace preparation, and it is considered essential to efficiency that this strength be reached as quickly as can be done with the output of the naval academy, according to the annual report of Curtis D. Wilbur, secretary of the navy. One of the serious problems of the department is to provide competent commissioned officers, since upon them rests, in peace and war, the responsibility for training personnel, active and reserve, and of operating and keeping up the materials, he says. Basically, they are the framework upon which the navy rests, and upon them will fall the prodigious tasks incident to war-time expansion.

The department finds it a difficult problem to adequately officer the vessels now maintained in commission under the operating plan, and believes that the maximum number of operating vessels has been reached consistent with the officer personnel available and competent to man the ships. There are now 4785 commissioned officers of the line, and of this number 2143, almost one-half, are ensigns and junior grade lieutenants, officers of limited sea experience. Consequently it is necessary to carry on, both at sea and on shore, intensive methods of training in order that these young officers may be fitted for the responsibile duties of the higher ranks at an early date.

With the increase in the meship and the compilication of kinds of naval weapons, it has been necessary for the department to carry on special technical instruction for officer personnel so that specialists are available to supervise the purchase, manufacture and inspection, and operation of these appliances and weapons. The postgraduate school maintained at Annapolis for this purpose is constantly being adapted to meet the needs of technical knowledge and at the present carries on courses in naval construction, ordnance, and civil, electrical, radio and aviation engineering. In certain subjects the courses are completed in an appropriate university or in the technical experimental plants of the navy. The number of officers under postgraduate instruction at the naval academy and in the colleges is at present about 150. It is believed desirable that this school be continued as at present, method of operation is such that no change is contemplated.

FIREMEN SPEND SPARE MOMENTS IN MAKING TOYS

ALAMEDA, Nov. 27.—Though one's work may be strenuous and the hours long, there is always time to make others happy — at least this is the kind of philosophy that emanates from Alameda fire house No. 1, at Webb and Park avenues. Under the direction of Captain Gus Wagner, the erstwhile fire fighters are busily engaged as toymakers, to bring Christmas cheer to thousands of Alameda children.

On the second floor of the structure, directly above where the big pumping engine stands, a work room has been transformed into toyland. Here the firemen, when not answering alarms, are busy making dolls, wooden animals, kiddie kars, miniature fire engines and a host of other things to delight the children who will come to the fire department's big Christmas tree on Christmas eve.

Although the Christmas party is an annual affair, the only one of its kind in the United States, it never has been attempted on such a stupendous scale as is being done this year. More than 14,000 presents, ranging from baby's rattles to coaster wagons and electric-driven trains, will comprise Santa's huge sack. There will also be distributed to the children five tons of candy, 20,000 bon bons and other gifts. Captain Wagner will act as Santa Claus.

The Christmas tree will be brought from the forests of northern California and will be 25 feet high, completely fill a corner of the main floor of the fire house. The tree will be decorated with tinsel and Christmas ornaments and illuminated by a battery of 1000 colored electric lights. Under this imposing giant of the forests, aglow with Christmas cheer, "Santa Claus" will endeavor to remember every boy and girl in Alameda on Christmas eve.

SOCIETY IS INCORPORATED.

Municipal Salary Survey Launched

BERKELEY, Nov. 29.—To determine whether Berkeley is paying municipal employees adequate salaries, questionnaires were today sent by City Manager John N. Edy to 185 cities in the United States having a population of between 50,000 and 100,000.

The sending of the questionnaires is part of an investigation of the city manager to determine upon a permanent salary schedule for the city hall. Business firms about San Francisco bay have been questioned relative to salaries paid for positions similar to those in municipal service.

California cities, which have already been heard from in the city manager's investigation, disclose Berkeley to be paying on the whole as good or better salaries than most of the municipalities in the State.

ALAMEDA, Nov. 29.—A survey of Alameda's needy families was begun by Alameda lodge of Elks today for the purpose of compiling a list of those who will receive Christmas dinners to be sent out by the Elks, according to their annual custom.

'Make 'Em Wild' Elk Show Slogan

ALAMEDA, Nov. 29.—"Make 'em wild," is the slogan adopted by William D. Gilson, in training his cast of stars and near stars who will take part in the Elks' charity show here December 9, 10, 11 and 12.

To this end Gilson today requisitioned two mammoth bears that were killed during a hunting expedition and forwarded here for the Elks' annual bear feast. According to Gilson, the members of the cast are to be fed bear meat daily from now on until the show is over to give them additional pep.

The carnival committee announced today that reservations would be received by telephone only from out-of-town points, Alameda residents being requested to buy their tickets from members of the ticket selling committee, or at the local Elks' headquarters.

The proceeds are to be used to bring Christmas cheer to the poor and needy families of Alameda.

Howard, the actress' husband, was said by police to have struck Pantages here recently when he found the theater magnate in his wife's company.

PAYMENT OF DEBT TO U. S. BY FRANCE PREDICTED SOON

Settlement Believed Possible on Basis of Moratorium, Easy Interest.

By A. L. BRADFORD,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—With the United States willing to make some concession and France showing a tendency to pay, settlement of the French debt to America was looked for in a reasonable length of time by American authorities today.

United States Ambassador Myron T. Herrick has, since his return, talked with several men, high in banking and governmental circles, regarding French sentiment on an early settlement, but has not yet conferred officially with the government.

Herrick has no instruction from his government regarding the debt, beyond what he can to pave the way.

American observers believe a settlement is possible on the basis of a moratorium and easy interest on the principal rather than a reduction on the capital sum.

Americans believe quiet negotiations effecting agreement on the principal terms of the settlement will have more chance of success than formal conferences between the two governments, hence it is not believed Minister of Finance Clementel will go to Washington as he had planned to do early next year.

Mrs. Christine Murphy is in charge of the program for the meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist church, to be held at parsonage on Wednesday, December 3, at 2:30 p. m. Mrs. S. J. Hocking and Mrs. M. Barclay will be the hostesses.

TWO PLOTTERS IN $2,000,000 RAID GIVEN 25 YEARS

Former Postal Inspector and Politician Sentenced for Part in Train Robbery.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29. — William J. Fahy, former postal inspector, was sentenced today to serve 25 years in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., by Judge Adam C. Cliffe, in federal court here, for plotting the $2,000,000 robbery of a Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad mail train at Roundout, Ill., June 12.

James Murray, Chicago politician, was given a similar sentence.

The pair were convicted by a jury Tuesday on testimony of the robbers and Fahy's associate inspectors. Walter McComb, Murray's lieutenant, charged jointly with them in the conspiracy, was acquitted.

Robert R. Levy, United States marshal, announced transfer of Fahy and Murray to their banishment will be deferred until Monday, when the confessed bandits, who carried out the robbery on information supplied by Fahy, will be sentenced. Those facing sentence Monday are Brent Glascock, Chicago, formerly of Kansas City, director of the looting; Herbert Holiday, Kansas City, and Joe, Jessie, Willis and Wylie Newton, of Dallas, Texas.

The party of prisoners will be transferred in a private special car now held in readiness here for the trip.

Of the $2,000,000 loot obtained, more than $1,600,000 worth has been recovered. Postal inspectors estimate that between $50,000 and $100,000 of it was disposed of by the gang before their arrest. The remainder, they believe, has been hidden by Murray.

Richmond O. E. S. Has Banquet, Initiation

Hammond was one of the visitors present, and there were several others from Oakland and Berkeley.

MUNICIPAL CAMP KEEPER HELD FOR SHIPKE KILLING

Oakland Fireman Shot to Death During Drinking Bout, Coroner's Verdict.

taken to jail. The fact that the dead man was a member of the Oakland fire department, and that the shooting occurred in the city's municipal camp, led McSorley to assign a member of the local department to aid in the unraveling of the mystery, when notified of the crime.

FIREMAN KIPKE ON LEAVE AFTER JUMP.

Kipke, who was married, lived at 2574 San Pablo avenue, and had been a member of the Oakland fire department since 1911. He was injured two years ago while practicing net jumping from a window of the Oakland High school and since that time had been on sick leave. Recently he had been living at the municipal camp for his health and with Christensen, had been occupying the latter's cabin.

For several weeks they had been snowed in. On Friday, they managed to dig out and both men journeyed to Groveland, sixteen miles away, for their Thanksgiving dinner. Persons who saw them before they left for their return to camp said both were intoxicated.

Late that evening a woman's excited voice called Sheriff Sambacher on the telephone and told him that a man had been killed at the Christensen cabin. Arriving at the place, the sheriff found the dead fireman, Christensen, unperturbed, watching the body.

WEEKS' REPORT URGES INCREASE IN U. S. DEFENSE

Economy Essential But Limit Is Near, Declares Secretary.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The army and navy of the United States at the present time would not be able to defend the country against attack and unless increased appropriations are made by Congress, it will be impossible to carry out the national defense plan, including the building up of a reserve, Secretary of War John W. Weeks declared in his annual report to President Coolidge today.

Secretary Weeks said he agreed fully that there was no need for "the biggest army in the world," but declared that there is a necessity to have an adequate army and adequate defense plan and they are impossible under the present stringent economy. There is a limit to the economy, Secretary Weeks asserted, and it has been reached. Further economies will not only cripple the national defense but will waste a dollar to save a penny.

BIGGER FORCES URGED

The special recommendations in order to provide the United States with an adequate defense include:

1 The present strength of the regular army (118,750 men and 12,000 officers) should be increased to at least 150,000 men and 13,000 officers, including an air service personnel of 3000 officers and 25,000 men.

2 The National Guard should be increased from the present strength of 176,000 to 250,000.

3 Funds should be appropriated for the training of one-third of the organized reserve (now over 80,000) and funds provided to train 7000 reserve officers annually instead of the 4000 trained men now produced.

4 The entire housing program of the army should be investigated by Congress and there are at the present time 40,000 men under unsuitable shelter, many living in tents summer and winter.

5 Obsolete coast defense armament should be replaced with guns that will enable us to protect our important coast cities on both the Pacific and Atlantic, and a reserve supply of ammunition and other war material should be built up.

6 Air service equipment at the present time is totally inadequate and appropriations must be made for the purchase of additional planes and to proivide for aeronautical research.

7 Recommendation is made that 2 per cent of the promotions annually be made by the President from among officers of below the rank of colonel for some special conspicuous act of service instead of having all promotions made through seniority.

8 Recommendations that enlistments be changed from one or three years to three years.

An increase in the army is needed, Secretary Weeks said, because while the present authorized size is too small, a large percentage of the officers and men are in non-combatant branches.

AIR STRENGTH DECRIED

In connection with the air service program, Secretary Weeks explained that conditions are critical and that additional funds for the purchase of aircraft are a necessity. On July 1, 1925, he reported, there will be 576 planes (205 produced during war time) and 38 ballons available for military use and on July 1, 1926, that number will be reduced by half. About 80 per cent of the aircraft are not suitable for combat use, he said, and the requirements for the existing peace time organization call for 1655 airplanes, ten airships and 25 balloons.

LETTERS AFFIRM WORRIES CAUSED BANKER'S SUICIDE

LOS GATOS, Nov. 29.—Two letters discovered in the room where Walter DeKalb Sheldon, banker and grain merchant was found dead yesterday, were read at the coroner's inquest this afternoon. They confirmed the theory advanced by Mrs. Sheldon, the widow, that Sheldon had committed suicide because of ill health and financial worries.

The letters were found by J. M. McMasters of San Francisco, an old friend of the Sheldon family.

One of the letters, addressed to "My Dear Friends and Others," asked forgiveness and contained words of regret that Sheldon could not meet his obligations to them. The letter also asked "those who have tried to cause trouble between my wife and myself to have the decency to stop their babbling tongues."

The second letter to his wife was very short and simply stated that he could no longer bear the burdens of life in ill health and financial worries.

The coroner's jury brought in a verdict that death was self-inflicted.

Besides Mrs. Sheldon the banker is survived by a sister, Mrs. Edward T. Houghton, 2801 Claremont avenue, Berkeley.

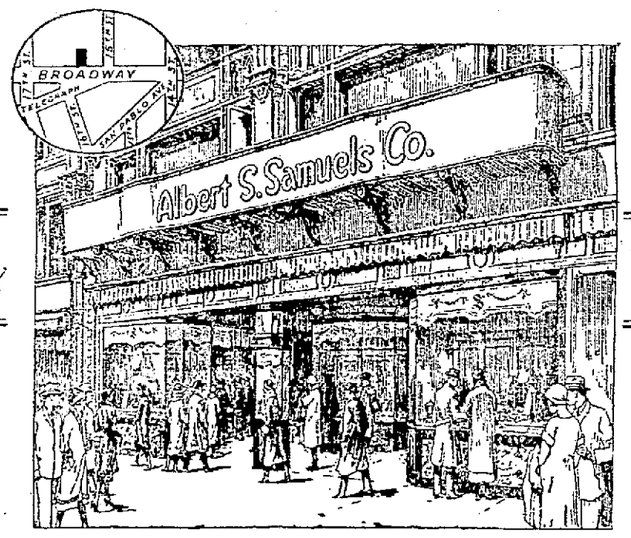
Let This Store Be of Service Now

By Albert S. Samuels



1520 BROADWAY — Between 15th and 16th

OVER two years ago black-skinned miners of South Africa brought these brilliant, flawless, blue-white diamonds up from the bowels of Mother Earth. Months later they were carefully cut and polished by skilled artisans in Amsterdam. Then they were imported—and artistically set in magnificent mountings of platinum and gold. Now they are ready for you—for gifts to the ones you hold near and dear.

Anniversary Special Repeated

Sterling Silver Pie Servers 75c each

AS a special offer during our Anniversary week, we advertised Sterling Silver Pie Servers at 75c. Although our stock was large, it was soon depleted. An order for more pie servers was placed. The pie servers have arrived. Now we repeat the offer. Pie Servers with hammered Sterling Silver handles, while they last, each 75c.

All through the year---starting long before you had begun to think of Christmas---—gem cutters, silversmiths and highly skilled designers and makers of useful, pleasure-giving articles were planning and working in order that your every want might be gratified during the holiday period that is now upon us. Likewise, we have labored for months so that this store can serve you in the manner you expect and deserve.

A great national election has passed. Wonderful games of football have come and gone. Thanksgiving day has been observed by a grateful Nation. Now comes the holidays—and we are READY, more so than ever before! Please keep this store in mind. Remember its location—and the pledge of satisfaction back of its merchandise and service. Be assured that jewelry makes a gift that always pleases. We will consider it a privilege to show you our merchandise. You will not be obligated to buy.

TEACHER BRIDE OF STUDENT TO SUE

BY UNITED PRESS
LAESED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

CANBY, Ore., Nov. 29.—Mrs. Rosamond Lee Shaw Samuelson, English teacher of the Canby High school, indicated today that she will fight for her full year's salary following action of the school board in ousting her from the faculty last night because she married a student.

The teacher, who is said to be more than ten years older than her youthful husband, Leroy Samuelson, 17, was indignant over the proceedings and held it was none of the school board's business whom she married.

Mr. and Mrs. John Samuelson, the bridegroom's parents, declared today they would not ask for annulment of the marriage nor interfere in any way with the young couple's plans.

"We are perfectly willing that they work out their own plans and we shall furnish no obstacle," the father said. "We are well pleased with our son's wife and are glad to welcome her into the family."

Bride, Boy Mate

MRS. ROSAMOND LEE SHAW SAMUELSON and husband, 17. Her marriage to her young pupil caused her dismissal. She is ten years older than child husband.

BRITISH SPEED MORE TROOPS TO TROUBLED EGYPT

Censors Veil Warfare Now Believed Raging in Sudan and Cairo.

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 29.—Wherever Egypt turned tonight it stared into the throat of a cannon.

For the first time since agitation seized the country over Britain's reprisals for the murder of Sir Lee Stack, Sudanese governor-general, artillery fire was used upon the natives this afternoon. Big guns tore down a house in Khartoum, wherein the mutinous Sudanese troops who killed three doctors in attacking a hospital had barricaded themselves.

Fourteen natives were killed and those of the mutineers not killed were captured by the English troops. That was only one of the meager reports of violence that seeped through slashed telegraph wires from Khartoum. There came also reports of mob fighting in the streets but the serious consequences mentioned were not described fully.

DEATH WARNING.

Warning was broadcast throughout the country this evening that any more attempts at rebellion would be met with execution before firing squads. Sudanese troops were cautioned that members of any organization in which mutiny originates would be executed—a practice in use in military organizations of many countries to induce non-mutineers to report the activities of rebellion fomenters.

British reinforcements for the English troops in the Sudan are on their way north. Heavy guard is being kept over all munitions to prevent Egyptians, whose stocks are low, from replenishing them.

According to official reports the attack upon the mutinous band was made only after the most severe provocation. When the mutiny started British troops endeavored to quell it without use of arms, but the blacks, having taken arms, including machine guns, fired and the Highlanders were forced into open battle after two officers had been lost.

BAND SURROUNDED

The native troops were barricaded for the night and remained unmolested, though surrounded. Today an attempt was made to dislodge them.

It soon became evident that frontal attack of the native troops could only be costly in casualties as the Sudanese fought desperately. During a lull in the attack officers conferred and as a result light field pieces appeared.

The natives' refuge crumbled before the new and heavier assault and the compound became a shambles.

Such natives as remained alive after a few minutes of artillery fire, surrendered.

GREAT WESTERN POWER TO MERGE WITH SAN JOAQUIN

Fleishhackers Announce the Great Consolidation Will Take Effect Tuesday.

The largest power merger in the history of the Pacific coast will be completed Tuesday, according to Mortimer Fleishhacker, president of the Great Western Power Company, which is merging with the San Joaquin Light and Power Company.

Mortimer Fleishhacker and Herbert Fleishhacker, president and vice-president respectively of the Great Western Power Company and its subsidiaries, resigned at noon today, but will remain as directors of the company during the merging proceedings.

Mortimer Fleishhacker said last night that his banking interests would occupy his time for the future, but that he was retaining his Oregon and Washington power interests.

Guy C. Earl, vice-president and general counsel of the Great Western Power Company, was elected president, and James B. Black, general manager of the company, was elected vice-president in the place of the Fleishhackers.

The merger is understood to mean an expansion of the Byllesby interests, already prominent in the western power field through control of the companies furnishing power for the street railways of San Francisco and other cities.

MILLION YEARS DID NOT CHANGE AMERICA'S FORM

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—The general shape of the American continents has not changed for millions of years, is the belief of Professor R. T. Chamberlin, geologist of the University of Chicago, it was announced today.

New Plan Speeds Radio Pictures to U. S. From England

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

LONDON, Nov. 29.—For the past two weeks, the Marconi officials declare, they have been nightly sending pictures to America. The new system, they said, had been proved to be superior in practicality and speed.

The greatest disadvantage of the older methods, the officials stated, was their slowness. This is overcome, it is claimed, by the new method which is called the Radio Corporation system and by which it is said to be possible to send pictures in 20 to 30 minutes, depending upon the type of the pictures. The wireless picture tests have been carried on at night because of the pressure of business during the day. It is maintained, however, that the system is equally practical in the daytime.

Thus far the transmission has been solely from England because the apparatus for the receipt of wireless pictures has not yet arrived from America. Officials here desired to postpone the announcement of the new system until they were able to make a joint demonstration of both the sending and receiving of pictures, but officials of the Radio Corporation stated that they preferred to make public the results of the tests now.

Sending of pictures tomorrow, it was emphasized, is meant only as a pulic demonstration and not a test since the method has already been proved undoubtedly practical.

During the recent tests random pictures have been transmitted. These were chosen as best suited for experimental purposes from those belonging to employees of the company. During the public demonstration tomorrow, however, the photographs, which will be sent by wireless across the Atlantic will include those to American Ambassador Kellogg, Owen D. Young, former agent general for reparations and other notables.

MARGETT'S RUGS AND CARPETS EXCLUSIVELY

Opening Sale of Oriental Rugs

A NEW department of Oriental Rugs is now ready at our Oakland store. These costly products of the Eastern Rug Makers are offered the people of the East Bay in accordance with the Margett policy, at prices that we believe will prove most attractive. For the opening month of December special offerings are in effect and owners of fine homes will make a great mistake if they do not call and examine these handsome Chinese and Persian rugs.

Let us repeat that the prices for December are very low—probably lower than any in your experience. Frankly, we shall sell two or three lines of these masterpieces of rug weaving at wholesale cost, as an aid in getting established in the Oriental Rug field. A Chinese Carpet, 9x12, for example, may be had for $195, a most unusual price. Oriental Rug buyers can not do less than make us a visit and investigate the prices in comparison with others.

Advice from Native Expert

BEDROS HAGOPIAN, a native expert with a lifetime experience in Oriental Rugs, will be in attendance during this introductory month and will give free advice on the repairing and cleaning of Oriental Rugs. He will visit your home, upon invitation, and tell you just what is required to put your Oriental rugs in first-class condition. His lectures are very informative and women's clubs and others may have his services for lecture purposes upon request.

Dainty Turkish Slippers ---Souvenirs

During the month of December. Margett will present to each of his customers, with a purchase in any department, a handsome pair of Turkish Slippers, beautifully brocaded and in a variety of colors.

SCANDINAVIANS PLAN BENEFITS FOR CHAIR AT U. C.

Establishment of Department Is Goal of Series of Entertainments.

BERKELEY, Nov. 29.—To raise sufficient funds to establish a Scandinavian department at the University of California the Scandinavian club on the Berkeley campus will give a series of dances and entertainments. The first will be held December 5 in Stephens Union.

Much discussion has resulted among Scandinavians throughout the State of California because of the lack of proper facilities to carry on the study of Scandinavian literature and language. Clubs have been formed, all with the purpose of raising more than $50,000, the amount needed to establish the chair.

In 1914 prominent Scandinavians tried to interest the board of regents of the University, but because of the lack of university funds the plan fell through. However, the regents stated that if enough money was raised on the outside the department would be established. At that time a number of prominent businessmen in the state started a fund, to which the clubs have been adding their share through entertainments and dances.

The affairs to be given by the Scandinavian club on the Berkeley campus will be open to the public. Many prominent people in the bay cities are assisting the campus organization. C. E. Wallerstedt, counsel for Sweden; Fin Lund, counsel for Denmark, and the Norwegian counsel, Nils Voll, with their wives, will act as patrons and patronesses. Miss Charlotte Knudsen, an artist, has offered to paint the portrait of the winner of a contest to be held at the dance.

The arrangements of the dance are in charge of I. I. Goleman, assistant professor of general literature at the university. Assisting him will be Ruth Kinnel, Ruth Gorden, Berglot Hovde, Lillian Wennestrom, Alfred Nelson, Alvar Helgren, Arthur Carlson and Ingeborg Schneidau of the Oakland Technical High school.

PRIEST COMPARES EUROPE AND U. S.

BERKELEY, Nov. 29.—Once the people of Ireland become accustomed to dealing with their new government they will succeed in the permanent establishment of a free state, says Rev. T. J. Brennan, pastor of St. Joseph's church of Berkeley, who spoke yesterday at the Public Spirit Club on his recent trip to Europe.

"See America First" was Father Brennan's advice to his fellow members in the club. He said:

"I found the people of Europe very proud of their ancient monuments and the accomplishments of their ancestors of the dim and misty past. They always referred to these ancestors as their own, but I did not hesitate to remind them that they were likewise our ancestors. I some way got the impression that they were more proud of their accomplishments in past history than they were of their progress in modern ways. Of course, I emphasized the rapid development of America and made it clear that if we are to make comparisons we should be limited to what has been done here and in Europe during the past two centuries."

Continuing along this line Father Brennan said: "I even suspected that the great progress of Europe in literature and art was suspended when our immediate ancestors left to come here. We have a tremendous advantage, in that we all speak the same language in America, although we are divided into states. Over there you travel a short distance and find you cannot understand what people are saying because they have a different language. The peoples of the different countries have this same trouble between themselves and to overcome it spend a great deal of time, especially those engaged in commerce and public business, to learn the language of their neighbors."

The speaker referred to conditions in Ireland where he visited his old home and said that he found them in many ways bothered with the same problems as here, resulting from post-war conditions. He said that the country was mainly engaged in agriculture and declared the finest horses in the world are produced there. The people are keenly interested and devoted to stock raising.

Married Women Lead Single in Crime

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 29.—Crime among women is apparently on the increase, or more are being caught, and married women lead single women in running afoul the law, according to statistics compiled by the state bureau of criminal identification.

A total of 1092 women and girls have been apprehended on charges carrying penitentiary sentences if convicted, the past year, the bureau reported, and of this total approximately 65 per cent claimed to have been married.

The number represented a 25 per cent increase over last year.

COUPLE TRAPPED BY WIFE RECEIVE MORALS SERMON

Architect and Alleged Affinity Given Six Months' Suspended Sentence.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 29.—Arthur J. Scholz, an architect, and his alleged affinity, Miss Ruth Brown, were given a six months' suspended sentence and a sermon on morals by Police Judge Lazurus today after Mrs. Anna Scholz had testified to trapping them in an apartment at 424 Ellis street November 8. Both were charged with a misdemeanor offense.

Mrs. Scholz, accompanied by her attorney, Carl Mueller, rented an apartment opposite to that of Miss Brown, and watched across the street until Miss Brown extinguished her lights. Then, aided by the police, they broke in. Mrs. Scholz described the scene that greeted her eyes when she found herself in the presence of Miss Brown and her own husband, and hinted that she was going to get a divorce.

After the magistrate had severely lectured the offending couple and had passed judgment upon them, Scholz aided Miss Brown with her wrap and left the court room with her.

Spain's New Stamp Does Alfonse Justice

MADRID, Nov. 29.—A new one-peseta stamp in very deep blue has just been issued here. The design shows a life-like portrait of King Alfonso, which is given greater prominence by the simplicity of the surrounding frame. The stamps of Spain and of the Spanish colonies have not hitherto done justice to King Alfonso.

Shoe "Menagerie" Is New Woman Fad

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The up to date woman here has a regular "menagerie" in her shoe cupboard. To dainty footgear—including those made of crocodile, lizard, alligator, shark and sea leopard—she must now add a pair made of ostrich skin.

This is a new departure, and shoes composed of it look smart and promise to wear well. It is brown, and the holes out of which feathers have been plucked show a deeper tone and make an effective decoration.

A shoemaker who has introduced these shoes is also making models in walrus skin, and is experimenting with the skin of the rayfish, which he thinks will be very successful for footwear.

Pharaoh Statue Found in Egypt

CAIRO, Nov. 29.—A life size statue in limestone of King Zoser, builder of the step-pyramid, has been discovered during further excavations at Sakkara at the base of the pyramid.

The statue is in a good state of preservation, only the head being slightly chipped.

Sakkara is fifteen miles southwest of Cairo. King Zoser was a Pharaoh of the Third Dynasty [illegible] years ago. Previous discoveries consist of two shrines, presumably those of the queens of King Zoser.

U. S. INDIA ROW IN DOPE PARLEY CONTINUES ACUTE

American Delegation Refuses to Modify Program in Face of Threats.

By WINDER R. HARRIS,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.
(Special Wireless Despatch)

GENEVA Nov. 29.—The row between the United States and India continued to be the sensation of the opium conference today, the delegates realizing that it contains the possibility of a break up. No overtures have been made to the United States and there has been no meeting with India. A cable agreement is apparently impossible.

The discussion today confirmed yesterday's impression gained from applause over the majority vote to sustain the American position. Chairman Porter of the American delegation has received many assurances of support.

INDIA THREAT.

It is believed that India will not walk out and that Sir John Campbell is bluffing. It was learned today that Campbell called on the American delegation and made the threat that India would quit the conference unless Porter agreed to abandon the proposal for the reduction of the growth of plants.

Porter refused on the ground that to yield would be a betrayal of his program. He told Sir John that he could do what he liked. Warm words were exchanged for an hour whereupon Campbell left angrily.

Should India leave it is wondered whether Great Britain, her mother government or Canada would follow suit. It is not believed that they would but if they did it would break up the conference.

FAVOR GOING AHEAD.

If India alone retires sentiment is favorable to going ahead without her.

A favorable decision on the Porter motion to refer his proposal to a committee will be followed, it is believed, by the conference's approval. Campbell is said to realize this and for that reason is trying to block its consideration by technicalities.

Today was devoted to the session of five subcommittees. Some headway was made but nothing definite was accomplished.

Railway Engine Men Get 5 Per Cent Wage Boost

decisions are to be agreed upon or further arbitrated, the decision sets forth

BOARD ASSUMED JURISDICTION IN CASES.

Chairman Ben W Hooper of the Labor Board declared that the board assumed jurisdiction over the wage dispute when the negotiations between the chairmen of the engineers and firemen brotherhoods and the committee of managers of western railroads ended in a deadlock last summer.

Although the chairmen of the brotherhoods refused to appear in answer to the Labor Board's summons denying the constitutionality of the board's power, it was possible to decide the rules issue because of previous testimony given by the grand chairmen in earlier case.

To test this issue the labor board placed two of the forty-five individual cases in Federal court each time being urged that the board had the right to summon witnesses. These cases are now pending in the supreme court.

NO DISSENTING OPINION IN REGARD TO WAGES.

The decision of the Labor Board to which there was no dissenting opinion was reached after two days of executive session. It is quite similar to the agreement reached by the conductors and trainmen of these same roads on May 1 when they met with the committee of managers without intervention of the Labor Board.

Among the principal roads in the west and southwest affected by the decision are:

TIGER OF SONORA HOPES TO BRING PEACE TO MEXICO

stated that aliens from congested districts of the United States would be received cordially in Mexico. Few Europeans go directly to Mexico, he said.

General Calles believes that divorce should be made easy. He would allow a couple to be divorced immediately if both parties desired it.

One of the new president's most radical projects, which he plans to inaugurate soon, is a new "union shop" prison system. Under this system prisoners will be paid union wages for their labor and will live "with all the comforts of home." Half of the money will be given to the convict's family. This system has already been tried out here, but General Calles plans to make it permanent.

Another innovation in the system is that a convict's wife or sweetheart is allowed to visit him in his private room once a week.

Most of the convict's pay is kept in a fund, which he receives at the end of his term. Thus a liberated prisoner faces the world with ready money and knowledge of a useful trade.

By such reforms as these General Calles plans to improve the condition of Mexico's citizens and bring them up to the plane of citizens of more civilized nations.

Knox Faculty Gives O. K. to Army Game

GALESBURG, Ill., Nov. 29.—Knox college faculty members at a meeting this morning ratified the contract for the Knox-Army football game Oct. 10, 1925.

Large Stadium Is Planned On Long Island

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Plans for an athletic stadium of 110,000 seating capacity to be completed in Long Island City in time for the 1925 season were made known in Brooklyn by Charles L. Henderson, operator of the Henderson Bowl in Brooklyn.

A tract of land, 600 by 720 feet, equivalent to three city squares and situated just north of the Long Island City Plaza of the Queensboro bridge, has been leased as the site.

Parking space for 10,000 automobiles in the immediate vicinity of the stadium will be provided, Henderson said. He described the location of the site as "six minutes from the Grand Central station." With Henderson are associated a group of men of influence and money who plan to incorporate the enterprise as soon as it assumes more concrete form.

Henderson was asked if it were not possible that the bowl would be used for important prize fights and that the expected Dempsey-Willis match might not be staged there.

"Yes, that is possible," he replied, "but there's nothing I can say about it further."

He said that the promoters of the enterprise hoped to organize local football teams to be composed of former college stars to play at the stadium and also to attract there intersectional and other largely attended collegiate gridiron contests.

FORMER BANDIT SUSPECT HUNTED IN BANKER DEATH

Man Thwarted in Robbery Declared Seen Near Region of Crime.

BY UNITED PRESS
LEASED WIRE TO TRIBUNE

SAN BERNARDINO, Nov. 29.—Search for Edgar B. Glauque, at one time charged with the attempted robbery of a Los Angeles bank, was started today by officers investigating the mysterious death of William R. Fee, wealthy banker.

Glauque, according to District Attorney George B. Johnson, had a grudge against Fee which grew out of his capture after Fee had thwarted his attempts to loot the Los Angeles bank. The man has been seen in this vicinity and will be questioned regarding his movements during the first three days of last week, it was stated.

Miss Mary Watkins, young Alhambra business woman, has been practically exonerated from connection with the crime, it was stated by officers. Her "platonic love" affair with the banker, and the fact that Fee's body was found near her mountain cabin in Lytle Creek canyon, had resulted in several sessions of close questioning by Sheriff Shay, but officers have announced themselves as satisfied that she can shed no further light on the mystery.

Fee, president of three southern California banks, disappeared three weeks ago from his mountain home. When his body was discovered last Tuesday it was announced that he had been killed by a blow on the head from some blunt weapon.

Millionaire to Fight Action for Divorce

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 29.—John Raymond Owens, Toledo millionaire clubman, will fight the divorce action brought by Mrs. Florence Owens here two years ago, in which she named Miss Irene Dalton, movie actress, as co-respondent, it was revealed today when Judge Lloyd, who was to hear the suit, announced a trial date would be set for a later date.

Called for hearing before Judge Lloyd as an uncontested suit, attorneys for Owens appeared in court. Judge Lloyd said that inasmuch as Jones was represented by counsel a trial would have to be set.

Miss Dalton, who is a sister of Dorothy Dalton, and Owens are now out on bond in Los Angeles, after being arrested on two federal indictments returned here charging them with violations of the Mann act.

CLOSED TOP
Makes more room for cooking!
No Waste Heat!

Without increasing the size of the range the closed top adds fully half again as much room to the cooking top. More things cooking at one time means quicker prepared meals and less of a woman's time spent in the kitchen.

No waste heat means more cooking done on less gas—a lower gas cost.

Does away with gas fumes

Cleaned in a jiffy!

To many housewives this is the outstanding feature. No scrubbing burners, no polishing top. Just wipe with an oiled rag.

Education Will Be High Twelve Topic

Education will be the topic for discussion at the weekly luncheon of the High Twelve club Monday at the Peerless cafe. Miss Annie Florence Brown, chairman of the Christmas Seals committee, will give a brief talk. Dr. N. K. Foster will tell of his experiences and present several educators who will tell of the needs of the schools. A short musical program will be presented. Members of Masonic lodges have been invited to the luncheon.

San Leandro Civic Center Plans Social

Visitors Barred In Convict Road Camp

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 29.—Convict labor camps, housing men from state prisons employed in building state highways, are not open to visitors and any "arrangement for such public inspection by any employee of the highway commission would constitute a serious breach of discipline," said State Highway Engineer R. M. Morton, following receipt of information that prisoners employed in a road camp in the Kern River canyon had planned "open house" in connection with a baseball game between the camp team and an outside club.

"Such a program as published reports indicate was contemplated at Kern River camp is prohibited by the regulations ofthe state board of prison directors and the rules of the California highway commission," said Morton. "Admission of the public would make the proper administration of these camps impossible and will not be permitted under any circumstances."

Heart-throbs

Heart-throbs pulsate all through the human documents written to Geraldine.

Vital human problems are presented every day to the readers and are discussed and answered by and for them.

Geraldine is a forum of human emotions. It is a public confessional, where people bare their very souls, lift heavy burdens from their minds and secure wholesome, rational counsel.

Problems, some grave, some frivolous---problems of love, of married life, of conduct; in fact, of every phase of human existence---are presented by the hundreds of people who daily dampen Geraldine's shoulder with their tears.

Among the subjects discussed by Geraldine are:

Puppy Love
Doorstep Babies
Grown Girls Whipped by Mother
Lasting Friendship
Adopted Mother Bugaboo
Old Men---Young Girls
A Housekeeper's System
Joy of Motherhood
Gold Diggers

ARMY BLANKS NAVY IN ANNUAL CLASSIC 12 TO 0

Berkeley High School Football Team Wins Class A Championship

GARBISCH KICKS FOUR FIELD GOALS TO WIN FOR WEST POINTERS

Victory of Army Gives Soldiers Lead in Series; Navy Advances in Final Quarter to 15-Yard Line But Is Unable to Put Over a Score.

By HERBERT REED.
(Universal Service Staff Correspondent.)

BALTIMORE, Nov. 29.—Four smart field goals, traveling like four rifle shots from the toe of Edgar Garbisch, the cadet leader with the perpetually cheery grin, took all the wind out of the Navy sails this afternoon and gave West Point a splendid victory by the score of 12 to 0.

The sailormen fought gallantly and cleverly but about the only Annapolis weapon was the forward pass, and even that was turned against them.

Garbisch's four goals covered respectively 37, 43, 23 and 30 yards. He missed two others and booted still another into the line but his percentage was certainly high. The ball in every case had plenty of pace on it and the protection afforded the kicker was splendid.

The soldiers were in command of the game a great deal of the time showed superior condition and a deal more "savvy" than their opponents. The coaches certainly shared in the victory for it was an alert, well taught eleven that took home the sea food from the Chesepeake.

The game was devoid of spectacular runs but none the less was not without its share of sensations. Both teams were badly in the hole at times and squeezed out by recovered fumbles and another despite measures.

Cadents Had Power And Used It Well.

The soldiers had a great deal more power than at first appeared and they knew when to turn it on. Toward the close they threw in speedy backs to liven up the ended threw in young Trapnell a star hitherto under cover.

Trapnell was away with a pass and had put in a new run when time was called with the cadets striking badly for a touchdown Wood's kicking was often more than matched by Chillingworth's great boots, but this was more than offset by other methods of making scores of opportunities by intercepting passes at which Hewitt and Filmore were adept indeed and by blocking kicks an undertaking neatly carried out by Frazier at end and Farwick at guard.

Most of the scoring, however, could be traced back directly to the splendid forward pass Captain Ewen had taught his team, this was all but flawless after the early flurry and was unmistakably the best pass defense of the year in the east, at all events, the backs leaped for the ball, insisting upon their equal right to its possession, they insisted to such an extent that it showed with results

Army Was a Team With Many Stars.

The army team was indeed a team in every sense of the word, but boasted of stars just the same. Garbisch did not set out at the terrific gait he set later when he not only intercepted passes, picked up loose balls and interferred all over the place, but who bored through the line, making great holes for his backs.

Ellinger and Farwick outplayed the Navy guards, although Chillingworth had his big movements other than those consulted by his splendid punting.

From the guards out, the cadets gradually established their superiority. Frazier and Baxter played a strictly high grade game of football throughout the afternoon, but Frazier was a star of stars.

Frazier Was One Of Bright Stars.

His blocked kick came at just the right time and he was a terror to the navy passer, Hamilton. He harried Hamilton to distraction. It was this that made so much interception possible. Wilson did not

Washington Is Mentioned for U. S. C. Contest

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29.—The University of Southern California will play its big game of the 1925 football season against the University of Washington here, according to a tentative schedule outlined today by Gwynn Wilson, graduate manager at the Trojan institution.

Wilson, who has returned from a tour of the East, in which he opened athletic relations with several big schools, promised an intersectional clash for Los Angeles next season. He refused to tell with whom he was angling for the contest.

PENN'S RECORD FOR SEASON IS UNUSUAL

Quakers Have Only Been Scored on By Three Teams and Have Only One Tie.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, Nov. 29.—The "ifs" which have been so firmly attached to any discussion of the California-Pennsylvania set-to on New Year's day are now actual facts. The regular seasons of both the teams concerned are over and both teams as was so earnestly hoped by their supporters, are undefeated Pennsylvania attained this status by defeating Cornell Thanksgiving day for the first time in four years, while the Bears reached this position for the fifth consecutive time about a week ago.

Out of the ten games on the Quakers' schedule this year nine have resulted in victories for the Red and Blue, while one game—that with Penn State—played on a muddy field ended in a scoreless tie.

This record has served to place the Philadelphians right up around the top of the eastern football heap.

Only Dartmouth and Yale in the east, Notre Dame in the middle west, and Stanford and California in the far west have records at all comparable to that of the Pennsylvania eleven.

Pennsylvania 34, Urscinus 0.
Pennsylvania 52, Drexel 0.
Pennsylvania 26, Franklin and Marshall 0.
Pennsylvania 35, Swarthmore 7.
Pennsylvania 10, Columbia 7.
Pennsylvania 27, Virginia 0.
Pennsylvania 6, Lafayette 3.
Pennsylvania 3, Georgetown 0.
Pennsylvania 0, Penn State 0.
Pennsylvania 20, Cornell 0.
Totals—213, 17.

All of the above just serves to make the coming encounter with the California Bears in the Memorial stadium on January 1 just that much more of a spectacle.

Two undefeated teams, each thoroughly representative of their respective sections will be meeting on that day, and it takes no farseeing prophet to predict a great game of football.

Accounts of the Cornell game, which is the "big game" for the Quakers, indicate that Lou Young has developed a formidable aerial attack.

Since a defense against this form of play has been the one outstanding weakness of the Bears this season possibilities of interesting developments in the game loom up.

Andy Smith and Babe Horrell scouted that game, however, so the Bears will have some inkling of what to expect from the Philadelphia gridders.

Not the least interesting phase of the Penn-Cornell struggle was the enthusiasm and interest it attracted in the east.

The date of departure for the Pennsylvania team has not yet been set, but advance reports are to the effect that the Quakers will not arrive here until two or three days before the game. Definite advices as to the time, and the men selected to make the trip should be forthcoming soon.

Holy Cross Is Easy Winner in Final Contest

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Excelling in every department of the game, getting all the breaks and playing with the smoothness of a well-oiled machine, the Holy Cross football team from Worcester defeated Boston College at Braves field here today by a score of 33 to 0 and won the Jesuit championship of the east.

Between 45,000 and 50,000 fans packed every available seat in the stadium, despite a raw drizzle that fell throughout the entire game. The final minutes of play were in almost total darkness.

Holy Cross uncorked one of the most impressive open field running games ever seen here and at all times followed the ball with deadly precision.

Boston College, however, failed to display even a semblance of the offensive she was reputed to have and made only one first down throughout the game, against ten for Holy Cross.

Turner Married In Philadelphia

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 29.—Thomas L. Turner, president of the Portland Baseball Club, was married to Mrs. Clara Dorfner in Philadelphia, according to word received here tonight.

Turner and his bride are in New York prior to going to Hartford, Conn., to attend the annual meeting of National Association of Minor Leagues.

Turner met Mrs. Dorfner at Hotel Green in Pasadena in the spring of 1922, when the Portland club was training in California.

Governor Still Is Opposed to Boxing Measure

HOLLISTER, Nov. 29.—That the new 10-round boxing law, ratified by the voters November 4, is to undergo several elimination bouts to a decision with old Kid Law himself, judging from a letter received here today from Governor Friend W. Richardson, addressed to a local sportsman interested in effecting the law.

The governor also revealed himself as unfavorable to "commercialized prize fighting and have no interest in it. I regret that I am under the necessity of appointing a commission to further prize fighting," says the governor.

Regarding selection of personnel for the commission, Governor Richardson says: "If I do not find the right names on the list I may draft those who have not been mentioned."

In the matter of probability of the law being fought out in the courts, Governor Richardson says, "I imagine there will be a great many controveries and it is even possible that much of the law will be knocked out by the courts. The authority of the commission is also something which will have to be settled by the courts."

Lodi Defeats Stockton For Section Title

LODI, Nov. 29.—Before a crowd of 4700 fans, the Lodi high school football team won the sectional football championship here today by defeating Stockton high school 25 to 0. Lane was the outstanding star for the Lodi eleven.

John Criola, Stockton quarterback, was badly hurt during the contest and had to be removed. The extent of his injury has not been determined.

Lodi will meet Oroville next Saturday at Oroville to settle the Central California championship. The winner of the game will meet the winner of the Berkeley-San Mateo game to decide the championship of Northern California.

RECORD FOR 50 YEARS.

Lady Stout, 2:20, was the first 3 year old trotter to beat 2:30. That was in 1874. This fall Mr. Elwyn went a mile in 1:59¾. It has taken exactly fifty years to knock thirty seconds off the old mark.

ROCKNE'S MEN COME FROM BEHIND TO WIN

Carnegie Tech Takes Early Lead But "Four Horsemen" Lead Successful Second Half Attack.

FORBES FIELD, PITTSBURGH Pa., Nov. 29.—Displaying a great aerial attack, Notre Dame lived up to its reputation as the "wonder eleven" of the country today, defeating the strong Carnegie Tech team, 40 to 19.

Carnegie, however, gained the distinction of scoring more points against Notre Dame than any of the latter's opponents this year. It also held Knute Rockne's machine to a 13 to 13 tie during the first half.

Tech scored first in the opening period when Kristof made a great 50-yard run. It didn't mean much because he was running against Rockne's second string team, which promptly was yanked and

With Stuldreher in the game and the other members of the "four horsemen" in line a great aerial game was started which blinded the Carnegie team and kept them continually on the defensive.

Tech scored another touchdown when Beebe made a 14-yard run around right and in second quarter. Carnegie made another in the fourth on a forward pass formation, Reece going across with the ball.

OPENED ATTACK

After the first quarter Notre Dame scored twice in each of three remaining periods. A forward pass, Stuldreher to Miller, and another aerial play, Crowley to Miller, resulted in the South Bend team scoring in the second period. Then another forward pass, Stuldreher to Crowley, who passed it to Carney, made another score this period.

In the third quarter Stuldreher reeled off two forward passes, the first to Crowley, which took them to Tech's 19-yard line. Then Stuldreher forward-passed the ball to Liverpool, who carried it across.

The next score for Notre Dame in the third quarter was made after Stuldreher gained 10 on a fake forward pass which brought the ball to Tech's 10-yard line.

Then Stuldreher forward-passed to Crowley for another score, Crowley getting the ball standing over Tech's goal line.

SIXTH TOUCHDOWN.

Stuhldreher again figured extensively in the scoring for Notre Dame in the fourth period, when he forward passed to Crowley who took it from Tech's 20-yard line to her nine. Then through a series of line plays, Livergood dashed across for South Bend's fifth touchdown.

The "wonder eleven's" sixth score came near the close of the final period, when Stuhldreher took the ball across. Crowley had forward-passed from his 30-yard line to Tech's 30-yard line and another pass, Stuhldreher to Connell, took it to Tech's 10-yard line. After bucking the line, Livergood handed the ball to Stuhldreher, who sailed across with it.

Carnegie Tech put up a great game and her fight thrilled the 30,000 rapid football fans who came fro all parts of the east and mid-west. No other team this season succeeded in crossing Notre Dame's line more than twice and in this Carnegie followers found reason for the deafening cheers they gave them when the final whistle blew.

The weather was cold and there was a stiff breeze blowing. The field was a trifle soggy from an early-morning snow, but otherwise the conditions were ideal for the game.

Vallejo Loses To Berkeley by 40 to 0 Score

Yellowjackets Win Right to Play San Mateo for North Coast Title.

By PHIL RAY.

After being held to one touchdown in the first two periods, the Berkeley High school football team came back in the second half and charged its way to a 40 to 0 victory over the Vallejo High school team, to win the A division championship of the North Coast section at Vallejo yesterday. The victory gives Berkeley the right to meet San Mateo for the North Coast title next Saturday at San Mateo.

The plucky Vallejo team, greatly outweighed, provided stubborn opposition for the College city team in the first half and it looked as though the game would be a nip and tuck affair throughout. The "eighteen-pound per-man" advantage, however, soon wore the Vallejo team down and the fast Berkeley backfield crossed the goal six times.

SCORED EARLY.

The first touchdown came in the first period after four minutes of play when the Yellowjackets started a plunging offensive from the 48-yard line.

Captain Ralph Dougery tore off nine yards on a criss-cross and followed with a buck to give his team first down on the 35-yard line. Plunges through the center of the line by Dougery and Frentrup gave Berkeley first down on the ten-yard line.

Dutch Clymer, brother of John Clymer of the California varsity, then crossed the line after Frentrup and Dougery had bucked it to the six-yard mark. Clymer converted to make the score 7 to 0.

Vallejo elected to kick and gained possession of the ball immediately when they kicked only twelve yards and recovered on Van Metre's fumble. On the next play Collins, Vallejo fullback, tossed a pass to Captain Dick Boyle, who had hid out on the sidelines. Boyle ran to Berkeley's ten-yard line before he was downed.

The attack was halted at this point, however, as four line plays advanced the ball only to the nine-yard line and Berkeley punted out of danger. The drive, however, prevented Berkeley from scoring during the remainder of the half.

CAME BACK STRONG.

The second half of the game saw what looked to be a new Berkeley team take the field. Clymer intercepted a pass on his own forty-yard line and the Yellowjackets drove straight down the field to a touchdown.

Brown Zarley, Ralph Dougery and Frentrup, alternated in running the tackles for gains of from three to eight yards. Dougery plunged through guard for first downs on the eight-yard line and Brown Zarley broke through tackle for the remaining distance on the first play.

Immediately after the kick-off, the Red and Gold of Berkeley, again started a plunging offensive and completely outcharged the light Vallejo team.

ZARLEY, CLYMER STAR.

Zarley started with a twenty-yard run executed by some pretty "cutting back," and Clymer dodged the Vallejo backs for a forty-yard run soon after, to take the ball to the 12-yard line.

Dougery darted through tackle to the five-yard line and Clymer again scored the touchdown through guard.

High Officials See Army Eleven Win From Middies

BALTIMORE, Nov. 29.—In addition to President and Mrs. Coolidge a galaxy of society leaders, statesmen, congressmen and army officers witnessed the service football game here this afternoon.

Joe Simonich and Pete Latzo Are Matched to Box Main Event at the Auditorium Show Tuesday Evening

Ed McKenna, Ring Veteran, Will Box Farr

Fight Night Changed to Tuesday for This Week Only.

Pete Latzo, who meets Joe Simonich in the main event of the Auditorium boxing show Tuesday night is quite a fighter. He shaded Mickey Walker in ten rounds shortly before Michael copped the welterweight title from Jack Britton, and in recent months he has scored victories over Morris Schlaifer and Billy Wells. This will be Pete's first appearance on the Pacific Coast and his debut will be watched with interest.

Latzo came here to box Jimmy, but Promoter Simpson insisted upon Peter showing his wares against the tough Simonich before getting on with the champion of the coast four rounders. Duffy and the winner of this bout will furnish the main event at the next show.

Simonich defeated Willie Ritchie in his last start in Oakland. Last Friday he dropped a close decision to Lefty Cooper in San Francisco, but a majority of the ringsiders thought Joe should have a draw. It was a slam bang battle all the way through.

Johnny Farr, who rocked Alex McDonald to sleep last Friday, meets Eddie McKenna, the little old man of the ring. Eddie is the son of Jack McKenna, former manager of Young Corbett, and other boxers. He took up the game as sparring partner for Young Abe Attell, the Denver boy, who appeared here ten years ago. Although 30 years of age McKenna is rated one of the best bantamweights in the country and he is still a keen contender for the title. He held Pancho Villa to a ten-round draw; took nine out of ten rounds from Joe Lynch of New York; stopped Jack Sharkey in eight rounds; knocked out Billy Kennedy in the same length of time. Eddie can make 118 pounds.

Other bouts on the card are:

Young Carpentier vs. Vic Morrison.

Frankie McCann vs. Mike Segal.

Brownie Proctor vs. Hal Yont.

Eddie Burry vs. Jack McNally.

Trench King vs. Barney Kilroy.

The show this week will be held on Tuesday night as the Auditorium is otherwise engaged for Wednesday.

Wearin' Out the Green

by Walter Trumbull — Drawings by Ralph Barton

By WALTER TRUMBULL.

Golf has spread faster than butter on a new suit and further than the breath of rumor. No matter wher a man in an airplane might drop a golf ball, there always would be someone there to play it. Plainly, it is time for international rules. We favor a Golf League of Nations.

From the China cups of the Far East to the greens of Greenland, the game is fundamentally the same; but differences have crept in which, in the interest of international sport, should be straightened out.

For example, while in most countries a player is permitted to do no more than unrow a club, under the rules of Zululand he may brain a caddie with a club if the said caddie is caught displaying a mouthful of ivory after a short putt has been missed. This delays the game, as another caddie has to be procured, and should be forbidden.

Moreover, there should be some agreement as to the general construction of courses. All the Sahara desert clubs construct their fairways of sand and only sod the traps. This puts the visiting team at a great disadvantage.

There are many such instances. Something should be done. It is true that there was one international congress held for the purpose of discussing such matters, but at the end of six months the meeting adjourned without having accomplished anything. Each delegate confined himself to talking about his own game.

Open country, sweet and fair,
Hills and valleys, grass and streams,
Something in the sky and air
Which sets men to dreaming dreams,
And a game which has a grip
At which unbelievers scoff
Exercise and fellowship—
These things go to fashion golf.

One advantage golf has over baseball is that they can't call you out after you fail to hit the ball on the third strike.

* * *

When they speak of a hole in one, most golfers are referring to their socks.

A bitter draught the duffer quaffs
From every golfing cup:
He doesn't play the blasted game,
But cannot give it up.

Golf may be a state of mind, but the traps look to the average golfer more like the state of Texas.

It is well to remember that a shot is never as long and the distance to the pin always is longer than you think it is.

Bring Samson and Solomon to the golf course, and we'll take a bet against them on the 13-year-old caddie.

* * *

If you top a ball off the tee, it only means that you must play your approach with a brassie instead of a mashie.

When a man falls into a well, he directs his attention to getting out rather than to worrying about how he got in. A player in a trap should cultivate the same attitude of mind.

There is such a thing as too great deliberation. Timing your shot doesn't mean timing it by the town clock striking 12.

* * *

We like to play Lysander Lee;
We can outdrive him from the tee.

A golf fan wishes to know what measures to take when playing with an opponent who gallops after his ball the second he has hit it, without waiting for his opponent to play. In this case we advise shooting at his head and, if he is out for ten seconds, claiming the hole.

Now they are talking about seeding the draw in golf. We thought they had a hard enough time seeding the greens.

* * *

Instead of marking the cup with a flag, it might be an improvement to mark it with a net.

British Golf Stars to Play Best in U. S.

Start Tour of America; Will Play in California in January.

By RAY McCARTHY.

SPECIAL BY WIRE TO THE TRIBUNE

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—George Duncan and Abe Mitchell—Great Britain's foremost golf team, announced on their arrival Friday for their third tour of the United States, that they were out to better their record of 1921 when they won 50 matches in 60 played.

The peerless Georgie and the hard-hitting Abe will play their first match against Bobby Jones and Perry Adair at Asheville, N. C., on Wednesday, December 3.

Then they will jump down to Tampa, Fla., where they will encounter Johnny Farrell and Bobby Cruikshank. Both of these youngsters, but Farrell in particular, have been playing remarkable golf lately.

Duncan and Mitchell will compete next in a one-day tournament at Miami and on Sunday, December 14, they will face Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazen, America's leading home-bred professionals, in a match of 36 holes at St. Augustine.

WILD COME WEST.

On leaving Florida, the Britons will head for California, playing there. They will return to the Atlantic seaboard sometime in February to engage in some of the tournaments and will sail for home late in March.

Duncan and Mitchell have established an enviable record as a team. Many critics, in fact, rate this pair as the most formidable combination in the game. Each is a realy great golfer, putting a distinctive style of game. Duncan is without doubt the fastest playing golfer in the world.

Mitchel has few equals in long driving and is matched in this respect only by two fellow countrymen, Arthur Havers and Cyril Tolley. Both are colorful in their play.

On their first visit in 1921, the Britons played 60 matches, winning 50, tying 2 and losing 8. On their second tour, Duncan and Mitchell appeared in 40 matches, winning 28, losing 10 and being tied in 2 matches.

The coming of Duncan and Mitchell brings to the front again a question that is oft discussed in golf circles—who are, or were, the greatest golf team?

VARDEN-RAY BEST.

The writer has seen all combinations now in existence, has toured with several, and is of the opinion Harry Varden and Ted Ray had no superiors when in their prime.

Their showing in this country in 1920, when their combined ages totaled nearly 100 years—93 to be exact— was nothing short of remarkable.

Playing in the heat of the summer against the best combinations of American professionals and amateurs, this pair won something like 45 games and lost only about a dozen matches.

Duncan and Mitchell are a hard pair to beat on any occasion. Watch them on this trip. Mitchell has recovered from an attack of rheumatism which affected his putting when he was here previously and should appear to better advantage.

The itinerary of the Duncan and Mitchell tour to date is as follows: December 3, Asheville, N. C.; December 7, Tampa; December 12 and 13, Miami; December 14, St. Augustine; December 18, Dallas; December 24, El Paso; December 27, Wilshire; December 28, Ranco; December 30, Brentwood; December 31, Midwick; January 2, Hollywood; January 3, Ojai; January 4, La Cumbre; January 5, Pasadena; January 6, Los Angeles; January 7, Hacienda; January 9, Modesto; January 11, Lake Merced; January 14 to 17, California State Open; January 18, San Francisco, January 28, California; January 31, Virginia; February 1, Palos Verdes.

Grist from the Sport Mill

BY BOB SHAND

"Canadian Eddie" Thompson, local sportsman who went to Australia a few weeks ago, writes the following newsy letter:

Dear Bob:

Just a few lines to let you know how things are going in the sporting game out here. The racing game is the big thing right now and thousands of fans have gathered to witness the greatest race in the world—the Melbourne Cup. Spearfelt won the Derby in the canter at odds of six to four on and he is expected to win the Melbourne but I have a hunch and am playing Standby, the next best bet. Everybody seems racing mad over here. The track operates every day except Sunday. On that day they have either games and drink plenty of Scotch, good Scotch at that. There is plenty of it here at two dollars a full quart.

AT LOW EBB.

The boxing game is at a very low ebb for lack of the right kind of talent and they are drawing poor houses. There are some good boys in their class but they lack good competition. Harry Collins, the welterweight champion of Australia, looks like the goods. He is clever and a good hitter. Hugh McIntosh, who promoted the Johnson-Burns fight, offered Mickey Walker $50,000 to come to Australia and box Collins, Bradley and Godfrey but Mickey refused the offer. I immediately suggested Jimmy Duffy, Oakland boy to take Mickey's place and told McIntosh that I thought Jimmy could beat Walker or any of the boys here at the welterweight limit.

McIntosh wants to bring the game back to where it was when Jimmy Clabby, Eddie McGoorty, Les Darcy and other good ones were packing 'em in.

WANTS MURPHY.

Another boy who would do well here is Dynamite Murphy. Kid Parker's good little fighter. I think he could lick Grimes, the Australian featherweight champion. Tell Parker to close up the hat store and come on over. It isn't far to walk. Joe Roche, the San Francisco welter who boxed at the Auditorium, would also do well here, I think.

Jack Dillon will sail for the States soon. He is a wonderful prospect and under the right handling will make a hit in Oakland. Please see that he gets into the right hands.

WRESTLING REVIVAL.

They are trying to revive wrestling here. Walter Miller took part in several bouts. Ted Thye and Al Karasick are said to be en route here and they should get some money. I would like to see Ad Santel make the trip. There are only three good wrestlers here, Bill Meeske, Pete Simutkin and Webber.

Best regards to Kid Parker, Tommy Simpson and the rest of the gang. If any of the boys feel like coming here give them a letter of introduction to me and I will show them around.

Very truly yours,
'Canadian Eddie' Thompson.

Billy Shade, who returned to Australia a few months ago, is said to be getting ready to embark for England. According to brother Dave, Billy was supposed to open a hotel when he went to the big island, but he started boxing again and got knocked over by a pair of second raters. When Shade was the middleweight, light-heavyweight and heavyweight champion of Australia a few years ago he was in the big money and could have become wealthy had he been properly managed. After leaving Australia Billy was advised to take his title to Europe, where he could have cleaned up, but he insisted upon boxing in the east with the result that a flock of ordinary boys took him down the line. According to brother Dave, he had to assist Billy financially before he started on his last trip to Australia. Billy is quite popular on the big island, but popularity does not mean anything once you hit the toboggan.

According to southern sportsmen Fred Winsor is through in the south. His charges against Jack Doyle, the Vernon promoter, are so absurd that they are laughable. Doyle, several times a millionaire, does not associate with the Winsor class of managers. Witnesses at the recent preliminary examination in Los Angeles testified that it was Winsor who engineered the fake fight between Fuente and Fulton and that Fulton confessed prior to the 'contest' that he was going to take a dive. It is only because there are few people like Winsor in the boxing game that the sport has been able to survive.

Ray Pelkey writes from Chicago that he has placed himself under the management of Eddie Long and expects to get into action soon. After a shot at the eastern game Ray says he will return to Oakland in time to engage in one of the first tenrounders.

Joe Sousa, Babe Herman's kid brother, blew in from New York yesterday and proceeded to issue a challenge to the local banties and feathers. Joe spent two years in the east and met such boys as Cannonball Eddie Martin, Jack Snyder, Phil Rosenberg, Mike Ballerino, Sammy Noble and others.

Charlie Harvey and his good welterweight Billy Wells will be at the ringside Tuesday night. They are due in tomorrow.

Kid Parker was in to say that Dynamite Murphy won three of the four rounds from Mickey O'Donnell at Sacramento Friday night.

shine especially in the back field. The sailors had him too well covered. But Gilmore took up the slack. Both Gommons and Harding used good generalship.

For the navy's big line Chillingworth and Stalz stood out. Osborne, center, did some pretty tackling. The Navy's big backs were hard to stop at times.

Flippen was an excellent front back but the soldier ends were simply not to be wiped out. Fastest and most elusive of the Navy's backs was Shapley and he worried the soldiers' defense more than all the others put together.

The Navy was high class but the teams well matched and so vigilant that long runs were out of the question.

Madigan Calls Basket Men For Workouts

Lawless and Lorigan Constitute Nucleus of Veterans for St. Mary's.

Turning his attention from football to basketball, Coach "Slip" Madigan will sound the first call for the St. Mary's hoopsters tomorrow afternoon at the local college.

Prospects, which appeared bright earlier in the year, were dimmed by the injury of "Dutch" Conlan, veteran running guard, in the St. Mary's-Nevada football game at Reno less than two weeks ago and it is possible that Conlan will be lost to the basketball team on account of the damaged knee.

Paynter, veteran standing guard of last year's team, is not in college this year while Kennedy, regarded as a bright forward in his showing last season, failed to return to school.

"Flash" Lawless at forward and Ed Lorigan at center are the only two regulars of last year's quintet who are certain to be out for the sport with Farrell, a substitute forward of 1923, expected to fill the other forward position.

Developing a n..ble running guard in case Conlan is unable to play, figures to be Madigan's hardest task.

Yuvan, a freshman, is regarded as a good sport prospect while Kelly and Rose from the squad of last year are other guard possibilities.

Last year "Ducky" Grant did not come out for basketball but Madigan hopes to have the football star on the squad this season and also indicated that "Red" Strader might be prevailed upon to try his hand at hooping baskets.

Leo Rooney, who was a bright light during football season, is a good forward prospect while Muldoon and Crowley are others who will report tomorrow at the initial practice.

Patten, who played with the University of Arizona last year, is in college but will be ineligible for all collegiate competition under the transfer rule.

Madigan expects to have his team ready for a schedule of practice games late in December with the regular collegiate season not due to start until January.

St. Mary's will meet the University of California January 17 and will also schedule games with the California Aggies, Nevada, the Olympic club and the Amblers club of Stockton.

Shakeups Due For Clubs in Winter Races

Class A Amateur and Semi-Pro Teams Fight for Top Position.

The Oakland Coast League Park will be the mecca of many bushball fans today although dozens of games are scheduled on the various Eastbay diamonds. The Eastbay, Spalding and L. C. Brodedick Leagues all have good games on their programs and a number of teams are certain to change positions.

At the Coast League in the morning the leadership of the Broderick League will be at stake. Teams in this league are entering their fourth week of play and the Florio Hardware and Herman Athletic Club are tied for the lead without a defeat. These teams meet at the Coast League Park this morning at 10:30. Schmidt for Hermans and Canton for the Hardware boys are slated to pitch.

CHERRY TEAM FAVORED.

In the afternoon the San Leandro team will make its first appearance of the season in Oakland, meeting the Kigy Club at the Coast League Park. San Leandro leads the league by two games, but a win today for the Kigys would cut the lead a full game. Cherry town fans feel that if their team wins this afternoon there will be no chance to keep them from the championship of the Eastbay League.

Three other games are billed in the Broderick League. The Schlueter Service nine who are tied with Oakland Garage for third place, will meet the Fruitvale Woodmen at Fruitvale Depot at 2 o'clock, and the garage tossers will play the Spencer Electrics at the same diamond in the morning at 10:30. Oakland Council No. 6, Y. M. I. will have to fight to keep out of the cellar as they are booked to meet the Ruddick Hatters at Bushrod Playground at 1 o'clock. "Bud" McNemony is slated to hurl for them.

CHANCE FOR ZENITHS.

While the Cherry Pickers will be at the Coast League Park, the Star Motors and Calatone Waters will take possession of the San Leandro diamond to stage a game.

Frank Dreisbach will send his Zenith Millers onto the Lockwood school field for what promises to be a scrappy game with the Crystal Laundry nine. The Crystals are tied for second place, but the Zeniths can catch up with them by winning today.

MAXWELLS IN LEAD.

Dope favors the Maxwell Hardware to tighten their hold on the top rung of the Spalding Class A League when they meet the Swift Lumber team at San Pablo Playgrounds at 2:45 o'clock. The hardware boys won all four of their games. Haughy, the star hurler, will do the honors this afternoon. Melrose fans are looking forward to a hot battle when their team meets the Broadway Department store at High and East Eighth streets at 2:15 o'clock. Melrose is in second place and only a half game ahead of the Broadways.

Zingg's Cigar store team of Alameda is tied with the United Cleaners and two other clubs for third place, so they must win from the Cleaners at Lincoln Park in Alameda this afternoon or take a tumble into fourth place.

Oakland Parlor of Native Sons will make another attempt this afternoon at 12:30 at San Pablo Playground to break into the win column for the first time. The Natives play the Piedmont Avenue Merchants who are in the four-cornered tie for first place.

A complete schedule of Class B, C and D games will be found in another column of this section.

Winter League Of 'Caseys' to Start Dec. 7th

Four clubs will compete this winter for the baseball champion

INTERNATIONAL GAME IS BIG SOCCER FEATURE TODA

St. Mary's College Football Team Established a Remarkable Record in the Season Which Closed Thursd

Madigan Will Have Veteran Team in 1925

Bettencourt's Play in Santa Clara Game Without Parallel for Season.

By DOUG MONTELL.

Had "Slip" Madigan been able to make a wish at the start of the football season it is doubtful whether he could have asked for any better results than the St. Mary's team turned in.

Losing only one game during the season, and that to the undefeated University of California eleven, the Saints came through with flying colors in one of the most successful seasons in the history of football at the local college.

Credit is justly due to Edward P. Madigan, a product of the Rockne school of Notre Dame, who took over the green material given him two years ago, patiently worked with the men to drill them in the basic fundamentals of the Notre Dame system, and then watched that team come through this year.

And the end is not yet. Out of his veteran aggregation, Madigan loses only two men. Paul Hungerford at tackle and Tim Corrigan at guard.

Replacing these two linemen will not be a difficult task, for Madigan has been working on newcomers throughout the season and has men trained for both positions.

ILLIA A PROSPECT.

The St. Mary's backfield, one of the greatest small college scoring machines ever assembled on the coast, remains intact.

Strader, Grant, Rooney, Underhill, Conlan, King and Farrell, all veterans, will again be on the job. Then, too, there will be Bob Gannon, a freshman this year, who will be a wonderful prospect if he is able to pick up a few pounds during the next few months.

Lawrence Bettencourt, a substitute center during the season just ended, is a player regarded as a future star by Madigan.

"Bettencourt is one of the smartest players I have ever coached," said Madigan and my problems next year will be where to use him to best advantage.

"As an offensive center Bettencourt left much to be desired this year. His passing was not too good and his offensive charge was not as good as that of Lorigan.

HAD NO EQUAL.

On defense, however, he had no equal among the centers we faced during the season. Pulling out of the line, Bettencourt had uncanny ability to break up forward passing formations and his interceptions of passes saved us from embarrassing situations on several occasions during the year."

In the Santa Clara-St. Mary's game, Bettencourt intercepted a pass on the first play after he had reported while his spectacular play at the end of the game when he again intercepted a pass, stood out as one of the features.

Bettencourt and Strader are both former Rugby players and the instinct netted St. Mary's a touchdown which, while it was not needed, provided a fitting climax to a hard fought game.

The secret of the success of the play rested in the fact that it was the unexpected. When seven Santa Clara players had Bettencourt virtually surrounded on the sidelines at the ten-yard mark it appeared to be all over, but quick thinking and Rugby instinct caused Bettencourt to toss the ball back over his shoulder to Strader, who was close on his heels.

Strader had no difficulty in clearing the group of Bronchos and skipping on over to the score.

WITHOUT PARALLEL.

The play is without a parallel for the present season and it is doubtful whether it has been seen executed in such a manner in the annals of American football. After all, Rugby has its good points as well as bad ones, and when one stops to consider that Santa Clara score: her only touchdowns on a variation of a Rugby play, a Rugby pass following a criss-cross, ending with a forward pass over the goal line, it is surprising that more freak plays are not developed by coaches who have had the opportunity to study Rugby tactics.

Next year Madigan is again going to be in a position to start where he left off. With his backfield intact and five veterans in the line, Madigan will be able to start advanced football theory early in the season and by the time the game with California rolls around on October 17, the Saints will be in a position to point for the Bears and may be able to worry Andy Smith's team a little more than this season, although the Bruins will be a veteran combination and the game should provide the prettiest battle of midseason competition on the coast.

Sophomores to Meet Frosh 'Docs' on Grid

The Sophomores and Freshmen of the College of Medicine at the University of California, will clash in a football game at California field at 2:30 next Saturday afternoon.

"Brick" Muller, coach of the Sophomore team, will cavort at fullback for his team. Christie, varsity man from the University of Washington, will play with the Freshmen.

Other stars who will play in the game will be announced later.

Ohio State Loses Seven Grid Stars

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 29.—The game with Illinois marked the end of the college football careers of seven Ohio State regulars—Capt. Frank "Tee" Young, center; George "Jake" Cameron, quarter back; Ollie Kles, half back; Rudy Kutler, guard; Bernard Schulist, tackle, guard and end; Johnny Wilson, end, and Bobby Watts, 145-pound fighting center.

BIG BERTHAS OF ST. MARY'S

Stockton Hailed as All-American Gonzaga Back Is Highly Praised

SPOKANE, Wash., Nov. 29.—Throwing a football with the same grace and for the same distance as a baseball, Houston Stockton, star halfback of the Gonzaga University eleven, now stands unchallenged as the master of the forward pass on the Pacific Coast.

With the record of completing 41 per cent of his passes, either on the throwing or receiving end, and having missed but two kicks for goal after touchdowns in his three years on the Bulldog team in the Northwestern Conference, Stockton represents fully 50 per cent of the strength of the Blue and White eleven.

ASK RECOGNITION.

Pacific Northwest critics submit him for All-American attention this year, his last on the team. Coach Dorais of Gonzaga states he would not trade him for Gipp, the late Notre Dame star, and Dorais was an All-American quarter at Notre Dame himself.

"Stockton is one of the greatest backs in the country," was Coach R. L. Matthews' tribute to this master of the modern open-style football tactics after Stockton held Matthew's Idaho eleven scoreless. "He is not only the mainspring of the Gonzaga rushes and defense, but the outstanding passing artist of the Pacific Coast."

Stockton takes his time with the passes. His hand spans but 8 inches, yet he heaves the pigskin straight to his teammate, without the usual high arching of the average forward passer. He throws it with the same arm action as a baseball and he throws it from 40 to 50 yards. He threw a successful pass 52 yards against the Multnomah Club team this season.

PASSING RECORD.

His record reveals nine successive passes for 89 yards against W. S. C. in 1923, with 17 completed in that game for 226 yards. He made five successive completed passes for 84 yards against that team this year. That is ordinary passing for this 180-pound back, the Gonzaga records show. Against West Virginia at Pasadena last year he made four straight passes for 85 yards and two touchdowns.

Stockton's passing game has paced Gonzaga and Spokane on the football map. Through his triple threat ability the Bulldogs defeated Washington State and Multnomah and tied Idaho in the first three games played of the year. He captains the team, does the punting, and often kicks 45 to 50 yards and downs the receiving runner within five yards, for he is fast in scrimmage. As he is a baseball star, that ability has been worked into his gridiron game by Coach Gus Dorais.

As a kicker he averages 39 yards for the three years—not a phenomenal record, but above the average. But he has been the star of first mention in every game he has played, which has been every game on the schedule. Stockton hails from Parma, Idaho, and after attending St. Mary's College at Oakland, California, came to Gonzaga.

Basket League Managers Will Meet Tuesday

Managers of teams entered in the L. C. Broderick Basketball league will meet next Tuesday Fortieth and Broadway at 8 o'clock. At this meeting, President C. L. Blesse will call for deposit money from all teams. Close to forty teams have been entered and twenty-five have put up the deposit money so far. At this meeting will probably be the last before the start of the season, it is necessary that all clubs have their deposit up on Tuesday night.

Officials of the league have been busy for the last couple of weeks making arrangements for playing courts and referees. In the league will be teams from Alameda, Hayward, San Leandro, San Lorenzo, Oakland and Berkeley. The Herman Athletic club has entered with a strong team, while the Hayward N. S. G. W. is hopeful of winning a trophy.

The league will consist of unlimited, 146 pounds, 135 pound, 120 and 110 pound division. The opening games will probably be arranged at Tuesday's meeting.

Sportiva Team To Tackle O. C. Kickers Today

The Olympic club, victorious in seven out of eight starts and tied in the eighth game, tackled the Unione Sportiva eleven in the San Francisco football league competition today at Ewing Field. The Winged "O" kickers should have no difficulty in taking the honors from the Italian eleven and figure to increase their lead in the championship race.

The Burns kickers, tied with the Thistles for second place in the race, meet the lowly S. George, cellar champions, at St. Ignatius field and should hold their own with the leaders in the race for the top.

The Thistles will have their hands full in meeting the Tanks at Memorial Field today, for the Union Iron Works eleven is one of the powerful teams of the transbay circuit, having been crippled in a few early games, which accounts for the position halfway down the ladder.

The Barbarians and Italia Virtus teams will meet at Tobin Field in the fourth league game of the day this afternoon in a contest which promises to furnish action aplenty.

All league games are scheduled to start at 2:30.

Cleveland May Be Big Factor In Flag Chase

Blunders Admitted by Indians' Owners; Foster Predicts Pennant Contender.

By JOHN B. FOSTER.

SPECIAL BY WIRE TO THE TRIBUNE

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The Cleveland club will be among those present when the big battles for the 1925 championship of the American league is done.

The writer hazards this prediction, not so much on the basis of anything the Indians did during the past season—for they were out of second division only on two week ends—but on their frankness in appraising their faults and determining to correct them.

Ask the average non-winning team why it didn't come through, and it will trot forth a whole array of alibis. Ask anybody connected with the Cleveland club, from president down to bat boy, why with the hardest hitting team in the American league they weren't able to win the pennant, and you'll get the answer straight—because the players were not handled right and because they did not play right.

BLUNDERS ADMITTED.

One of the first blunders to which attention is being directed by the Cleveland management has to do with the training season. The Cleveland players will play ball when they go south next spring; they won't just play. And it's a safe bet the none of them will return north with any surplus flesh picked up in Florida—not if Tris Speaker has to put them all in these new-fangled rubber reducing corsets.

"We failed to start our players right in the spring of 1924, and they never went right," said the president of the Cleveland club. "I thought we had a winning team, and I had plenty of company. Everybody told us we had the greatest batting outfit since the Big Four played for Detroit, and we set too much store by that fact.

CAN'T WIN PENNANTS.

"But what good are batters if they can't win pennants for you? All my life I have had it dinned into my ears that a team of great batters could swat six kinds of colors out of a pennant, whether they had much of anything else or not. We had a bag full in Stephenson, Jamieson, Speaker, Myatt, Sewell, Shaute, Burns and Uhle. They batted .336 and they made 9830 hits—a most astounding feat—but that didn't get us out of the second division. We paid for our own mishandling of the team aided by some bad luck.

"However, that doesn't alter the fact that you can have eight players on a team batting at a high altitude and still never get a whiff of the world series returns if your players don't do anything but bat."

WHAT IS ANSWER?

"Just what will Cleveland do in 1925?" the Cleveland club president was asked.

He looked over into next year as far as he could see, reflected for a moment, and then replied:

"Well, I guess we will begin playing ball about April 1, and not August 31. It seems to me that some program of that nature will be carried out."

Meanwhile, even if Washington did win the 1924 pennant, and even if Babe Ruth did make a lot of home runs that some people thought he was getting too old to make, one should not overlook the 1924 performance of the lowly Indians, who led the American league, if but by an eyelash, in batting, and who had a ring within a ring of batters who averaged .336 and collected almost ten thousand hits.

It was one of the big things of an unusual baseball year that has almost escaped attention because nobody paid much attention to Cleveland.

Milton Sets New Speedway Record

CULVER CITY, Nov. 29.—Tommy Milton averaged 129.31 miles per hour on a one-lap practice sprint over the new Culver City speedway today. The mark eclipsed the 128-mile per hour record set by Bennett Hill at Charlotte, N. C., last month.

Milton was one of several who practiced over the new oval today in preparation for the inaugural 250-mile championship race Dec. 7.

the performance after the next kick and advanced the ball from their own 30-yard line to mid-field as the third quarter ended.

The final period saw the continuation of the driving offense and Dougery ploughed through for the score.

Paul Clymer, who was the outstanding player in the contest, paved the way to another touchdown when he returned Boyle's punt from his own ten yard line to Vallejo's forty yard line, a pretty run of fifty yards.

Captain Dougery broke through the line and cut across the field for a forty yard sprint to the line. The play completed a gain of ninety yards in two plays.

ALL SAW ACTION.

All of the twenty-seven players who made the trip to Vallejo got into action and several of the substitutes showed ability. With a team composed of substitutes, Berkeley scored another six points by the use of straight football.

Brown Zarley scored the touchdown on a tackle play from the twelve yard line.

Berkeley can boast of a well balanced team. Brown Zarley and Lud Frentrup are two track men who can make the 100 yard dash in 10:2 while Dougery has the power to gain on line plays regularly. Add the punting and generalship of Clymer and the weight and fight of the line, and you have the Berkeley team.

Wally Young, substitute end, especially covered himself with glory yesterday. He proved a menace to the Vallejo backfield on the offense and held consistently on the defense. Despite his lack of weight time after time he clipped the Vallejo backs and opened a path for long gains.

DENNIS MAINSTAY.

R. Dennis, giant Vallejo tackle, was the mainstay of the line, while Captain Dick Boyle and W. Wiggins also played well. Dennis repeatedly broke up the well planned Berkeley plays and opened holes for his backfield men.

Captain Boyle took the ball from his end position on a criss-cross and cut through the opposite tackle for a fifty yard run to provide one of the features for his team.

The Vallejo team displayed a varied assortment of trick plays with the linemen carrying the ball, but the weight of the Berkeleyans proved too great a handicap.

Berkeley will meet San Mateo for the North Coast title next Saturday unless the Peninsula team is disqualified for playing Ted Anderson, who is alleged to be over 21 years of age.

At a recent meeting of the North Coast officials, Anderson was ruled ineligible, but the board left the decision as to whether the team should be counted out, to the Peninsula directors.

Watsonville would be the likely choice in case the San Mateo team is forced to forfeit its games.

The winner of the San Mateo-Berkeley contest next Saturday, will play the Lodi team for the championship of Northern California and the right to meet the winner of the Southern State section, Lodi having defeated Stockton yesterday, 25 to 0.

"The best yet!" That was the consensus of opinion in reference to the Oakland show last Saturday and Sunday. The Civic Auditorium with its immense arena proved an ideal venue.

There were 373 entries, with close to 300 dogs actually benched.

Best in show was awarded to Sinclair's English setter bitch, Rowland's Lady Bird. The Sinclair kennels also captured the special for best toy with the toy poodle, Champion Cookie.

Best working dog went to the German shepherd, Bendix von der Hohenpforte, owned by the Tanforan police dog kennels.

Best non-sporting dog to the Boston, Champion Tryon's Heads Up.

Oakland's own, the California Boston Terrier Club, was very much in evidence. The decorations of the club's benches were the attraction of the show. A number of new members were added to the roll proving the great interest taken in the development of the organization. Prominent among the recent additions to the club is Mr. W. T. Osborne of San Francisco, the well-known fancier and judge of Bostons.

EASTERN DOG WINS.

Clearcut Intruder, the excellent little Boston who arrived here just a few weeks ago from the east, went through to winners dogs. He is the property of Mr. G. H. Burchell of Oakland. Reserve went to Riddell's Little Topper, the property of Mrs. G. H. Riddell. The latter also accounted for winners bitches with Riddell's She's a Dream. The sire of Little Topper is Riddell's Captain Pepper, owned by Mr. George T. Bispo of Oakland.

Mrs. Riddell who recently moved from here to Los Angeles, stated that she intends to come back to the Eastbay as soon as she has completed some business in the south. She will bring with her her complete kennel of Bostons.

The Airedale, Humberstone Tattler, went again to winners and best of breed. He also was awarded second in the terrier variety class, being beaten by the fox terrier bitch, Newfield Extra Girl. In six consecutive starts Tattler has gone five times to best of breed under five different judges, two of whom were well-known eastern adjudicators. This is an unequaled record for a local Airedale.

The Rands again carried off all the honors in collies. Best of breed to Brae Brook Beloved. Winners dogs to Brae Brook Bennett and winners bitches to Brunette.

A GOOD COLLIE.

The Kayser Collie kennels of Berkeley showed a magnificent blue merle by Tazewell Traveler. Kayser's Monte Blue is the name of this bird, and eventually he will fly high. The same kennels showed the puppy bitch, Kayser's Dixie Belle, a most promising youngster, but not in the best of shape on account of her recent trip from the east.

Best of breed to Bendix von der Hohenpforte, and best opposite sex to Wm. Klaasen's Schaeferheim Cleo vom Kolk. Best in novice classes to Hubert M. Vering's Fern vom Kurwalde, and best in American bred, limit and bred by exhibitor classes to Pinehaven kennels' Tell vom Pinehaven. The Vering and Pinehaven kennels are both members of the Eastbay doggy fraternity.

Ruether Will Be Given Gate By Brooklyn

Big Pitcher Would Like to Land With Giants But Has Slim Chance.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—It now seems pretty certain that "Dutch" Ruether, the Brooklyn southpaw pitcher who has been a dismal failure for the last two years, is to be disposed of and there is curiosity as to where he may land.

Ruether would land with the New York Giants if he had his way about it. But he will not land with the Giants if President Ebbetts of the Brooklyn club can help it. Ebbets has said that under no conditions would he ever help the New York Giants to a player, and that doubtless goes double for Ruether, who made something of a spectacle two years ago by stopping off at the Giants training camp at San Antonio and hanging around as if he expected to join or hoped to get a chance to play with the New York club.

CAUSE OF SUSPICION.

Nothing Ruether could have done would have spiked as effectually any chance he might have had of getting on the Giant payroll. In the light of his record with Brooklyn the past two years it would be difficult to convince the public that there was not some sort of arrangement between him and the Giants whereby he was to be taken on as soon as he could stall his way out of Brooklyn's clutches.

Ruether never has met expectations since he pitched for Cincinnati in 1919, when he did his share to win the pennant for the Reds and played the best ball of his career. But even then he was a troublesome young man to handle and he has never made the life of managers a thing of joy.

Ruether seems to have all the requisites of a pitcher and does not put them to account as he should. They say he had something the matter with his arm, although some of his team mates thought it was something else than arm trouble that was holding him back. Had he come through in 1924 perhaps Brooklyn would have won the pennant. The race was so close that a few games would have turned the trick.

If Pittsburgh could obtain the services of Ruether for next season and if Ruether could bring himself to pitch good baseball for them, the Pirates might win their long-sought pennant. But as was the case in Brooklyn it would all depend on how well Ruether worked for the team that had his services. If he is as determined as ever that he will play with the Giants he probably will not give much to any other manager than McGraw. But if he does not, there should be some way to bring him to reason.

WOULD HELP PIRATES.

With Ruether going right and with Yde showing even three-fourths of his 1924 form, the Pirates would be a terror to all the National league outfits. Between them they should account for 40 victories and with the other pitchers on the Pittsburgh team the Pirates would appear as the season began, a stiffer proposition than they have been for the last four years.

A dicker between Brooklyn and Pittsburgh that would give the Brooklyn team something as good in exchange as Ruether would help both teams and both seem likely to be in the Penant fight in 1925.

Gibbons on Deck For Norfolk Bout

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Tom Gibbons, St. Paul light heavyweight who is to meet Kid Norfolk in a 15-round charity bout in Madison Square Garden on the night of December 8, arrived here today with Eddie Kane, his manager, and Sammy Mandel.

Hoff to Enter Competition in Gotham Events

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Charles Hoff, noted Norwegian athlete and world's record pole vaulter, who plans an invasion of the United States during the indoor season, will appear in New York under the auspices of the Millrose A. A. at its two-day track and field carnival in January at Madison Square Garden. Hoff plans to come here soon and train at Dartmouth university under the direction of Harry Hillman, track coach.

Baker Files Suit Over Ascot Race

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29. — "Cannonball" Baker, racing driver, alleged that he was entitled to first place in the Ascot speedway 250-mile road race, in a suit for $16,000 filed today in the superior court here.

Baker, according to track officials at the Thanksgiving Day contest, finished second to Frank Lockhart. Baker's complaint asserts that Lockhart failed to enter elimination contests as specified in racing rules of the speedway association and that because of this fact he should forfeit the $16,000 prize money awarded to him.

French Names Make Baseball Something Else

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Baseball as it is spoken here is quite a different game than was ever played at the Polo Grounds, even with the Giants themselves playing it. The frappeur will lance the ball to the arrete-court, who will throw it to the gardien of the premier base, and the tone of the whole game changes. The French simply cannot speak baseball any better than they can play it.

This was discovered as soon as arrangements were made for the series of games between the Giants and the White Sox. French sporting papers wanted to tell their readers what the game was all about so that they could understand it when they saw it played.

They gave learned explantions of the rules and process of play, originally written in English by an American who knew the game, and then carefully translated into French. The result was not baseball.

For instance, pitcher became lanceau, catcher was dubber attrapeur, and all other players took on quaint names. Can anybody imagine a frappeur slugging out a homer? The field positions were called champ gauche, champ droit, etc. Of course, the curiosity is not the fault of the French language, but rather the fault of baseball, which, as such, must remain entirely and exclusively American.

Troy Agnew to Lead Augusta Ball Club

OKMULGEE, Okla., Nov. 29.—Troy Agnew, manager of the pennant winning Okmulgee club of the Western Association, has tendered his resignation to the board of directors and has accepted a position to manage the Augusta, Ga., club. Agnew's first act as manager of the new club was to draft several Okmulgee players who figured prominently in winning the 1924 association pennant.

Red Snapp, business manager of the Okmulgee club, who piloted Ardmore to the Western Association pennant in 1923, probably will take charge of the team in 1925.

ATTEMPTS COMEBACK.

Alexa Stirling, ex-woman golf champion, may try a comeback beginning in the Florida events this winter.

Oregon Aggies to Do Without Captain

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 29.—Coach Paul J. Schissler of the Oregon Aggies football team, who stopped here today on his way to the Big Ten Conference at Chicago, told of a new plan accepted by his squad for electing next year's captain.

The team voted not elect a captain, allowing Coach Schissler to fill the position with a different man for each game or one for the entire season.

Wendell to Take Lehigh Coach Job

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 29.—Percy Wendell, who has successfully coached Williams football teams for four years, will be head coach of football at Lehigh next year.

Paavo Nurmi Uses Legs to Catch a Boat

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 29.—Paavo Nurmi, Finnish Olympic marathon champion, was forced to use his sturdy legs for a purpose other than winning prizes and championships here today.

Nurmi, who is on his way to America, arrived at the dock a few moments before the gangplank was hauled away from the Celtic. The runner's legs stiffened and the next instant he was tearing down the pier for the gangplank.

He made the ship.

Centre Wins From Georgia, 14 to 7

DANVILLE, Ky., Nov. 29.—Centre College won the mythical football championship of the south by defeating Georgia here this afternoon, 14 to 7. Georgia's eleven, badly battered in its Thanksgiving Day battle with Alabama for the southern conference title, was clearly outmatched by the aggressive Kentuckians.

Covington and Rabenstin, Centre's great ground gainers, went over for touchdowns in the second period, after Georgia's line had been battered for repeated gains and the Colonels completed several pretty passes.

IS BEST SHOT.

Bobby Jones, amateur golf champion, is the finest shot maker in the game.

Don't read this if you use Richfield

—you don't need to, this advertisement is written—for the man who has never tried the "Gasoline of Power"

RICHFIELD GASOLINE OF POWER

WE don't need to advertise to the man who has given Richfield a real test in his car—he knows the difference and would be hard to satisfy with any other brand.

But we do want to reach you fellows who have never really tried Richfield. We want to interest you enough, somehow, to make a test—a genuine tryout of at least 500 miles.

That should be enough to thoroughly convince you of its good features; that Richfield actually does give a worthwhile increase in mileage; that it is much easier starting with effortless acceleration, and that it has a sustained power that gives you greater speed and "pull" on grade or level road.

We're mighty proud of these facts, because, if you know anything about gasolines you'll realize that only the most painstaking and expensive processes of grading and distillation could embody all these features in one gasoline. It would be comparatively easy to get speed and "pick-up" at the expense of "mileage"—or to get long mileage with a sluggish, slow starting kerosene-gas.

But to get them all—that is the trick. And that's what we've done with Richfield—"greater power—quicker 'pick-up'—longer mileage."

That's why we're so proud of Richfield—that's why Richfield sales are so steadily climbing—and that's why you'll become a "confirmed Richfield user" after you've given it a sure-enough trial!

At any of these stations—wherever you see the famous Richfield shield!

NEWS and GOSSIP
FROM STAFF WRITERS AT HOME AND ABROAD

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29.—"When it comes to knockouts, the Dempsey family have the world beaten. I took the count from the old man in three months!"

With a flash of dark eyes and a dazzle of pearl-white teeth, Mrs. Hiram Dempsey, pretty 23-year-old stepmother of Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, outlined her marital difficulties with her elderly husband today which led them to the divorce court in Salt Lake.

"Yes; I got my divorce on grounds of cruelty from Jack Dempsey's father just three months and four days from the time I married him," Mrs. Dempsey declared. "The old man always protested his love for me. Did he love me? Well, maybe his ideas of love and mine differ."

Lured from a lucrative position as bookkeeper with a large business firm in Salt Lake, Mrs. Dempsey said, she assumed the duties of wifehood with a man forty-four years her senior.

"He promised me many things," she recalled—"things that only an old man would promise a young woman. Of course, I didn't really know how old he was. He doesn't look more than fifty. I had had one marital venture with a young man, and I concluded I'd rather be 'an old man's darling' next time. But not now. What did he do? Everything. His love-taps were knockouts. He tried to beat the head off me when I didn't please him. I know now where Jack got his pugilistic propensities—right from the old man."

December-May romances, wherein youth mates with age, are described by the girl-bride of the elder Dempsey as the "bunk."

"It can't be 'did'!" she exclaimed. "Dancing shoes can't keep step with carpet slippers. It was a case of limousine speed versus fireside-pipe reveries of distant youth. I got tired of hearing what a 'good' man he once was. What he did forty years ago was of no interest to me. I am young, and I want to live. He had lived, and all that remained to him was memories. When I didn't keep step with him he would resort to corporal punishment!"

After relating the "old man's" pugilistic propensities, his youthful ex-bride declared:

"Barring temperamental outbursts, due to differences of age, 'Hi' was a good man; and the rest of the Dempsey family, including Jack, were wonderful.

"Hiram Dempsey doesn't work for a living. Jack is very generous to his father—has bought him a home, beautifully furnished, and sends him a monthly allowance.

"Jack is sure good to his family," the young ex-wife enthused. "He takes care of all of 'em."

A verbal offer from a motion-picture director brought Mrs. Dempsey to Los Angeles, she said.

"Now for a fling at comedies; something I have longed for, dreamed of, craved to do since childhood," the youthful stepmother of the famous fighter enthused. "This will be a realization of an opportunity to either 'make good' or—back to ledgers and account books for me."

Dispatches from Utah, carrying accounts of the marital disaster of the elder Dempsey, differ somewhat from the story told by the embryo comedy queen.

They declare that pretty Lottie Dexter Blasingame Dempsey met her aged husband at the ringside at Shelby, Mont., when she was wielding chamois-skin as a pretty manicure girl.

Hiram needed a manicure when he went to see the bout between his "boy," Jack, and Tommy Gibbons in the roped arena. Lottie was wielding the "gloves" in the barber shop near the ringside, where Hiram Dempsey took the count from her in the first round. Their engagement lasted more than a year. Then, on August 1 of this year, the elder Dempsey persuaded his youthful sweetheart to elope with him to Farmington, Utah, where they were married by a justice of the peace.

The elder Dempsey was divorced from his first wife five years ago.

THE STORY OF JEAN AND JOHN.

Once upon a time there lived in a forest a woman and Jean and John. Jean was six and John eight. They were very good and everybody loved them. Days passed and they had nothing to eat, so that morning they took their baskets and ran along to get some berries

They soon had their baskets full, so they started home. When they were almost there they saw a dog with a sore paw and he was hungry. So John wrapped him in his coat and carried him home and gave him something to eat and put him to bed and took him to his master.

Their mother told them to run and play and when she called them to come in they must do so. She called them and soon they came running in the house. She said, "I have a surprise for you, close your eyes and come with me." They did so. She told them to open their eyes. They saw a table full of presents and the dog and some money.

"Tomorrow we shall move into our house, daddy is King and I am Queen, you a princess and John a prince. "We are rich," said the mother. John said, "We are rich; how did we become rich?" His mother replied, "Because you helped that poor dog and everybody loves you"

PIRATES AT SEA.

Once there was a rich man and whenever he would send his goods away they would be stolen by Pirates. This man got tired of this, so he put up a sign saying "Five million dollars for stopping the Pirates from robbing my goods." The pirates heard about it, so the captain told his men not to rob any more ships.

The captain went to this rich man's house and told him that he had stopped the pirates from robbing. The man was pleased and gave the captain the reward. The rich man's daughter and the captain were soon married, and he took his bride at once to his ship. Two days later the girl found out that her husband was a pirate and was robbing her father's ships. She tried to go and tell her father but her husband would not let her.

It was on the 12th of May when the captain and his wife sailed away to a lonely island. He told her that he was going to leave her when they reached there. A man on the ship heard this and went and told the father of the girl, but when they reached the ship, it had already sailed away. They got a smaller boat and started after the ship. When the pirates saw the men coming they were surprised and prepared to fight. The policeman won, though. Afterwards they started to look for the bride and after a long search, found her down at the bottom of the ship in a small room.

The girl and the man who told her father what he heard her husband say that he was going to leave her were married later. JOSEPHINE SILVA.

ELIZABETH AND DOROTHY.

One day a girl 11 years old was reading a book of fairy tales, when all of a sudden she heard a knock at the door and it was her chum, Elizabeth.

As soon as she got to the house she said, "I will ask your omther if you can on a hike tomorrow." Her mother said she could go. The next morning came. Dorothy put on her hiking suit and went to Elizabeth's house. When she got there Elizabeth was ready, so they went on their way to the hills.

When they got to a nice spot they put up their tent.. Dorothy made the fire and cooked the supper while Elizabeth fixed the beds. When they were asleep, they heard a noise, so Dorothy got up and it was her long lost brother. So she and her family lived happily ever after.

THE WILD CAT.

On a top of the hill stood Father Merritti and a young man. He was the chief of a gang. Father Merritti was talking to this young man, (The Wild Cat). "Why doesn't he stop his miserable life." said Father Merritti. But the wild cat only said that he couldn't, because he was so used to it. Father Merritti was forcing him to leave his miserable life. but it was no use and Father Merritti knew it, too. So he only blessed him and rode away on his donkey.

After Father Merritti left, the Wild Cat's gang appeared, and the Wild Cat told them that Father Merritti needed new clothes. The Wild Cat thought of a plan and after he told his gang about his plan, they all agreed to do what their boss told them to. So that night they rode into town, went into the saloon and up to the bar for a couple of drinks. When they finished they looked across the room and saw five men around a card table gambling. Once in the city of Bridgeport, Conn., there lived two boys. Their names were Tom and Bill and they were detectives. One day while they were walking they saw a sign. It said, $20,000 reward for the capture of One-Leg Pete and his gang."

So Tom said to Bill, "Let's try it." And Bill said sure. So they went to the police station and got four guns, two flashlights and five handcuffs. Then they started out. While they were in the forest, they saw some men go into a cave. Then Bill said, "All ready?" and Tom said, "Yes." So they went into the cave. When they got inside of the cave, Tom saw a button and he pressed it and they felt themselves going down, and when they stopped they were at a door. It was marked "G." They went in and found gold. They came out and went in the next room, it was marked "S." It had silver and snakes. They went into the next room and it was marked "R." It had people. There were two girls. A BAZAAR BOOTH.

If your class is to have a booth at the church bazaar you probably have plans well under way, know just what you will sell, and have articles ready for price tags and others in the making. The erection of a booth is generally a last minute consideration, however. And often times it looks it. Of course, unattractiveness is partly offset by attractive personalities of girls in attendance, but why not have an attractive booth? A little planning, work evenly divided among those in charge of the booth, a little help from a brother or father if need be and the booth will be ready before you know it.

There are various forms of small booths that are easy to build, of which one is presented in Fig. 1. As shown by the frame-work detail of Fig. 2, the supports of the booth are a pair of saw-horses. See if you cannot borrow a pair from a carpenter. It doesn't matter if one is lower than the other, for it can be blocked up on top. In place of horses, you can substitute boxes, of course, which are always available at the grocery store.

The counter requires several boards, for which you should be able to borrow table leaves, since they will not be damaged in the least. Cover the boards with wrapping-paper, tacking this to the under side.

For arches, get the heaviest wire the neighborhood hardware store carries. Bend it into four arches, one for each end of the booth, and two for the front, and bend the lower ends of the wires at right angles and fasten to the edges of the counter. Bind together the upper parts of the wire loops with heavy thread.

With the framework completed, wrap the wire loops with strips of green crepe paper, then trim with garlands of flowers, also made of crepe-paper. Fasten cloth around the front and ends of the base of the booth, and use this as a foundation for a crepe-paper valance. The front and ends of the base may be decorated with borders of paper flowers.

The next morning Father Merritti was up very early. Then the Wild Cat appeared. He saw that the window was opened and threw a large bundle in through the window. Father Merritti was surprised when he opened it, and saw the new clothes for him.

He then rewarded the Wild Cat by marrying his beautiful daughter, Rose. After three years the stork brought them a beautiful baby girl.

THE PRINCESS.

Once upon a time there lived three princesses. They were the daughters of King Ferdinand and Queen Isabel of England. The oldest daughter, Pearline, and the second daughter, Pauline, were jealous of their youngest sister, Periezade, who was very beautiful.

One day as they were walking around the castle they saw a beautiful fairy. The fairy came up to the three sisters and said, "Dear Princesses, I have lost my bird of happiness and as a reward for the one that brings it back, shall marry the Prince of Spain."

The sisters started out at once to look for the bird. Pearline going west, Pauline going north and Periezade going south. After marching one day and night for one month Pauline and Pearline not finding a sign of the bird, returned home disgusted. But Periezade marched on. One night as she was walking through the forest she met a child. "Have you anything to eat," asked the child. Periezade immediately took out her bundle of supplies and gave the child what she had. The child ate for a long time and then said. "Thank you." "I am glad to have made you happy," replied Periezade, smiling.

She was about to march on when the child said. "Here is a gift for you, that I caught." Periezade jumped with joy, for it was the bird of happiness. Periezade took the bird, thanked the child and marched back to the palace. Periezade gave the fairy the bird. The fairy was greatly pleased and gave her many beautiful gifts. She was soon married to the prince. A wonderful wedding was held and the prince and princess lived happily ever after. LAURA BRUSSI.

They came to a little pond. There was a big rock and the fairy told Mary to push it over. The fairy took Mary and they stood where the rock was. Once there was a boy that was bad. He was mean to animals and hated flowers. He never smiled, he always looked cross. One day he saw an old lady who was carrying something very heavy. He ran up to her and began to tease her until his mother called him in for supper.

The next day he saw a girl run up to her and help the old lady carry the heavy package. When she got to where her house was, he heard the old lady say, "You may have three wishes for whatever you want."

So whenever he saw an old lady that was carrying something heavy, he always ran up and helped them. And he was always good after.

Alice thought he was a very nice boy and said, "Yes, you may take him, but please do bring him back to me. I will wait right here." Frank said in a soft tone, "All right." Alice waited for Frank to come back, but he was never coming. Alice went home very sad. She wished she hadn't let Lady go with Frank. One month passed and Alice found her dog. THE BEST I HAD AT THE AMERICAN THEATER.

On Saturday, October 18, 1924, there was to be a free show given by the Tribune at the American Theater. One of my friends asked me if I would go. When I asked my mother she said yes. I was so glad, because I had never been there in my whole life. It was very nice of them to give us a FREE SHOW, don't you think so?

We started at 8:30. When we reached there it was 8:35. There were many children in line. While we were waiting for the doors to open a man came passing lots of Hallowe'en hats and little animals that wagged their tails. One girl had a wrist watch and I asked her what time it was. She said 8:45. I could hardly wait for the doors to open. I asked her if it was 9 o'clock. She said 8:50.

While we were talking I almost asked her the time. She told me, and I said, Doesn't it pass quickly?" Soon the doors were open. When we went in every boy and girl were shouting or singing as loud as they could. One boy in back of me sang and shouted, whistled and hummed all at once. A man came out and all was quiet. He talked and told us about an electric light to put on our bike. When he went it became noisy again.

The first on the program was a funny moving picture and the second was another movie and I had to laugh and laugh so much, it was so funny. The fairies were beautiful, the goblins and witches were spooky, very spooky, and the pumpkin was a big yellow mellow one, too! After it was over they took the pictures.

SUSIE'S AND SALLY'S HALLOWE'EN DAY.

"Oh, goody! Oh, goody!" yelled Susie Pumpkin, running into the field in which she lived. "Hallowe'en is coming. I do hope they'll choose me to hang up." "Why, what would Sister Sally do?" answered her mother. "They would certainly choose her, too," was the answer.

Susie went to hunt Sally, her twin sister. "Sally! Oh, Sally! Wake up," called Susie. "What for?" was the answer. "Sleepy head, don't you know it's Hallowe'en?" "Goody!" shouted Sally. "I nearly forgot." "Oh, I hope they'll choose us, don't you, Sally?" "Yes, yes, of course. You know yesterday, Susie. I heard the children talking and one of them said, 'I think those three would be nice, and I think they mean us.'" "Oh, joy, what fun. Let's go tell mother," said Susie. The mother said, "Don't be too sure, they might not mean you." At last Hallowe'en came. Susie and Sally were so excited. The children unluckily meant three other ones and took them off. Oh, how disappointed Susie and Sallie were! They reported their sad news to their mother and said it was all off. Their mother said, "I told you not to be too sure."

There were two poor children who did not have any fun on Hallowe'en. Susie thought and thought! Finally she jumped up with joy and said, "Oh, Sally, oh, Sally, you know June and Jack, the poor children? They can't have any pumpkins. Let's go over there and surprise them!" "Oh, good! WHAT GEORGE WON BY GOING TO WAR.

Once upon a time there lived a family of four. There were the father, mother and two children. They were very poor. One day the paper had heading to be read by all young boys, which meant George. And the heading said WAR. So everyone was sad and the day came.

George kissed them and left. Months passed and at last a letter came saying he was on his way home, and they were all glad to see him. He had won five medals for bravery, and married his nurse. He also brought home another soldier who had no home. Afterward the soldier married George's sister.

"Yo' ho, ho and a bottle of rum!',

"Blame your hides, the next one that sings and wakes me up will walk the plank at dawn."

Captain Applejack, as you see, did not like to be disturbed.

"Darn that captain, anyway. Let's all give a loud yell and run. He won't dare kill us all."

"No, he will do like he did before—kill ten of us—and I don't want to one of them."

"Coward!"

"I'm not a coward. I'll yell, you see."

"All together now."

"Ye, ho!"

"Scum! Who did that? I'll teach you that I do what I say I will. Every man that helped come forward."

No one came.

"Come, I say, or every one of you will sink at dawn."

"But, captain, we need 'em all."

"You're the cabin boy, not my advisor. We don't need 'em and I'll sink 'em."

In the morning ten men came to the captain and said:

"We didn't help yesterday and we want our lives."

"You'll get 'em. Help me sink the other ten men. They're all afraid of my sword."

"I think it's best to go to shore and bury our treasure in the morning, cap."

"We will. We haven't many men left and if we tackle a ship and they conquer they won't get much."

"Yes, I think that's best."

"Yeoma Island is near here, so we will go there."

"Aye, aye, sir."

"Alfred, will you please wake up? Your piano teacher will be here any moment and you must be ready."

"Oh, heck, I was dreaming."

"Alfred, such language. Here, let nursey put your little velvet suit on, that's a dear." PATSY.

PEARL'S PEARLS.

On the rail of a ship sat beautiful Pearl Downer. She was sailing from America to Europe. She was listening to the sailors chanting their favorite song. She was watching the gulls and soon she fell overboard.

Dick Watson saw her and jumped after her. They soon got on deck again and the next thing that happened the ship struck a rock. All the boats and life savers were gone, so Dick and Pearl swam and soon came to an island and on the shore they saw a number of white specks. "It is rice," said Dick. "No, it is pearls," said Pearl. Fortunately Dick had got two loaves of bread and two pieces of sandwich meat. In five days an American steamer came in sight and Pearl and Dick were taken aboard and were married in a small church in Oakland and made Oakland their home forever. ANNA COLEMAN.

THE THREE WISHES.

Once there were a couple, a man and a woman. They were very poor, and hardly had enough to support them. The husband was a fisherman by trade. Once when they were sitting by the fire, the man said, "I wished there were such a thing as fairies." And just then a fairy appeared and said, "You may have three wishes." The woman said, "I wish I had a pudding." The man got so angry he wished that the pudding would go on the lady's nose and stay on forever, and they both stayed at the fire very silent, and there was only one more wish, so in a little while the lady wished that the pudding was off her nose so that was the end of their wishes, and the fairy appeared again and said they could not have any more wishes. The man was very angry, but they lived happily ever after.

CHRISTMAS.

Christmas time is almost here
And everybody gives a cheer
For good old Santa dear.
Every girl and boy
Will have some new toy
Everything is full of happiness and joy.
None of us will weep
But we'll all go to sleep
And not try to peep.
All of us will meet
And tell of goodies sweet.
That we got on Christmas Day
Which is always joy and play.

Lots of love, Aunt Elsie.

Riding in Papertown

In Papertown, the people go

Tom and Bill handcuffed them and then they went back to the room marked "Danger" and "Beware" and untied the people and the two girls. When they got back to the police station One-Leg Pete and his gang had to stay in jail for life because of the many murders that they had done. Tom and Bill got the $20,000 reward, and Tom married Gladys, and Bill married Annie. So now we see Tom and Bill are living in bungalows. Tom and Bill are still detectives and are living very happy.

THE FOX IN THE WELL.

Once there was a fox. He was getting a drink of water out of a well. His name was Red. As he was drinking he fell in the well. He tried to stick his claws into the sides to keep his head above the water. Soon after a wolf came and peeped over the side of the well. The fox appealed very earnestly for assistance, begging that he would help him to a rope or something of that kind, which might aid him to escape.

And so the wolf helped Red out of the well, so the wolf and Red went home very happy that day.

THE HALLOWE'EN PARTY.

In the slums of New York lived Mr. and Mrs. Rose. They were very kind. They didn't have children, but gave parties to them. They were planning to give a Hallowe'en party.

On Hallawe'en night they invited the children near them to come to the party in costumes. The children were very happy when they saw turkey, pies and all kinds of food that they liked. After they were through eating, Mrs. Rose told them ghost stories, and while she was telling them the light went out. Then they saw something white. All were scared and they ran and hid. One of the boys lit the light and then they saw it was Mrs. Rose. They all began laughing at the joke. The children were leaving now. They thanked Mr. and Mrs. Rose for the party. The children always liked Mr. and Mrs. Rose for their kindness.

ADVENTURES OF MR. PUMPKIN.

"Sh! sh!" You could hear the voices of three boys in farmer Brown's pumpkin patch. They got a hold of a big orange one. But they heard a bang! They dropped the pumpkin in some high grass then they ran.

The next day the farmers picked all the pumpkins except the one in the grass. At night Mr. Pumpkin rolled on to the patch into the street. Mr. Pumpkin met a boy whose name was Bob. The next night was to be Hallowe'en. Bob took Mr. Pumpkin and made a jack-o'lantern. Mr. Pumpkin was happy on Hallowe'en. Bob dressed up as a witch and took his lantern. Bob scared a great many children. The next morning the wind blew Mr. Pumpkin down the street. He fell off a cliff and Mr. Pumpkin woke and found that old farmer and his family was eating him, so that was the end of Mr. Pumpkin.

TRY, AND TRY AGAIN.

One time about 1912 there was a man that had an education but not a good one. His name was Irwin Burton and he was about 25 at this time. He tried for a job but didn't succeed. So one day as he was walking slowly along, he stopped and gazed, what could be the matter? Why, I'll answer that question for you. He saw a spider spinning a web.

Now this gave Irwin an idea, for he saw him going over it several times, that meant that he was going to get the web just as he wanted it and he tried and tried until he got it right. So Irwin thought he would try until he succeeded. One day he thought he would write music and he did succeed. After that he went into partnership with two other fellows whose names are Watson and Smith. Finally they all thought they would start a music store. Their place is now in the Strand Theater building in New York.

THE SUNKEN TREASURE.

Picture yourself in a large old-fashioned room with shelves of gold and silver plates. At one end of the room was an old chair in which sits a strong man. His hands were red and rough and had done many a day's work with hammer and saw. On the table lies his big sword. The man's name is Sir Wilman Pilps and he sits in his grandfather's chair.

But Sir Wilman Pilps did not always sit in the grandfather's chair. He was a poor man's son, and was born in the center of Maine. Until he was a man he could not read or write. In 1673 he was 22 years old. He came down to Boston and married a widow who had property enough to set him up in business. It was not long after that that he lost all their money and became a poor man again. Several years past by and Wilman Pilps had not gained the riches that he had promised to himself. In the year 1684 he heard of a Spanish ship which had sunk nearby. It had a great many bags of gold. He went to King James and he sent him out with a ship called Rosa Algier. It had eighteen guns and ninety-six men and he was the captain of the ship and he started out. He could not find it at first, so he hunted and hunted and finally came across the sunken ship. He told an Indian diver to go down and get it. He came back and said I have seen a lot of wealth. Then all the men jumped down and brought hundreds of bags of gold and silver and a golden cup. They gave the golden cup to the king to drink his wine with. Then Sir Wilman Pilps went back to Boston and he was a millionaire. He lived there and died in the year 1712.

After they had gone a long way they sat down on a rock to rest. Dick was looking around when he discovered a button on the rock. It was a big rock. He called Tom, who wondered what was the matter. He pressed it and he saw a long passage. They went in and the rock closed behind them. They saw a door marked "G" which was a room full of gold. They went in another room which was marked "S" which had silver. They then came to the last room which was marked "Danger." The boys got their guns ready and walked in and saw the gang and One-Eyed Pete. They had a fight, but the boys soon had the pirates marching to the sheriff.

She saw something white
There she stood
With a terrible fright.

Her mother told her turn the

And get some fat
Then she saw a witch
With a bat.

She went to get the broom
Then she asked the witch for a

She said that the broom had room
By her side.

In the night she saw a ghost
But she still was sorry
She asked her mother for some toast
But she wasn't going to have a Hallowe'en.

She sat on her mat
Because she just got out of her bed
For fear of a cat
But she was well and fed.

But she wasn't sorry
Like she seemed
For she had a Hallowe'en party.

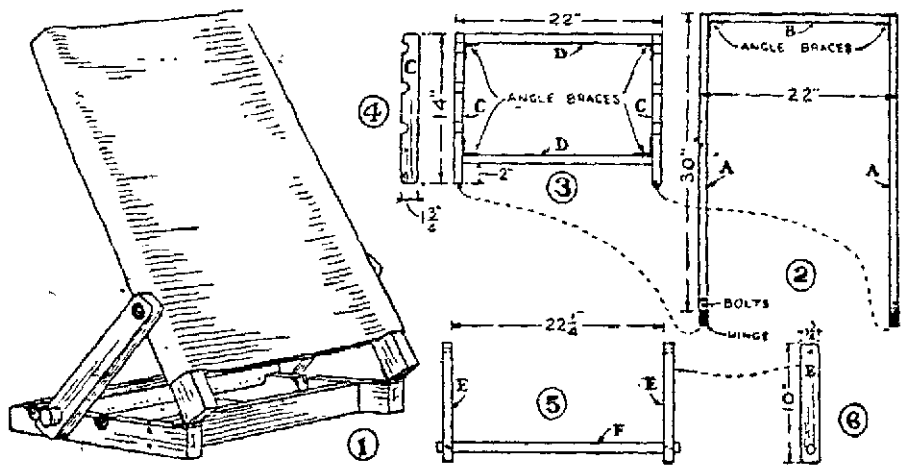
BOYS' DEN!

A BED BACK REST.

Everyone who has been sick in bed knows how hard it is to pile up pillows to make a comfortable back rest, and how once they are piled it is next to impossible to keep them from sliding and compressing into bumps and hollows. An adjustable back rest like that in the illustration solves the problem.

If there is no present need of this sick room device at home, or at the home of a friend or relative, clip the article and file it for future reference. There is little work to the construction of the back rest, and you can build one quickly in an emergency.



The back rest is made in three sections, the back, the base and the adjusting device. A detail of the back framework is shown in Fig. 2. Make uprights A and top crosspiece B of strips 7-8 inch thick and 1 3-4 inches wide, known as 1 by 2s, cut to the lengths given. Nail strips A to the ends of B, and brace the corners with a pair of iron angle braces (Fig 2). Bolt a hinge to the lower ends of strips A, as shown.

Build the base of 1 by 2 strips. Figure 3 gives dimensions for strips C and D, and Fig. 4 shows how to notch the upper edge of strips C to receive the adjustment bar. After fastening strips D between strips C, brace the corners with four iron angle braces as indicated.

A detail of the adjustment device is given in Fig. 5, and a detail of its end struts E is given in Fig. 6. Drill a small hole near one end of struts E for screw pivots, and bore a 7-8 or 1-inch hole near the other end through which to run adjustment bar F. For this bar use a piece of broom handle. Fasten the bar with nails and glue.

After bolting the hinges of back uprights A to the ends of base rails C, slip adjustment bar F into one of the pairs of notches provided for it, and screw the free ends of struts E to the sides of uprights A, being careful to get the screw pivots on a line with each other.

It is best to round off all edges of the framework with sandpaper or a plane before finishing the woodwork. Apply a coat of shellac and two coats of varnish, or two coats of flat white paint and one coat of white enamel.

Mother or sister had better prepare the cover for the back rest. This should be of duck and made to slip off for laundering.

THE LOST CITY.

Once long ago there was a city which had disappeared and many thought it very spooky. The city was a business center of Naples, Italy. One night the city disappeared with all the people.

Now at this time a story was spreading all over the world that a certain man had power enough to make anything any size disappear. This led to Naples where the other cities were in mortification at its disappearance. The people looked for this man, but without results.

One day a man came to the city and a boy called him a name. The man said some magic words and the boy disappeared. Another man saw this and took him to the police. The police questioned him and the man said he was the magician. The people said they would give him $1,000,000 to recover the city. He did so and Naples came back.

Now a princess had disappeared from the castle which had disappeared with the city. The magician said that a man who knew no fear would be able to get her if he jumped from the castle roof. A prince did so and as he hit the earth he stopped and the princess was in front of him and you know the rest.

The man that had rang the bell said that he ran after the man that lost the ring, but the man kept running away from him. I saw him go in this house so I rang the bell. A RAINDROP.

Once there was a raindrop and it had a hard trip around the world and when it got home it was very tired, but when it got home all his brothers were there already. They asked him why he didn't come home before. Then he told them that he had gone all over the world.

JACKLYN RANKIN,

Once there was a little girl. She had golden curls. She had a little brother named Billy. The little girl played with her Billy every day. The little girl's name was Mary. Mary was good to her brother Billy. One day Mary was swinging and Billy came out and wanted the swing and Mary gave it to him.

A HALLOWE'EN PARTY.

One day a boy named Jim Green said, "Mother, can I have a Hallowe'en party?" "Yes, you can invite ten boys." So he wrote letters to ten boys and said, "Come to my party on October 31, and the boy who wears the best costume will get a prize. There will also be a second prize."

FUN IN THE ATTIC.

One day June and May and Jack and Bill went up in the attic to have some fun. After playing awhile they decided to look around. What do you think Jack found? A big chest which they all decided to open. When they lifted the lid a silk cover laid over the top. They took the cover off and what did they find but a man's costume with golden braid on it. Then they found a black mask and a black flag with a skull and cross bones. They ran downstairs to tell their mother what they had found. What do you think their mother said? It was the chest that their father had, but the thing in the chest was the costume that he wore in a play.

After that on a cold day they would go up in the attic to play.

Once there lived a family of six. There were three girls and one boy. The boy's name was James and the oldest girl's name was Mary. The next girl's name was Virginia, and the next Margaret.

One day they went for a walk and they saw a hollow tree. There were some steps going down into the ground. They went down the steps and saw a kitten, a bathroom, a pantry, a bedroom, a room of gold, a room of silver, a room of paper money, a room of silver money and a room that had a sign, "This is a barred castle." They went and got their parents and lived happily ever after.

THE MYSTERIOUS BED.

"Extra! Extra!" yelled little Billy. "All about the murder of Miss Rose Black!" Miss Rose Black was a millionaire's daughter and had been found dead in her bed. Mr. Black put a sign out that he would give a reward to anyone who could find Rose's twin sister, Lilly, and solve the mystery of Rose's death.

There was a young detective by the name of Jack Brown. He read the sign, and he was in love with Lilly. He went to Mr. Black's home. Jack Brown investigated the bed where Rose was. He soon found the cause of Rose's death. He found a knife stuck in the bed and the knife had poison on it. After he found that he went in search of Lilly. He went into a cave in the mountains. There he saw One-Eyed Pete and his gang. Jack marched them down to the police station and there One-Eyed Pete confessed that he murdered Rose. After he told them that Lilly was in the cave. Jack went in and soon found her and afterward married her.

When they were looking in the creek Alice's doll fell in the creek. A little dog came by and went in the creek and got Alice's doll. Alice thanked the dog and said good-bye. When she went to sleep with them the chickens were so big they would cover her up instead of her covering them up. Now I let her out in the yard because the big chickens will peck her.

One morning as Alice and Helen were sleeping together, John went in the room and woke them up. Then as they were playing, John took Helen's pillow and went to hit her on the head. Instead of hitting her on the head he hit the glass shade and broke it into a thousand pieces. He didn't hit the globe. The glass flew right on the bed. It hit Alice and Helen, but didn't cut them. The glass was all over the floor and bed. Alice and Helen were very scared. They did not know what happened. John saw what he did and ran in his room. His mother found out what he did and made him stay in bed for the rest of the day. Alice and Helen were lucky not to be cut by the glass.

Betty was the girl's name and she was mean and spoiled. In the day time when her father was at work and her mother down town shopping, she would go to her friend's house. One day when she got to her friend's house and rang the bell, Ruthie, her friend, answered the door bell. Ruthie stuck her tongue out at Betty. Betty was angry, so she went around by Ruthie's bedroom, picked up a rock and slammed it at the window and of course she broke it into a thousand pieces. Betty ran home and told her mother. When Betty's daddy came home, Betty told him, too. They only laughed. When Ruthie came over she laughed and said to Betty, "Served me right." THE MURDER OF MR. SMITH.

Once upon a time Mrs. Smith went out and left her husband at home. While he was reading the paper a shot rang through the room and he fell dead on the floor. When Mrs. Smith came home she knew nothing of her husband's death. She went right to bed and in the morning when she went to call him he did not answer. She looked in his bedroom, but he was not there. She looked all over the house and at last she saw him lying on the floor dead. She phoned to the police and they said they saw the man run with a bag of money and they chased him, but it was too late. He caught a train and was off, but they said they would send a telegram to the police at the station and tell them about it. They got the man and the money and they buried Mr. Smith. The robber had to stay in jail the rest of his life.

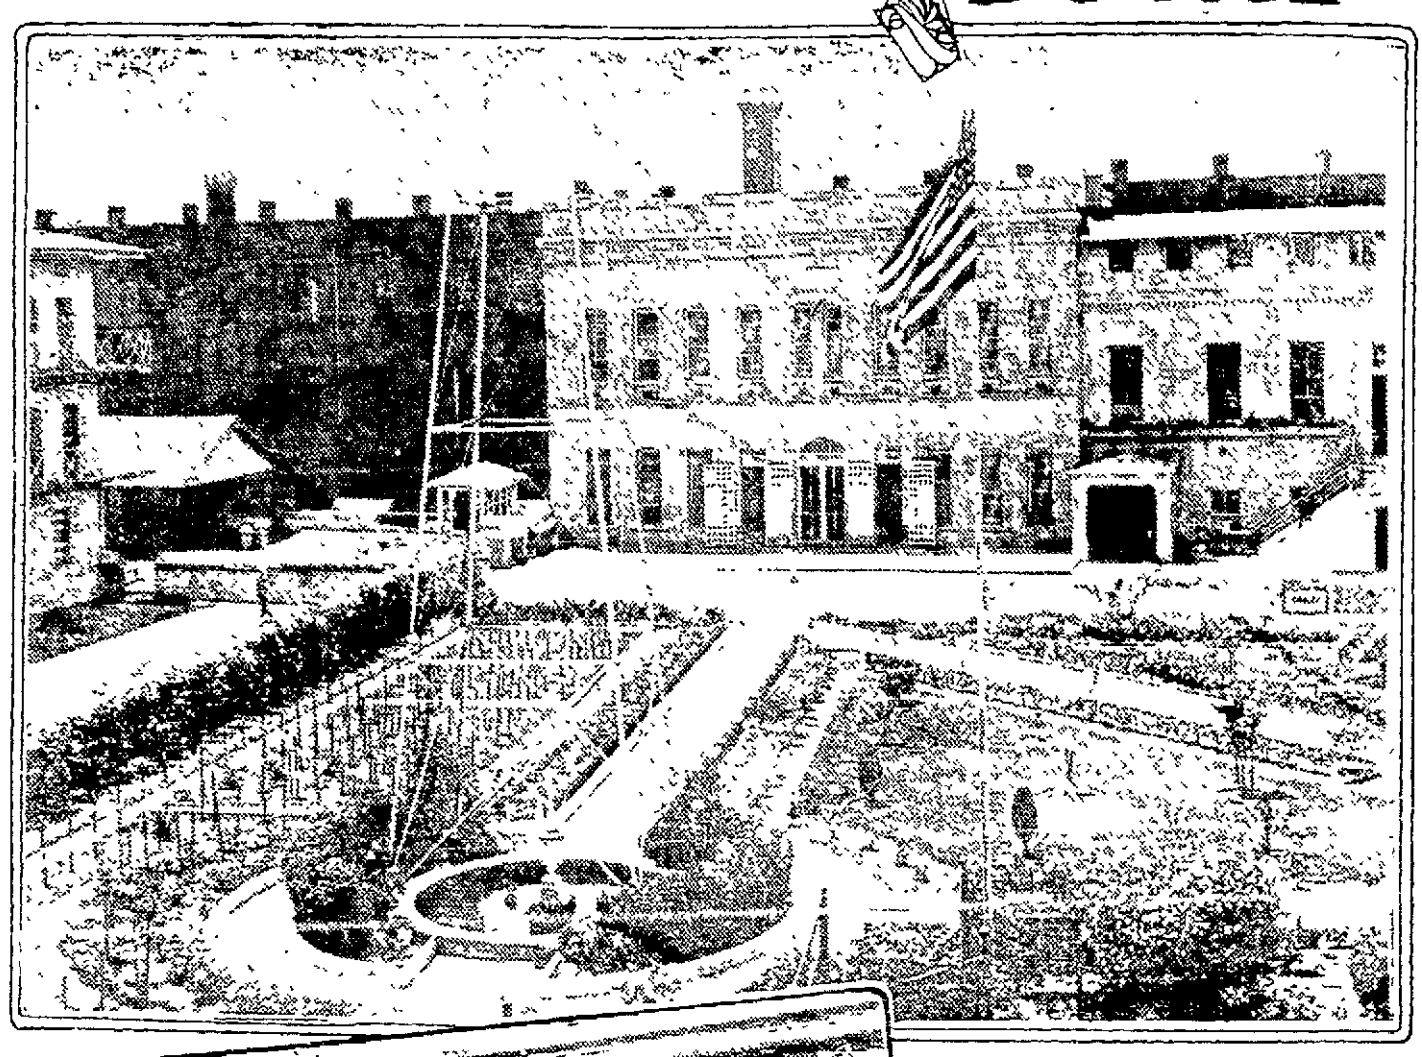
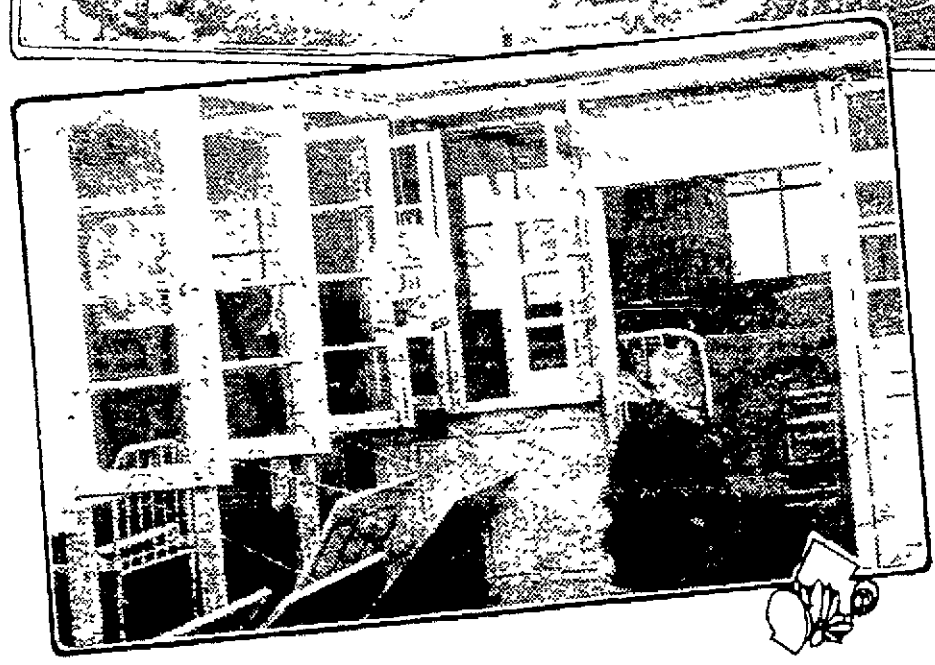
Eleven Years as A San Quentin Prison Doctor

By GEORGE C. HENDERSON

PART 1.





View of the garden at San Quentin penitentiary (above), showing a corner of the cell building at the left, with the sash and blind building, hospital and library in the background. Below, interior of the tuberculosis ward of the prison hospital.

Experiences of the physician who assumed charge of the hospital when he was just out of college and some of the departures and improvements he has been responsible for ELEVEN years ago when Dr. L. L. Stanley became resident physician at San Quentin prison he was an inexperienced youth of 27 years, fresh from medical school.

He pictured the prison as a desolate stone tomb, holding hardened slayers and vicious criminals of every type—men who were different from the ordinary citizen.

But when he stepped inside the "garden beautiful" the first convict that he saw was a college man from a California institution of higher learning, and soon he discovered that convicts were just average men who had gone wrong, generally because of some mental or physical disease.

Now, after eleven years of work, the once inexperienced college boy is renowned throughout the country as the foremost expert on the endocrine glands, and his fame as a humanitarian has just caused the Carnegie Institute to appropriate $85,000 to be spent at San Quentin prison for experiments.

San Quentin prison was selected for the scene of the internationally important experiments on pyorrhoea by the Institute because Dr. Stanley had demonstrated to the world that in caring for more than 13,000 prisoners since February, 1913, he had contributed invaluable data to the medical profession not only on endocrinology, but on spinal anaesthesia and blood transfusion as well.

Dr. Stanley showed by the injections of glandular matter into more than 2500 willing convicts, the possibility of carrying on medical experiments on a greater scale than had ever been attempted. Because the prisoners could be examined and checked up on every day for a period of months and even years, because the diet, hospitalization and activities of the inmates were uniform, the value of the subjects in scientific research was much greater than among free men.

Under the direction of the University of California, the Carnegie experts thus have at their beck and call a small army of men for any number of years—an army which it would require thousands of dollars a week to hire. Whether they find a cure for the dread pyorrhoea, of course only time will tell.

How Dr. Stanley, beginning as a beardless college boy, helped transform San Quentin prison from a place of medieval torture into a gigantic hospital, devoted to the salvage of wrecked human lives is the subject of this article.

"Just give 'em a few pills or a dose of salts!" That was the advice vouchsafed to the young physician by his predecessor. "You can't satisfy them anyhow. They're a rotten gang."

The boy doctor found that they were indeed a "rotten gang."

Hardened criminals, afflicted with revolting diseases, were allowed to mingle indiscriminately with young first-termers. Tubercular spread the plague from one part of the prison to another without thought being given to their segregation. Typhoid sufferers went unattended.

When criminals addicted to the use of morphine or other narcotics were brought to the prison they were thrown into the dungeon and allowed to "kick out the habit," screaming with the pain that only a drug addict knows. Sometimes they killed themselves, sometimes they went insane, not infrequently they came out alive, but greatly weakened by the treatment and easy prey to the dread tubercular germs that permeated the prison.

Warden James A. Johnston wanted to change all this. So he gave Dr. Stanley all the rein he wanted and watched to see what the 27-year-old physician would do.

The resident doctor's first act was to institute a system by which every inmate must take a medical examinaton, after he had received a bath, clean clothing, a shave and had been measured and photographed for the Bertillon records. This was a tremendous task. It was too much for one man, and yet there were no additional appropriations for hiring other physicians.

The doctor solved the problem in his characteristic manner. Imprisoned in the institution were a number of very good doctors who had been confined for malpractice and various crimes. At that time the genius and ability of these prisoners were not being utilized. Dr. Stanley conceived the idea that these medicos would be only too glad to break the dull routine of confinement by taking up their old profession. This proved true. Most of them responded to the call with enthusiasm. They were glad of the opportunity to do some medical work again.

Various assignments were given to the inmate doctors. Some had to examine incoming convicts. One or two who were skillful surgeons were put in the surgical ward. Specialists in dentistry, eye, ear, nose and throat and other subjects were assigned to their specialties.

Hospital treatment of prisoners at San Quentin became systematized. Every arrival was placed in an observation cell before he was allowed to join the other inmates. He was examined as thoroughly as if he were taking out life insurance. Blood tests were made, vaccinations for smallpox and typhoid were given and family histories recorded and studied.

Because of the eagerness with which the prisoners took advantage of this service, the medical department became swamped with work and Dr. Stanley instituted "sick call." Every morning two sick lines were in evidence. Emergency cases, of course, did not have to wait for this.

Dr. Stanley's next measure was to secure a rule enforcing bathing. The medical department discovered almost instantly that many of the minor complaints and some of the major ones were caused by lack of cleanliness. Bathing once a week was made compulsory. Hot salt water showers were installed and a salt water swimming pool opened. This proved a popular innovation.

Deaths from tuberculosis had been taking a severe toll at the institution. More than 25 per cent of those examined had traces of the disease.

The doctor set about to combat this by adopting the latest medical methods. An outdoor tuberculosis hospital with room for eighty patients was built on top of the old hospital building and was immediately filled with sick derelicts of men, who were taken out of their cells, out of the dungeon and from the jute mill to be cured. At first the prisoners could not understand their changed condition. From iron barred, cold cheerless cells they were transferred to an electrically lighted place, equipped with modern plumbing and bathtubs and always open to the sun and air. Here the floors were scrubbed daily. Here pot plants were brought to make the sick room more cheery.

In the case of tuberculars, where the diagnosis was somewhat doubtful, the patient was placed on light duty in the open air.

Dr. Stanley, the twenty-seven-year-old college boy, found himself learning rapidly of some of the causes contributory to criminality.

Dr. Stanley established an isolation ward, confined the victims to it and began giving the various recognized cures as fast as he could obtain supplies. Wassermann tests were made, not only of incoming prisoners, but of others as well. Today at San Quentin the physician's staff is giving twenty treatments of arsono-benzol a week and it is estimated that the work has done much to decrease insanity and other dread effects.

PSYCHOLOGY OF THE BLIND

The psychology of the blind is neither irrevocably removed from that of the seeing nor all but identical with it through some compensating means. It is simply the full psychology of normality with such changes and deficiencies as are brought about by the lack of sight.

The blind have no power or sense—the writer is blind—not possessed by the seeing, not even an increased keenness of the remaining senses; merely a subtraction of sight with a somewhat better utilization and development of the four other senses to meet conditions.

A peculiar fact in connection with this last has been responsible for much of the confusion, apparently. The chief reason the blind display a marked superiority over the seeing in the other senses, particularly hearing and touch, is that the seeing persist in concentrating on sight regardless of conditions.

If a man is awakened in the night he tries to see what has awakened him, no matter if the room be inky dark. Sight is always the most important sense and the one called on first. So, even when he is blindfolded for comparative tests, the seeing man finds it extremely difficult to shift the focus of attention from sight to these other senses.

Paradoxically enough, therefore, the reason a blind man utilizes these senses to a greater extent is because he has given up this natural attempt to see, which in many cases [illegible] particularly if sight fails gradually, since it is for the most part an unconscious process linked up with how completely blindness is accepted as a fact.

It must not be forgotten, too, that there are only four remaining senses, for this has some widely ramified consequences. First, it means that the blind are confronted with a constant 20 per cent deficiency in received impressions, and, secondly, it precipitates an entire new sense coordination. Normally we do not realize our senses are coordinated until possibly a cold reminds us how heavily taste depends on smell.

Taking a sense as important as sight out of circuit nesessarily forces some vastly more far-reaching readjustments. —Charles Ma Gee Adams in the Atlantic Monthly.

Qualities of the Hatfield Blood

Yankee Sullivan was premier of the heavyweights in the early days of California and undefeated---until he became too playful with Joe Hatfield on a street of Mokelumne Hill

RECKONED according to scriptural allotment Joe Hatfield is a borrower of years. But he betrays it only in the admission. Although in his course he has checked off ninety-two summers on the calendar—seventy-two of them along the Mother Lode of California—he carries their accumulated burden lightly.

When he squared his six-foot frame for the benefit of the camera-man the other day at his cabin in Chili gulch, two miles from Mokelumne Hill, he stood almost as straight as the ramrod of the old squirrel rifle that he toted across the plains in 1852. Less than a year ago he demonstrated his continuing fitness physically by converting a growth of pines to cordwood lengths with an axe—as a means of acquiring a new grubstake.

A man is never whipped until he knows he's whipped, according to his observations, and he adds that the Hatfields of Kentucky seldom know it when they're whipped. Once he had occasion to measure his ability to take care of himself against the prowess of Yankee Sullivan when the latter was champion of his class. But that has a place further along. . . .

Something went wrong with an operation for the removal of an annoying growth on Hatfield's lower eyelid a year or so ago. It cost him the sight of that eye. But it is not in the Hatfield blood to complain.

Native of Kentucky, member of the family that figured for generations in the celebrated feud with the McCoy clan, Hatfield passed the greater part of his youth in Missouri when it was frontier territory.

Boys in the rural precincts of Missouri must fight and wrestle or obscure themselves. It was not in the Hatfield blood to hide. He used the fists and thews with which nature had generously endowed him, and used them effectively. One result was that nature's gifts were developed prodigiously. Axes and rifles were other indispensable implements of that frontier, and Joe Hatfield attained proficiency with them early in life.

He had several competitors among the boys of the neighborhood for the favor of a certain girl. Familiar with their other qualifications for the suitable maintenance of a family, she ordered:

"Let's see how well you boys can shoot." For she knew that marksmanship was often necessary when it came to supplying the table.

At the conclusion of the tryout Joe Hatfield had high score. Ten shots with the rifle, and ten squirrels tumbling from the lofty crowns of the water oaks—all cleanly drilled through the eyes.

Married at 19 years old, three months later Hatfield and his bride were out on the trail behind bull teams for the long traverse to California.

Never a total abstainer, the only time Hatfield ever felt the effect of liquor was while on that drive. In camp on the South Platte River at Julesburg one of the party procured a quantity of raw grain alcohol. It was the first time Hatfield ever heard of that article. With water and sugar a rather palatable beverage was prepared—a water bucketful of it.

After several rounds of drinks the man whose place in the train on the march was next to Hatfield's bantered Hatfield to a test of skill at wrestling. Hatfield was feeling too agreeable and too comfortable to entertain the challenge until the other voiced the belief that he was afraid.

"That was too much for a Hatfield," he says.

Fired to recklessness by the alcohol, he did not take sufficient account of his own strength, and went into it more roughly than he intended, throwing his opponent against a wagon tongue with such force that several ribs were broken.

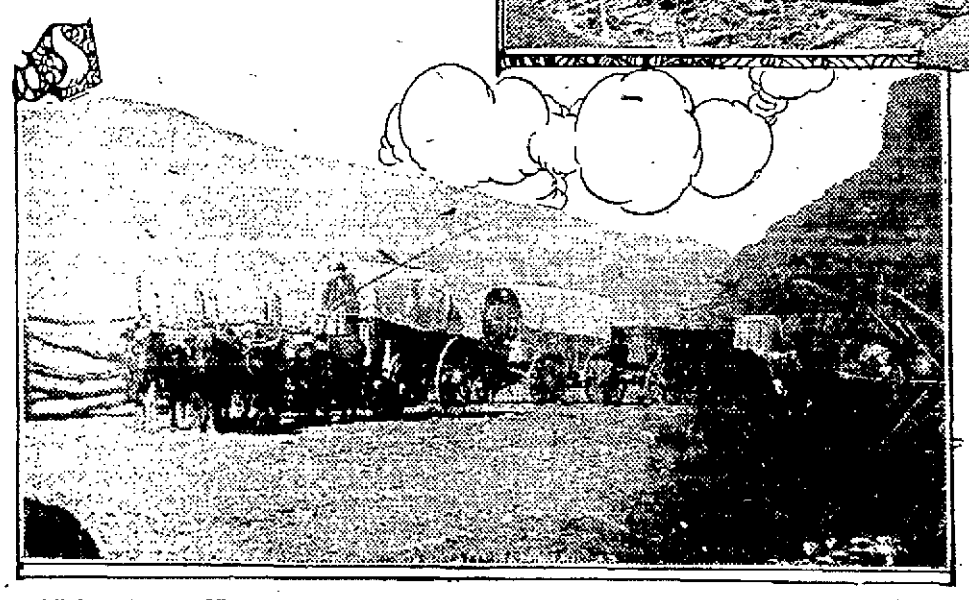
"By my thoughtlessness I made it necessary for his wife to drive his bulls till we got to Humboldt Sink while he had to ride on a bed in the wagon—and he was a good friend of mine," Hatfield says ruefully. "It taught me a lesson. I have never taken more than one snort at a time since then."

Gold camps on the Mother Lode were at the peak of their roaring days when Hatfield pulled in there with his bull teams. Gold was being turned out in such quantities that thoughtful men did not believe it possible for the metal to hold its parity. Miners were pursuing it feverishly, finding it on a scale never heard of before—and those disposed to worry were hoping it would retain its purchasing power until after they had obtained and converted their share.

Mokelumne Hill, where Samuel Pearsall of Colonel Stevenson's regiment had found gold like pumpkin seed, was producing fabulously. It was one of the busiest and most vociferous camps in the region. Thousands of miners were sweating as they followed the pay channels, that led in all directions and seemed to be inexhaustible.

Questions as to the permanency of the thing were not to be entertained, if indeed they were formulated. The idea that all of those vast and rich deposits of auriferous gravel would eventually play out were so foreign that men turned their attention to costly and pretentious homes for their families.

Hatfield can point to where many of these homes stood, far down Chili gulch, although their sites are marked now only by what are left of the domestic flowers and ornamental shrubbery that were introduced in that golden era. Brought in from eastern states or from Europe for the sake of the old home touch, the old home atmosphere, the old home color. Quantities of these are still struggling on in the wilderness after all the years, blooming riotously in season—the thickets of Scotch broom above the McSorley ranch, for example—although there is little left but shapeless masses of stone of what once were foundation walls and terraces. It is a singular commentary that the old home flowers, abandoned by their patrons, should survive the masonry wrought by men.



"When Joseph W. Matfield squared his six-foot frame for the benefit of the camera man at his cabin in Chili gulch the other day he stood almost as straight as the ramrod in the old squirrel rifle that he toted across the plains in 1852. Married at nineteen years old in Missouri, three months later he and his bride were out on the trail behind bull teams for the long traverse to California."

Hatfield worked about Diamond Springs, Mud Springs (El Dorado) and Mokelumne Hill. Part of the time in the diggings for others, with the rocker and long tom and at ground sluicing, part of the time on ground of his own. Occasionally when opening up a claim and provisions ran low he would engage in hauling with his wagons and oxen for a grubstake, or he might help to supply the camps with fresh venison. And every little while he would meet some man who insisted on trying issues with him, usually at wrestling or with naked fists.

Two years of this made him a formidable customer in a rough-and-tumble. He was a six-foot fighting machine, and he had developed 180 pounds of muscle that responded with the resiliency and durability of spring steel.

One man put him on his back in those days—and only one. It was at Diamond Springs. The man's name was Coon. He let Hatfield take the first fall at wrestling after a few minutes, and took the second himself in fifteen minutes. It took Coon thirty minutes to pin Hatfield for the third fall.

"I don't mind letting you know that I'm a professional at this business," Coon said then. And he complimented Hatfield on his strength, skill and agility.

Camp life has always been satisfying to Hatfield. So much so that in the seventy-two years he has been following it he has seen San Francisco bay but twice, although less than 150 miles away. Once in the early days he and a partner came down from the mines intending to take a steamer for New York and travel by rail to their former homes. They did not like the looks of the boat when they inspected it. Moreover, they did not relish the prospect of weeks out on salt water. So they returned to Sacramento, bought horses there and made the trip from California to Missouri and back in the saddle.

Along Mokelumne Hill's tortuous and congested streets Hatfield was making his difficult way with three yokes of oxen attached to a loaded wagon and trailer one morning in the summer of 1851. His cattle were town-shy, and only the long and sinister whip lash singing and barking about their flanks and ears constrained them to hold their course and keep their weight against the yokes.

Merchants had just opened their stores for the business of the day. Curbs were lined with teams and vehicles. The irregular walks were piled man-high with merchandise in crates and bales, leaving barely space for men to walk Indian file. Dust lay ankle-deep everywhere except where men had been with sprinklers.

From the swinging latticed door of a saloon a powerfully set-up man with massive neck, bulging shoulders and trim waist-line lurched on unsteady legs. He was Yankee Sullivan, acclaimed at the time as the champion heavyweight pugilist of America. He was really a native of Ireland, and his true name was not Sullivan, but James Ambrose. He had been engaging in matches at San Francisco and giving sparring exhibitions in the mining camps.

He teetered at the edge of the walk, watched Hatfield and the laboring oxen for a few seconds, grimaced to several followers and roared, "Whoa." The next instant he bellowed in rapid succession, "Come on, there. Whurr-p-p. Whoa-ha. Gee."

It took Hatfield two or three minutes to halt his confused animals and get them straightened away.

"Where are we from?" the playful pugilist sang out to Hatfield. And answered himself in an affected nasal drawl, "From Posy county, Indiany." Then, "What are we loaded with?" Answering himself again, "Hoop-poles and punkins."

Every one there but Hatfield knew and recognized Sullivan. Business was suspended temporarily. Men came on the run from all directions. It was worth a holiday any time to see the champion in action.

Hatfield had no conception of what it was all about. Sullivan swung down from the walk, shouting at him, "Give me that whip. I'll show you how to drive cattle."

"Stranger, I know you're drunk or you wouldn't be interfering with another man's bulls, mixing 'em up this way," Hatfield said to him quietly.

Sullivan reached for the whip, growling, "Hell, you're not from Indiana. You're a damned Missouri Puke."

That remark transcended the Hatfield breaking point. This meddlesome stranger was just within easy reach—and Hatfield's eyes and timing were at their best. From away down at his knee he started

Geraldine on the Right of a Woman to Pick Out Her Mate

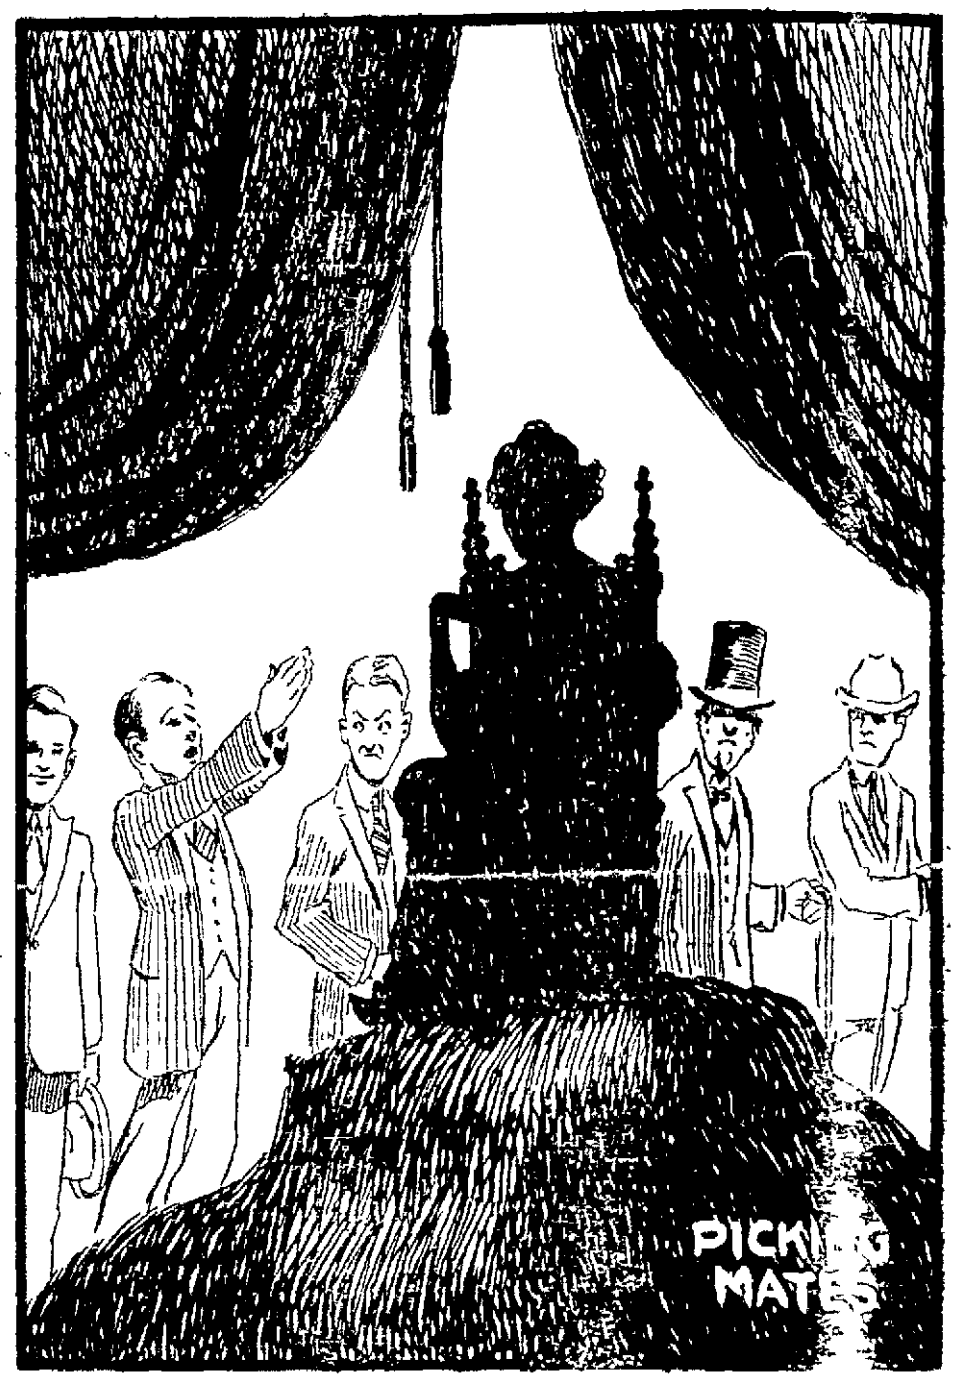
Mere man is likened by one contributor to a football when the girls conclude to make him think he is desirable--and it is added that he may receive rugged treatment in game



WHY shouldn't it be woman's royal prerogative to choose her mate?

For the sake of the good old-fashioned fables, we'll let man do the proposing, else we be termed bold, but if we're going to undertake seriously the duties of wifehood and motherhood, we ought to do our own picking.

Do I hear the men remarking, "If we're going to support some woman all the rest of her days we're entitled to hunt until we find the one WE want?"

Hunt away, old dears, but in turn you'll be stalked by one of my sex who marks you as a good father, husband and provider. Personally I hope she lands you.

Man may do the supporting, although not as much as he used to, but he has interests galore. He has his business associates, and his life in the busy, hustling world. The wife's business is HOME. It is interesting, if she makes it so. She has her children and must give up certain years of her life to them. She does this to a degree that men do not realize.

Therefore the woman whose instincts turn to wifehood and motherhood has the right to seek and find the man who answers the requirements of a GOOD HOME. Why should she sit back and take a chance on the man she dreams of finding her sitting demurely by, just WAITING? Let her get busy and find and WIN the one she wants.

I grant that there are many of my sex who seek a pocketbook. They want the wherewithal to buy clothes—and more clothes. They will seek for the Golden Purse, and the said Golden Purse perhaps will be satisfied to wear his costly wife as a tribute to his own success.

In Quest of the Golden Purse

I wish that the feminine half of this column would write and tell us the TRUTH about who did the wooing in the family. They needn't confess to friend Husbands, but just to us.

Girls, didn't you spot your man and then try by every art to win him? Did you do it because he was an Adonis or because he was just plain human? Or was he the perfect lover? Tell us.

To give you the courage to put your confession in writing, I'll print a letter from one of the male sex who says, after all, it is the man "who pays." Also, he's decided that if man is a human football, kicked from one to the other, he's going to quit that aimless occupation and do some hunting on his own accord. Has he a chance to get away with it? Let's tell him:

Dear Geraldine:

"Truer words were never spoken" than the simple little truths you mention in your first two paragraphs in today's TRIBUNE.

No matter how hard you try to discuss the matter fairly, it's the "man who pays," but here for once is plain truth.

You compare a man to a string of diamonds—an ornament worn only to enhance the appearance or prestige of its wearer; a trophy to proudly display. Nine times out of ten he is worse than that.

You know even an earthquake won't shake a fellow to his senses when a girl starts making a fuss over him. Perhaps one girl will try to outdo the other to win and hold him. Then he gets the big head proper. But he is nothing but a football—a means to an end, the goal in the game, being to show Sister Susie that she can take him away from anyone and hold him. During the game the football gets plenty of rough treatment, but the human football requires a lot of it to bring him to life. And usually after the game the football is the first thing to be forgotten, being important only when the game is being played. It's the score that counts.

Therefore, Geraldine, if it is true that the average girl does use the average fellow only to elevate her standing with her contemporary "charmers," or to provide amusement and enjoyment of the sort she likes best, why is the poor male not justified in doing at least that much for himself?

Male Creature In the Role Of Football

It so happens that I myself have acted the part of "football" in this game, and believe me, Geraldine, if anyone ever kicks me again they surely will stub their toes.

Girls continually write you saying that the fine, clean, worthy young man is an extinct animal. He is, and why not? In the long run he is playing against hard opposition, and no fellow enjoys being made a fool of, especially the second time.

Certainly you do not believe all fellows are bad at heart, or lacking in decency and gentlemanliness.

I know that they are not, but when they are put in the football class they want to get out and do some kicking themselves.

Jerry, don't you think the girls themselves are responsible for a whole lot of what they are complaining of in the fellows?

Sincerely,
ONE OF THE BOYS.

Yep, it's true. Women spot their prey and then set out to capture it—but so do men. The "human football" you speak of has broken feminine hearts just as masculine ones have been smashed.

A man is an asset. He proves that Sister Susie was clever But there are lots of Brother Bills who kiss and run away, leaving broken hearts in their wake. But I'm speaking of the average soul—like you and me. If I think that you come up to the standard I've set, believe muh, I'm going to TRY and get cha.

Those Who Leave Wake of Broken Hearts

Am I going to be the only one to confess, or will some other woman back up my statements?

There's a wordy battle brewing, and I give fair warning that I am ducking for cover. You who read these columns from day to day know both Oswald and Bachelor.

They both write splendid letters which start arguments—and finish 'em. Now it seems that I can't go along as serenely as usual, because Bachelor wants to fight a duel. Instead of having "seconds" in this matter of honor, we're going to have a referee and the weapons will be "words."

Dear Jerry:

Though Oswald appears to be the fair-haired contributor, his air of being Sir Oracle annoys me, and as I am not the kind of dog that barks, I am enclosing a brickbat for you to throw for me, if you will be so kind and obliging. Fear not for me. I am entirely capable of taking care of myself in any wordy warfare.

Captiously yours,
BACHELOR

To OSWALD:

SOUNDING BRASS.

He burns his stint of midnight oil,
With no scant of proportion,
And labors many painful hours
Producing an abortion.

Poor Oswald, it's a wanton shame,
To prick your little bubble,
But cruelty is kindness if
It keeps you out of trouble.

"Please print this, for you seldom get
One so worth while," we hear him say;
Then maunders on, and on, and on,
And hands himself his own bouquet.

Your lucubrations, wordy mess,
A jumbled mass of platitudes,
All show you a complacent ass
In different attitudes.

Religion is a parlous theme,
Provocative of libel;
And evolution, pro and con, can be
Both proven by the Bible.

Suppose that Bruan read your screeds,
And, Jove-like, jumped on evolution:
Between you two easily it might
End up in revolution.

So, Oswald, take a tip from me,
And haul in lots of slack;
Just cut your cloth to fit, and so
Be most gladly welcomed back.
BACHELOR.

What can I tell a little girl whose life is as follows:

Dear Jerry:

I, like others, have come to ask for some of your wonderful advice.

My problem is a little different from all the rest I am a girl 16 years old. I like school, and am in the high eighth grade of junior high school. I am going to receive my diploma this term. Now to get down to my father for the last four years has been telling me to pack up my things and get out of the house. He says it every time he gets mad, and that is quite frequently He tells me that for no cause at all. My mother has told me two times in the past month that she did not care for me.

Problem of a Daughter Of Sixteen

Now, you don't know how it feels to have your parents tell you that you are not wanted. To make matters worse, my sisters, who are smaller than I, are always telling me the same thing. I do not keep late hours. I always come home when I am told to I only go to a show twice a week and about once every two months I go to the school and they have a dance and play, and mother forbids me to dance. I have to have one or two of my sisters with me. I don't mind their coming with me, but they always start a fight about something and that spoils the whole evening.

I have quite a large bank account, at least I think it is, and I am thinking of leaving home. Of course, if I leave I will have to quit school and go to work.

My mother forbids me to even speak to a boy, but she will let me go out with old men, about 50 or 60 years old, and she lets them kiss me, which I despise. I don't see what makes her that way. But I could stand it if it wasn't for my father telling me to "beat it" every once in a while.

Now what I want to know is this: What shall I do? Shall I leave or shall I live through this hell? That is, try to live through it?

Well, Jerry, I guess I have taken up too much of your valuable time to do all this scratching for you to read, so I guess this will be all. Here's to the gang and you, Jerry.

Yours,
M. C.

P. S.—Do you think the law will put me in the reform school for doing what I am ordered to do?

Girl, I'm terribly sorry for your home life, but the law answers your query as to when you can leave and take your own way. Unless you can prove cruelty or impossible conditions, you are under the care of your parents until your eighteenth birthday.

Inflexible Requirements of the Law

I can understand the little sisters' chaperonage to the dances and the rules of "early home," but I can't understand this wanting you to go out with old men. It is disgusting. Youth goes to youth naturally, and a man of 50 or 60 has no place as beau to a girl of 16. Surely your mother can't FORCE you to go out with them, and she can't make you kiss them. You must have enough backbone to put a stop to that.

I cannot direct your life, nor have I any influence on your parents. If they turn cruel, let me know and I'll GLADLY notify the proper authorities and they will come to your aid.

You say you have a large bank account, but is it? Do you know the first thing about buying and making both ends meet? Have you the ability to get and hold a job that would bring you a sufficient income? Life's more than just running away from home, little girl. You've got to have preparation and it looks as though you'd have to get it where you are.

The gameness and kindness and wisdom you show now are all going to help you later on. Don't quarrel, come home when you're told, and in return earn respect by not having anything to do with old men."

What They Say to Geraldine

Is there any other answer I can give to a youngster surrounded by such an environment, gang?

This letter is for you to answer, according to your faith.

Jerry:

Does PERSONALITY cease when death has claimed the body?

Great Query Filters Down Through Ages

Will the REAL YOU still be existent, or will YOU be utterly and completely destroyed when you as we know you, cease to function as a living, breathing entity?

This question has been the GREAT QUESTION OF THE AGES.

Men will always ponder deeply over, the problem of a life after death. The answer is given to those who pass on, if such answer is in the affirmative. If the answer is NEGATIVE, then it is self-evident that NO ONE WILL EVER KNOW IT.

Humanity, alone, of all the living organisms of this earth, has hope of continual life of that intangible, unseeable something within us, the thing we call SPIRIT. We feel justified in taking the attitude that such is the case by the general belief that MAN, WITH HIS WONDERFUL BRAIN, is inconceivably superior to all other living things. Does it not seem logical that the immense stores of knowledge amassed by individuals must be saved for some future purpose, where what has been learned can still be utilized for something better and greater, rather than to get the thought that all the acquisitions of the long years of life's experiences must be thrown into the discard and utterly annihilated by death of the physical body?

The Darwinian theory of evolution has become intrenched to such an extent, in the minds of many thinkers, that the GREAT COLLEGES OF THE WORLD ARE TEACHING THAT WE DID NOT SPRING FROM A SINGLE PAIR, AS THE BIBLE TELLS US, BUT THAT RATHER WE ARE THE RESULT OF WHAT THEY CALL NATURAL SELECTION AND THE SURVIVAL OF THE FITTEST, from lower life forms.

Now one of the BIBLE IS TRUE, THAT THEORY IS WRONG. The one is diametrically opposed to the other. We can do one of three things—believe one or the other, or neither.

The DARWINIAN THEORISTS ENDEAVOR TO PLACATE THE STUDENTS OF THE BIBLE by saying that the acceptance of their logic should not preclude, or obliterate the thought that there may still be, and perhaps is, a life after death. They insist that the story of a single original pair, in the image of their Creator, is absurd. Their claim is that undoubtedly millions of years have elapsed SINCE EVOLUTION STARTED AND FINALLY MADE MAN WHAT WE SEE HIM TO BE TODAY. As such a statement is completely contradictory to Biblical teaching it would have, if universally accepted, absolutely shattered any and all faith in the authenticity of that sacred book of all books.

Discussion Over Special Creation Or Evolution

Man, with all his accrued wisdom, the wisdom of countless mental and physical efforts, through the ages, cannot construct so simple appearing an object as a seed. He cannot construct and put life into a single flesh and blood organism. He stops far short of being able to create a world or a universe. While MAN HAS MUCH KNOWLEDGE, YET HE CANNOT EVEN MAKE GOLD OR SILVER, OR A SINGLE ONE OF THE MANY PRECIOUS STONES OR METALS. HE IS ABLE TO EAT AN EGG, BUT HE CANNOT MAKE ONE THAT WILL BE FERTILE. ONLY THE GOD OF OUR BIBLE CAN DO ALL OF THESE THINGS. As chemists can tell you the component parts of chemical solutions by analysis, so should the mental giants of today be able to show why we are here, where we are going and how things as we know them have been made as they are. The Bible gives the only answer. MEN DO WELL TO BELIEVE IN IT UTTERLY. In other words, we cannot believe just what we want to believe. We cannot tear out the pages that do not suit us and believe the balance and get away with it.

There is ONE THING THAT THE WORLD, AS A WHOLE, SHOULD BE PROFOUNDLY THANKFUL FOR, AND THAT IS THAT CHARLES DARWIN WAS NOT BORN A THOUSAND YEARS BEFORE HE WAS. The tenets of the Bible are so secure in the hearts of men now, and at the time of his birth, that we sigh with relief in

Tenets of the Bible and the Hearts of Men

Short excursions into realm of speculation touching at Darwinism, the theory of natural selection and the law of survival of the fittest, and tenets gathered to the hearts of men

the thought that Darwin's propaganda, while it hurts, WILL NOT BE AN INCUBUS THAT THE CHRISTIANITY OF THE WORLD CANNOT LAY SAFELY ON AN OBSCURE SHELF AS THE YEARS FLOAT BY. His birth was, perhaps, the greatest single aid that has ever come to the assistance of the evil one. A universal belief that God did not create man as he is and in His own image, would certainly tend to nullify the statements in the Great Book relative to the souls of men and as to the need of humanity being mindful of the Ten Commandments.

The Word says that our SOULS WILL LIVE AGAIN. The scientists are skeptical, since they believe in the evolution heretofore spoken of. IF WHAT THEY SAY IS A FACT, THEN MEN HAVE NO SOULS, SINCE THEY DO NOT CREDIT THE LOWER FORMS OF LIFE WITH HAVING ANY. We, in their opinion, evoluted from the lower forms and as such evolution was of a purely physical and material nature, it had absolutely nothing to do with what we term the soul. IF THEY ARE CORRECT, THEN GOD'S WORD HAS FOISTED UPON HUMANITY IT'S MOST TERRIBLE JOKE, IT'S GREATEST HOAX. Then, indeed, the building of our churches, the sums spent upon the clergy, the sacrifices of the Christian martyrs all have been without sense or reason. CAN YOU VISUALIZE THAT?

Since FAITH IS THE MAINSPRING AROUND WHICH CHRISTIANITY GATHERS ITS POWER and since so many scientific minds are doing much to shatter such faith, why, we ask, do they say that there may be, perhaps is, a soul, after all? Where do they get this idea if not from the Bible? It never comes from any other source. If they have evoluted lower living forms to twentieth century beings, WHICH WE STRENUOUSLY MAINTAIN THEY HAVE NOT, what excuse can they offer for the existence of a soul IN AN OFFSPRING FROM A SET OF BODIES WHICH THEY CLAIM HAD NO SOULS. God's Word says "HE BREATHED INTO MAN THE BREATH OF LIFE AND HE BECAME A LIVING SOUL."

N. B. CLARKE
(Address given)

Your faith is your own, Friend Clarke. But why, if you are so sure, are you thankful that Charles Darwin was born in 1809 "instead of a thousand years before?" If only truth lives, it would seem that any belief or any new theory would be harmless. The Huxleys and Darwins would make no dent in established truth.

Ability of Truth to Survive

Christianity has stood the test of ages, and perhaps the scientifically inclined say that we'll have to wait the same test of their theories in the eons to come.

I am not saying that you are wrong or that Darwin was right. But I do say that one or no thing can lessen truth.

I wonder how many of you will agree with this letter. It is in answer to Gyp, who believed that we owed the future naught, and that children were born either through selfish reasons or accident.

Disillusioned agrees. Do you?

Don't you know ANYONE who would gladly live life over just as he did before? Is existence more unhappy than happy? If so, are the bright spots so wonderful that they make up for the bad times, or is it just HOPE always beckoning that carries the race forward?

Will you tell us?

Dear Geraldine:

I read in today's paper the letter from "Gyp." This letter expresses my often-voiced convictions exactly. I believe that the great mass of humanity is here through accident and that those who were wanted came because the parents, one or both, yearned for a baby to love and play with—not to help in the work of the oncoming ages.

It is to me an astonishing fact that people will not view facts as they find them, but must forever "kid" themselves along. Did you ever inquire among your middle-aged or elderly friends to find how many would be willing to go back through life from the cradle, exactly as lived before, without power to change anything? I have found none, yet we would gladly read a good book over again, repeat a good show or musical program or a good dinner. Isn't it a fact that in most lives there is, taking it from start to end, more of unhappiness than happiness?

People Who Kid Themselves Through Life

Isn't it a fact that Hope is the great bait that lures us through the vale of tears, only to leave us unsatisfied at the end of the journey?

I know what lots of your readers will think of this philosophy, but I have nothing wrong with my liver. I work outdoors all the time. I don't use tobacco, dope or booze, and I have given lots of investigation and thought to both sides of the case. I believe, though, that things may improve so that in the course of time much of the pain and strife may be eliminated, and that is the only reason for mankind to "carry on."

I have not known anyone who is overjoyed at having arrived in this earthly bliss, or who thanks their parents for conferring upon them that great enjoyment, etc.

Even granting that it is desirable to keep the urn of life aflame, it is not necessary to have too many urns. There are many millions of people, too many in the world now, it would seem, and the fear of race suicide is indeed a groundless fear. Family limitation should be preached from the housetops.

Yours truly,
DISILLUSIONED.

QUALITIES OF THE HATFILED BLOOD

a lightning uppercut that gathered force as it traveled, got it under the other's outstretched arm, barely brazing his mid-section, and effected delivery squarely to the point of the jaw.

Sullivan dropped backwards. As if hit with a pole axe. His skull struck the edge of the walk. He stiffened and lay there . . . A doctor was called. Put in three hours reviving him.

Hatfield had turned at once to his own business. He was getting his cattle under way before he learned the indentity of his annoyer.

"When Yankee Sullivan comes out of this he'll be looking for you, and you'd better keep out of his way," was the tenor of numerous warnings before he was out of sight.

To all of these Hatfield made answer, "I'm not looking for trouble. But the Hatfield strain will never let me run when trouble comes looking for me."

Yankee Sullivan never manifested any earnest desire for another meeting. . .

Now and again some one says to Hatfield at his cabin in Chili gulch, "Don't you think a damage suit would lie against the doctor who operated on your eyelid?"

At this the seasoned plainsman and prospector of ninety-two summers straightens himself—almost as straight as the ramrod in the old squirrel rifle he toted across the plains in 1852—and explains, "There was a bobble in the operation. One eye went out on me. Now the other's going out. In sympathy. . . But it wasn't the doctor's fault. . . Besides, the doctor's an old friend of mine. . . And it isn't in the Hatfield blood to make trouble for a friend."

Movies In a Drop of Water

By E. E. FREE, Ph.D.

THE motion picture has done more than create a new art and a new means of public amusement. It is beginning, scientists believe, to create a new and powerful instrument of scientific research.

From France comes the news that motion pictures of the beating human heart are being used by physicians in the diagnosis of heart disease. Surgeons in this country are using movies to study the motions and abnormalities of diseased joints. At the recent meeting of the American Medical Association in Chicago much enthusiasm was expressed by the attending physicians over a remarkable motion picture showing the normal and abnormal motions of the human stomach—a movie drama of a stomach ache.

Meanwhile the physicians at the University of Chicago have made a motion picture of the explosion of an atom and have discovered thereby a new kind of ray which Dr. Harkins, the discoverer, calls the Z ray. And finally two young scientists of New York City have made a remarkable film study of the lives and loves of the millions of tiny animalcules that dwell in the water of roadside ponds and ditches.

These animalcules have long been known to scientists through the medium of the microscope. If you gather even one drop of the slightly cloudy water from near the bottom of such a pool of standing water and if you focus your microscope on it with a magnification of some six or eight hundred times, you will find it literally teeming with life.

Here will be a marvelously organized little creature with arms like an octopus. Scientists call him a hydra. Next to him will be a small bell-shaped creature with a row of moving hairs around his mouth, which hairs make a vortex in the water and thus bring still tinier specks of plant or animal matter into the hungry maw. Because of the vortex that this creature makes in the water scientists have named him Vorticella.

Darting about between the hydras and vorticellas and a dozen other kinds of creatures you will see a number of the wonderful slipper animalcules, named Paramecium; the submarine of the water-drop world, for he looks for all the world like a snub-nosed undersea boat moving very rapidly about some pressing business of its own.

And on the bottom of your microscope slide you may find, if you are lucky, one or two of the amazing creatures called Amoeba, the lowest known form of animal life: a creature that is [illegible] than a sluggishly flowing drop of jelly, and yet indubitably alive, even possessed in some slight degree of what we might call intelligence.

It is this creature, the amoeba, which represents, most scientists believe, the nearest surviving relative of that primeval slime speck that developed perhaps a billion years ago in the shallow waters of the ancient ocean and which marked the first appearance of life on this terrestrial globe.

And now this wonder world has been put into the movies. Mr. Arthur Carpenter and Mr. Frank Goldman, the two young scientists whom I mention, have devised a complicated but successful equipment to illuminate the water-drop world with light strong enough so that an image can be photographed on a motion picture film, the necessary magnification being obtained by a special lens system replacing the visual microscope.

It has been necessary, of course, to provide arrangements for removing the heat of the illuminating beam. In the ordinary motion picture studio the heat from the lights is terrific. Even human actors quail before it. These tiny and fragile actors in the water drop would shrivel up instantly if they were exposed to a hundredth part of the heat that has to be used for ordinary motion picture work. The complexion of a million-dollar movie star requires no greater care in its protection than Carpenter and Goldman have lavished on their invisible pets beneath their lenses and light beams.

The object of the work, of course, is scientific. The cost of motion pictures like this is far too great for them ever to be undertaken as a commercial enterprise. But there are scientific advantages in possessing a moving record of the ways in which these creatures live. his arms to seize food and to cram it into the mouth that is placed at the end of his body, just between the arms. In a motion picture scientists can study just how these arms work. The dance-like motions of the animal's body that accompany the food-capturing movements of the arms can be studied also. And not the least important item is that all these things can now be demonstrated over and over again to students of biology in the schools. The professor knows just what his class is going to see on the screen; he does not know what he will be able to have his student see under the microscope. The tiny animals are sometimes temperamental. Carpenter had to wait and watch for hours to catch the hydra, for example in the act of inserting a food particle into his mouth.

This hydra possesses, by the way, one of the most wonderful offensive weapons that exist in all nature. Thickly studded over his arms are tiny living cells, each of which contains a coiled up dart like a lasso rope. Projecting outward from each of these dart cells there is a tiny upright hair. Really this hair is a trigger. When the arm of the hydra comes close to any still tinier creature that the hydra fancies for food a touch against these sense hairs releases hundreds of the tiny darts. They instantly fly out like the spears of attacking savages.

In each dart there seems to be a tiny drop of some paralyzing poison. At any rate we can see under the microscope that the creature seized by the hydra's terrible tentacles instantly ceases to struggle and meets his fate as quietly as does the bird hypnotized by the eye of the predatory snake.

The slipper animalcule—the Paramecium—is another creature that is far more complex and competent than you would believe from his tiny size. All over the surface of his body this tiny living submarine possesses a coat of muscular hairs. These hairs sweep back and forth in the water like the oars of an ancient galley. This is how the Paramecium moves about, which he does with really astonishing speed. If he were actually the size of a submarine and retained his present ability to move he would travel some eight or ten miles in a minute; faster than even the fastest airplane, to say nothing of the fastest ship.

This Paramecium happens, also, to be one of the creatures of whom it is really true that marriage makes two individuals into one. When two of these animalcules decide to marry they lie close beside for a while as though they were glued together. Then they really do begin to fuse. The bodies merge into a single body, all the internal organs are reassorted and what was originally two complete and independent individuals becomes one individual, indistinguishable from any ordinary, single one.

But this does not last. Presently the double individual begins to split up again into two. Indeed it may split into many more than two, for each of the two original "children" of the marital fusion usually splits in turn into two; these split again, and so on for perhaps a hundred or two generations. This is how the creature multiplies his kind. And scientists believe that the original act of fusion of the two "parents" is an important part of this reproductive process; that it has some deeply necessary function in preserving the vigor of the animalcular race.

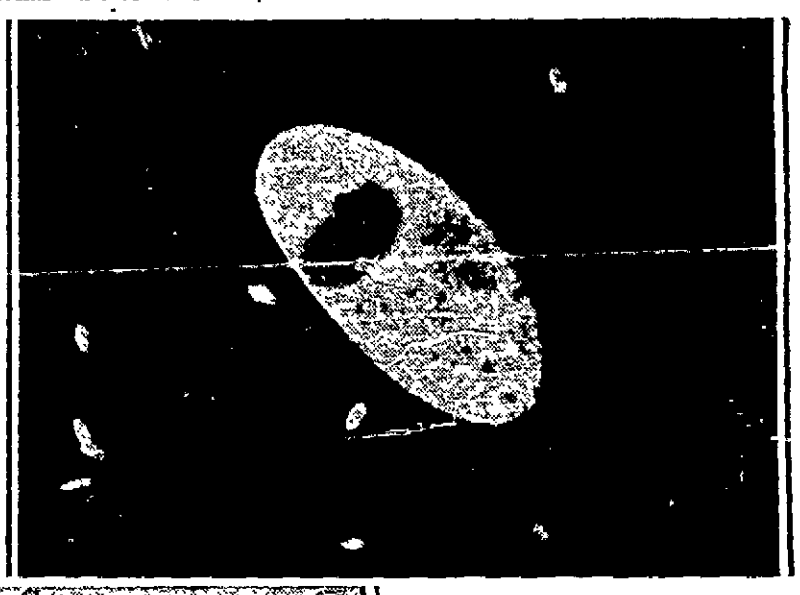
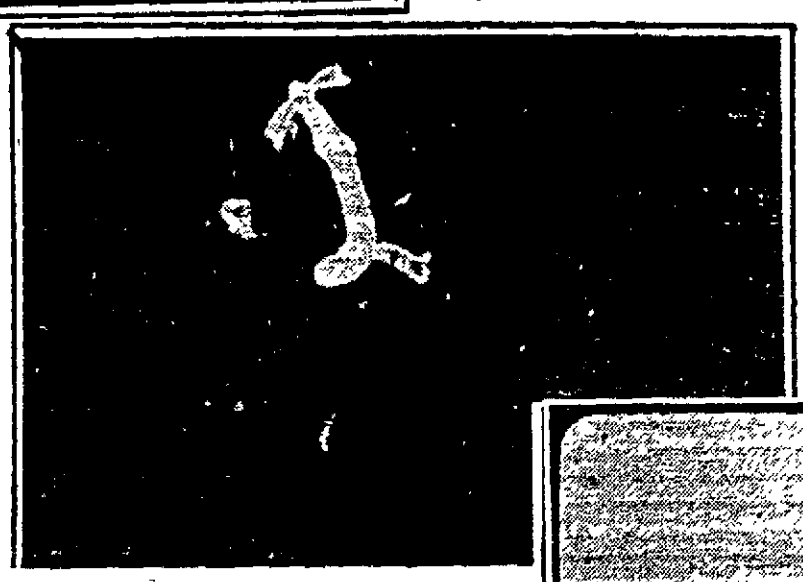
Remarkable microphotograph (on the right) of two young mosquito larvae, tiny creatures that live in the water of stagnant pools and grow up to become one of the most annoying of insect pests.



Above is a microphotographic view of the paramecium or "slipper animalcule," showing the living creature clearly illuminated in white against a dark background. The dark spot inside the animalcule is its contracting vacuole, and the smaller white specks suspended in the water are other paramecia of a smaller species.

Above is a paramecium shown rubbing itself against a tiny plant fiber, this view being obtained by the light shining through the animalcule, the dark specks being the shadows of the creature's internal organs, with smaller—and probably younger—animalcule appearing just below the large one.



To the left is a remarkable hydra, photographed, as was the animalcule above, by the new process of dark background illumination. Four arms are visible around the mouth, and at the lower part of the body there is a young hydra just issuing from the body of the parent as a "bud." These creatures reproduce in this way, much as plants do.

Togo Studies Science of Painless Eating

By Walace Irvin
Illustrated by Herb Roth

TO Editor The TRIBUNE:-

Dearest Sir:—

I shall now tell you the following family scenario which I saw yestdy.

By early a. m. Hon. Mrs. & Mr. Quackmire were setting at brekfast fighting about it.

"If the coffee could borra a little strength from the eggs," corrode Hon. Quackmire, "I would feel more enjoyable to eat."

"You are full of vitamines!" holla Mrs. "In another instant I shall pack my vanity case & go back to Mother."

"But, Sweethot!" he dib. "Are there some objections to my eating painlessly when I enjoy it?"

"You devour entirely too much," she enrage. "You are growing as wide as a pair of twins. Why do you not get beautiful like Hon. Jno. Barrymore, who must live on canned figs to be so slimm?"

"I are no parrot," he shreech. "And I tell you this. Of lately I have noticed hunger strike tendency in this home. From now onwards I require beefstake plus onions for dinner vegetables. Otherwisely I shall get my food from some other curb."

"O Jack, would you dessert me for an onion?" she narrate with weep.

Slam door. He went. Sobs by her.

But one (1) hour later she encroach to my kitchen with powdered expression and say tor sweetly smiling,

"Togo," she explan, "today we shall have six (6) fattish ladies in to lunching. Be sure prepare for them a royalistick meal Following shall be it:

1—Creamed pork soup with Japanese noodles.

3—Buttered beefstake pie, cantaining plenty of heavyweight gravy.

"Manufacture that lunching with axtreme generosity so that each lady can pass her plate 9 times, if necessary," say Hon. Mrs. Quackmire with Czar eyewink while quitting.

Therefore, Mr. Editor, I put all possible steam into my muscles while making food. Hot baking, scorched frying, sweet boiling go on furriously by high-tempered stove. When 1 p. m. arrive up Hon. Kitchen smell richer than a brickliar on Satdy night.

You got to believe how very pride I felt when I hear front-door poeple coming in. Then was time to slam food daintily on platters and carry him into dinning room where 6 ladies set there resembling silk cushions.

Soup were first.

"Too sad Mrs. Quackmire, I are not partaking any soup nowdays," report Mrs. Abraham Migg, a swollen personality with beads.

"Nor me, please."

(Repeat this 4 times more.)

All those rejections come from points of compass while cansiderable Ladies hit spoon like they was afire.

"What is?" require Mrs. C. W. Quackmire with society voice.

"Diet," renig Mrs. Abraham Migg. "Dr. Albatross, who are realy very cute scientist, say I must not sponge up any food cantaining less than 18 per cent ptomaines."

"He are quite a good Dr." pronounced Mrs. Zeno Grass, who had some chins reaching down to her elbow, "but not so intellectual as Dr. Henbane. He say that soup cantain too much hydro-silly acid, unless it have been frozen before cooked.

"By avoiding all soups," define Mrs. Oscar B. Hellroar, a widow with 286 lbs. beauty all over her, "I have been enabled to reduce 3 ozs. per month since July 4. This make it so I can add a lb. occasionally without feeling guilty."

So Hon. Soup walk out and Hon. Fish walk on.

"No fish," narrate Mrs. Zeno Grass with chins. "Dr. Henbane say no fish should be ate unless you catch it yourself. Otherwisely it are app to lose its protagonistic juices."

"Would you get mad," require Mrs. Abraham Migg, "if I lunch out of my own private bottle of tomato catch-up?" She fetch forth red-eyed bottle from pocket & set him by plate. "This solution have been specially manufactured by Dr. Alabatross in such a way that it winds itself around the gastric nerve when swallowed. This give me great pleasure."

"And while we are chattering so merrily," collapse Mrs. Oscar Hellroar, "I shall be forgiven for nibbling a slice of Prepared Concrete which Dr. Smilax recommend for hardening of the gums."

Six fattish lady guests of Mrs. Quackmire so sorry to shy at most honorable bill of fare in favor of prepared concrete and tomato catchup and leave hostess to her stew pans

While all this program was enjoying itself Mrs. C. W. Quackmire, who are no garter snake herself, kep on chawing soup, fish & fry potatus. And when Hon. Buttered Beefstake Pie walk in she took four (4) intense slabs of it. All others talk on merrily while biting away at Catch-up. Concrete Bread and large swags of warm water with lemons in him.

"I do not think I care for some dessert," upspoke Mrs Abraham Migg, "unless you have a few Persian apricots which have been boiled previously in castor oil."

"Yes we have no Persian apricots this noon!" holla Mrs. C. W. Quackmire, looking bayonets at her. "We have American ice cream made by a Japanese and plugged with sweet articles for delight of fatty people. Togo, give me six (6) helpings, and I hope you are all enjoying yourself."

"Oh, we always have such jolly times at yr. house!" nudge Mrs. Hellroar. "As I say to Oscar, Mrs. Quackmire are the sweetest person in the world until she get mad."

"Well," renig Mrs. Quackmire, "if I were not raised a Christian in a very expensive boarding school I should throw my temper right at you this minute."

She chaw sweet ice cream with sour face.

"If you should only go on a Diet," expunge Mrs. Mill, "you would get rid of all that bilious which sometime make you talk like a Russian playright."

"She should go to Dr. Albatross," say Mrs. Migg Saddishly. "He would cure her with the Boiled Hay Treatment,"

"Dr. Albatross are a quacker," dib Mrs. Zeno Grass. "What she need are 1000$ worth of refrigerated sunshine from the office of Dr. Helbane."

"Dr. Spearmint's strained excelsior diet would make a new woman from her," pronounce Mrs. Hellroar.

"I do not care to be a new woman," agnosticate Mrs. Quackmire. "All I wish for is to be my own sweet self, multiplied by fat."

"Very well," pronounce all those lunching gasts with sh & grone. "Since you are so strange about it, we shall allow you to kill yourself with your own stewpans."

Soonly after that they all go home. I think they was pretty mad, for they kiss-kiss Mrs Quackmire 92 times, which are a dangerous sign among ladies.

When at lastly they was gone I observe Hon. Mrs. C. W. Quackmire walking forwards & back, while snipping her fingers like a lion. I observe her through door-crack while acting very Japanese spy.

Pretty soonly she stop and put on another face and enrush to Talefone.

"Give me Mane 21144 and let me know when you have got the wrong number!" she clabber.

While listening unpatiently she got that number pretty o. k.

"I are asking for Hon. C. W. Quackmire," she dictate. "Ah!" This with sweetly smiling. "That you, Dolling? Well, Jack, dearie love dux, this are Sweethot. I tell you something I got a rich siprise for you. Come home early to splandid fattish dinner—maybe I will make you a cocktail first from extra hair tonic. What I got to eat? O heavens, how we shall enjoy it! Creamed pork soup with Japanese noodles. Filigree of sole with totter sauce. Fry potatus. Buttered beefsteak pie. Minced pie with ice cream, molassis, chocolate & horse-chestnuts. What you think that, my own sweet geese?"

Then I hear Hon. Talefone swallowing a gentile sob while saying flirtatiously,

"I love you." (Please ask your printer to repeat this several times.)

Therefore I sneek back to Kitchen feeling cracked in several places.

Hoping you are the same

Yours truly,
HASHIMURA TOGO.

CONVICTED BY USE OF THE MICROSCOPE

It was a remarkable murder mystery that established the fame of Dr. Edmond Locard's crime-detecting instrument. Marie Latell, a beautiful young woman of rather well-to-do family living in a suburb of Lyons, was found one morning strangled to death in her parents' home. The Lyons police were called in, although it was out of their district, but neither they nor the local gendarmes were able to find any clews of value. The clear marks of a man's fingers on the young woman's throat were of no avail because the movement of the strangled woman and of her assassin had smudged these prints.

There was no known motive for the murder. Just when the police were at sea the girl's fiance, Emile Gourbin, a bank clerk in Lyons, attracted attention at the funeral by his excessive weeping and wailing over the girl's death. His conduct caused suspicion among certain veteran police officials and they arrested him on the chance that he might know something of the crime.

He denied having committed the crime or knowing anyone who might have committed it. Moreover, at a preliminary hearing before a magistrate, he established what appeared to be a complete alibi. His friends swore that on the night of the murder, which was known to have occurred shortly before midnight, he had dined with them and had passed the night at their house. They were certain he had remained playing cards until about 1 o'clock and then had retired to his room. The police in the meantime had discovered that Gourbin had been insanely jealous of Mademoiselle Latelle, but they could obtain no direct evidence against him. It seemed certain that when they brought him to trial that he would be promptly acquitted.

Right here Dr. Locard stepped into the case on a call from the Lyons police. The scientist hurried to examine the body of the murdered girl. He discovered that certain slight abrasions on her neck that had been thought to be smudged finger prints were in reality scratches. Under the strong microscope it was plain that the finger nails of the strangler had scraped away the skin on the neck.

Now Dr. Locard had the prisoner brought before him. It was at this point that a very peculiar thing happened. Soon afterwards the eminent scientist was to be seen carefully cleaning the finger nails of the prisoner accused of murder.

Three hours later the police had the evidence that eventually sent Gourbin to the guillotine. This lay in the dirt that had been taken from the man's finger nails. When this was photographed under the microscope there were revealed many blood corpuscles which could not be mistaken for anything else.

Still further evidence accumulated. Even more damning were minute bits of torn flesh. Here was strong circumstantial evidence to convict the man despite his alibi. But there was still nothing to prove that the blood corpuscles and the flesh were those of Mlle. Latelle, so Dr. Locard went farther. More minute examination of the plates from his camera revealed a face powder that the young woman used.

It would have been necessary to produce corroborative evidence to convict the man on the traces of the bits of blood and flesh, but the combination of these with the face powder used by the murdered woman was highly convincing. So much did it impress Gourbin that he broke down and confessed his guilt.—Henri De Becque in Police Magazine.

SO long as the reading public of this country care for good clean stories—stories full of the vigor and joy of life, stories that are free from smut or veiled filth, stories that express the aspirations of the real American—just so long will the writings of Richard Harding Davis be printed and reprinted in the English language. Himself a real American, he wrote of Americans of his own time, for Americans of all future times to read.

FOR over forty years, in one part of the world or another, old man Marshall had served his country as a United States consul. He had been appointed by Lincoln. For a quarter of a century that fact was his distinction. It was now his epitaph. But in former years, when place-hunters demanded his consular sign as a reward for a younger and more aggressive party worker, the ghost of the dead President protected him. "You can't touch him!" the State Department would say; "why, he was appointed by Lincoln!" Old Marshall was a consul after its own heart. His official reports were models of English; full of information, intelligent, valuable, well observed.

"If that old man's been feeding from the public trough ever since the Civil War," protested a "practical politician, "it seems to me, Mr. Secretary, that he's about had his share. Some of us that has done the work, that has borne the brunt—"

"This place he now holds," interrupted the Secretary of State suavely, "is one hardly commensurate with services like yours. I can't pronounce the name of it, and I'm not sure just where it is, but I see that, of the last six consuls we sent there, three resigned within a month and the other three died of yellow-fever. Still, if you insist—"

The practical politician reconsidered hastily.

Of Porto Banos, of the Republic of Colombia, where as consul Mr. Marshall was upholding the dignity of the United States, little could be said except that it possessed a sure harbor.

For 48 hours the yacht Serapis had caused worry. Owing to the presence on board of Senator Hanley, the closest friend of the new President, the man who had made him president, much concern was felt at Washington. To try to pick her up by wireless, the gunboat Newark had been ordered from Culebra, the cruisier Raleigh, with Admiral Hardy on board, from Colon. It was possible she would seek shelter at Porto Banos. The consul was ordered to report.

As Marshall wrote out his answer, the French consul exclaimed with interest:

"He is of importance, then, this senator?" he asked. "Is it that in your country ships of war are at the service of a senator?"

Aiken, the wireless operator, grinned derisively.

"At the service of this senator, they are!" he answered. "They call him the 'king-maker,' the man behind the throne."

"But in your country," protested the Frenchman, "there is no throne. I thought your president was elected by the people?"

"In God's country," Aiken explained, "the trusts want a rich man in the Senate, with the same interests as their own, to represent them. They chose Hanley. He picked out of the candidates for the presidency the man he thought would help the interests. He nominated him, and the people voted for him. Hanley is what we call a 'boss.'"

The Frenchman looked inquiringly at Marshall.

"The position of the boss is the more dangerous," said Marshall gravely, "because it is unofficial, because there are no laws to curtail his powers. Men like Senator Hanley are a menace to good government. They see in public office only a reward for party workers."

Two hours later, the Serapis, showing she had met the hurricane and had come out second best, steamed into the harbor.

Her owner was young Herbert Livingstone, of Washington. He once had been in the diplomatic service, and, as minister to The Hague, wished to return to it.

With him, among other distinguished persons, was the all-powerful Hanley. The kidnapping of Hanley for the cruise, in itself, demonstrated the ability of Livingstone as a diplomat. As yet, Livingstone had not hinted at his ambition. There was no need. To a statesman of Hanley's astuteness, the largeness of Livingstone's contribution to the campaign fund was self-explanatory.

After her wrestling-match with the hurricane, all those on board the Serapis seemed to find in land, even in the swamp land of Porto Banos, a compelling attraction. On reaching shore, they made at once for the consulate. There were many cables they wished to start on their way by wireless; cables to friends, to newspapers, to the government.

At Jose's desk the great senator, rolling his cigar between his tees, was using, to Jose's ecstacy, Jose's own pen to write a reassuring message to the White House. At the consul's desk a beautiful creature, all in lace and pearls, was struggling to compress the very low opinion she held of a hurricane into ten words. On his knee, Henry Cairns, the banker, was inditing instructions to his Wall street office, and upon himself Livingstone had taken the responsibility of replying to the inquiries heaped upon Marshall's desk, from many newspapers.

It was just before sunset, and Marshall produced his tea things, and the young person in pearls and lace, who was Miss Cairns, made tea for the women, and the men mixed gin and limes with tepid water. The consul apologized for proposing a toast

"I regret there is no ice," he said, "but you know the rule of the tropics; as soon as a ship enters port, the ice-machine bursts."

"I'll tell the steward to send you some, sir," said Livingstone, "and as long as we're here—"

The senator showed his concern.

"As long as we're here?" he gasped.

"Not over two days," answered the owner nervously. "The chief says it will take all of that to get her in shape."

The senator gazed blankly out of the window. Beyond it lay the naked coral reefs, the empty sky, and the ragged palms of Porto Banos.

Livingstone felt that his legation was slipping from him.

"That wireless operator," he continued hastily, "tells me there is a most amusing place a few miles down the coast, Las Bocas, a sort of Coney Island, where the government people go for the summer. There's surf bathing and roulette and cafes chantant."

The guests of the Serapis exclaimed with interest; the senator smiled.

Greatly encouraged, Livingstone continued, with enthusiasm:

"And that wireless man said," he added, "that with the launch we can get there in half an hour. We might run down after dinner."

He turned to Marshall.

"Will you join us, Mr. Consul?" he asked, "and dine with us, first?"

Marshall accepted with genuine pleasure.

"But I was wondering about Las Bocas," he said, "if your going there might not get you in trouble at the next port. With a yacht, I think it is different, but Las Bocas is under quarantine—"

There was a chorus of exclaimations.

"There was bubonic plague there," Marshall explained, "or something like it. You would be in no danger from that. It is only that you might be held up by the regulations. Passenger steamers can't land any one who has been there at any other port of the West Indies. The Royal Mail won't even receive any one on board here without a certificate from the English consul saying he has not visited Las Bocas. For an American they would require the same guarantee from me. But I don't think the regulations extend to yachts. I don't wish to deprive you of any of the many pleasures of Porto Banos," he added, smiling, "but if you were refused a landing at your next port I would blame myself."

"It's all right," declared Livingstone decidedly. "It's just as you say; yachts and warships are exempt. Besides, I carry my own doctor, and if he won't give us a clean bill of health, "I'll make him walk the plank. At 8, then, at dinner. I'll send the cutter for you."

Those from the yaucht parted from their consul in the most friendly spirit.

"I think he's charming!" exclaimed Miss Cairns. "And did you notice his novels? They were in every language."

"He's the first of our consuls we've met on this trip," growled her father, "that we've caught sober."

"Sober!" exclaimed his wife indignantly. "He's one of the Marshalls of Vermont. I asked him."

"I wonder," mused Hanley, "how much the place is worth? Hamilton, one of the new senators, has been devilling the life out of me to send his son somewhere. Says if he stays in Washington he'll disgrace the family. I should think this place would drive any man to drink himself to death in three months, and young Hamilton, from what I've seen of him, ought to be able to do it in a week. That would leave the place open for the next man.

"There's a postmaster in my state thinks he carried it." The senator smiled grimly. "He has the consumption, and wants us to give him a consulship in the tropics. I'll tell him I've seen Porto Banos, and that it's just the place for him."

The senator's pleasantry was not well received. Miss Cairns alone had the temerity to speak of what the others were thinking.

"What would become of Mr. Marshall?" she asked.

The senator smiled tolerantly.

"I don't know that I was thinking of Mr. Marshall," he said. "can't recall anything he has done for this administration. You see, Miss Cairns," he explained, in the tone of one addressing a small child, "Marshall has been abroad now for forty years, at the expense of the taxpayers. Some of us think men who have lived that long on their fellow-countrymen had better come home and get to work."

Livingstone nodded solemnly in assent. He did not wish a post abroad at the expense of the taxpayers. He was willing to pay for it.

Just before dinner, the cruiser Raleigh having discovered the whereabouts of the Serapis by wireless, entered the harbor, and Admiral Hardy came to the yacht to call upon the senator. Having paid his respects to that personage, the admiral fell boisterously upon Marshall.

The two old gentlemen were friends of many years. They had met, officially and unofficially, in many strange parts of the world. And throughout dinner the guests of Livingstone found in them and their talk of former days new and delightful entertainment. So much so that when, Marshall having assured them that the local quarantine regulations did not extend to a yacht, the men departed for Las Bocas, the women insisted that he and the admiral remain behind.

It was for Marshall a wondrous evening. In the moonlight, on the cool quarter-deck, they sat, in a half circle, each of the two friends telling tales of which the other was the hero or the victim, "inside" stories of great occasions, ceremonies, bombardments, unrecorded "shirt-sleeve" diplomacy.

"Do you remember that time in Tangier," the admiral urged, "when I was a midshipman, and got into the bashaw's harem?"

"Do you remember how I got you out?" Marshall replied grimly.

"And," demanded Hardy, "do you remember when Adelina Patti paid a visit to the Kearsarge at Marseilles in 1865. George Dewey was our second officer—and you were bowing and backing away from her, and you backed into an open hatch, and she said—my French isn't up to it—what was it she said?"

"I didn't hear it," said Marshall; "I was too far down the hatch."

"Do you mean the old "Kearsarge?" asked Mrs. Cairns. "Were you in the service then, Mr. Marshall?"

With loyal pride in his friend, the admiral answered for him:

"He was our consul-general at Marseilles!"

There was an uncomfortable moment. Even those denied imagination could not escape the contrast could see in their mind's eye the great harbor of Marseilles, crowded with the shipping of the world, surrounding it the beautiful city, the rival of Paris to the north, and on the battleship the young consul-general making his bow to the young Empress of Song. And now, before their actual eyes, they saw the village of Porto Banos, a black streak in the night, a row of mud shacks, at the end of the wharf a single lantern yellow in the clear moonlight.

Later in the evening Miss Cairns led the admiral to one side.

"Admiral," she began eagerly, "tell me about your friend. Why don't they give him a place worthy of him? I've seen many of our representatives abroad, and I know we cannot afford to waste men like that."

"If Henry got his deserts," he exclaimed hotly, "he wouldn't be a consul on this coral reef; he'd be a minister in Europe. Look at me! We're the same age. We started together. When Lincoln sent him to Morocco as consul, he signed my commission as a midshipman. Now I'm an admiral. Henry has twice my brains and the idea of influence, hates men like Hanley, who abuse it."

For a moment the girl hesitated.

"If I spoke to Mr. Hanley," she asked, "told him what I learned tonight of Mr. Marshall, would it have any effect?"

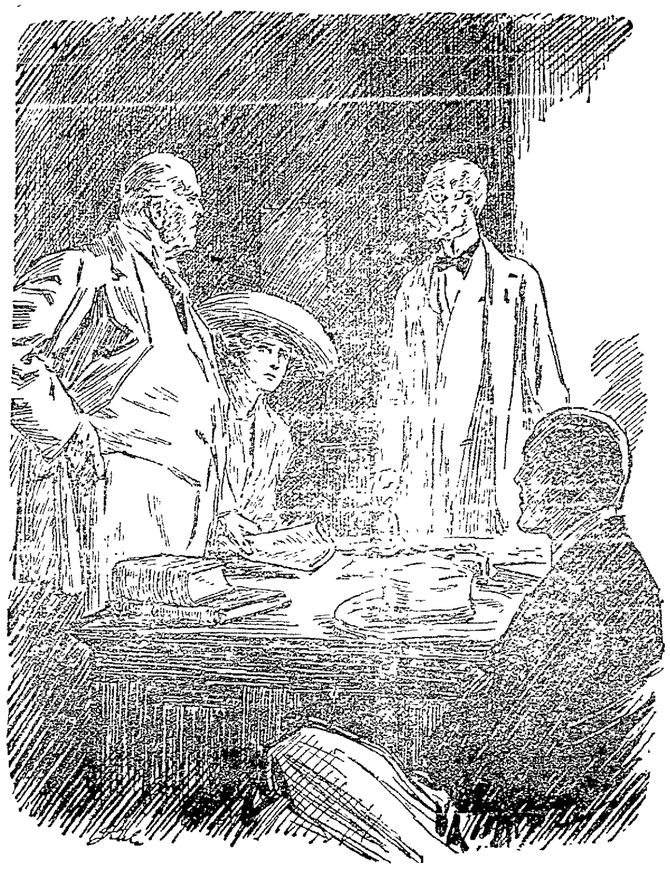
"Don't know how it will affect Hanley," said the sailor, "but if you asked me to make anybody a consul-general, I'd make him an ambassador."

Later in the evening Hanley and Livingstone were seated alone on deck. The visit to Las Bocas had not proved amusing, but, much to Livingstone's relief, his honored guest was now in good humor. He was in a mood flatteringly confidential and communicative.

"People have the strangest idea of what I can do for them," he laughed. It was his pose to pretend he was without authority. "They believe I've only to wave a wand, and get them anything they want. I thought I'd be safe from them on board a yacht."

Livingstone squirmed apprehensively.

"But it seems," the senator went on, "I'm at the mercy of a conspiracy. The woman folk want me to do something for this fellow Marshall. If they had their way they'd send him to the Court of St. James. And old Hardy, too, tackled me about him. So did Miss Cairns. And then Marshall himself got me behind the wheel-house, and I thought he was going to tell me how good he was, too! But he didn't."



"Then I am to understand," he exclaimed, "that you refuse to carry out the wishes of a United States Senator and of the President of the United States?"

As though the joke were on himself, the senator laughed comparatively.

"Told me, instead, that Hardy ought to be a vice-admiral."

Livingstone, also laughed, with the satisfied air of one who cannot be tricked.

"They fixed it up between them," he explained, "each was to put in a good word for the other." He nodded eagerly. "That's what I think."

There were moments during the cruise when Senator Hanley would have found relief in dropping his host overboard. With mock deference, the older man inclined his head.

"Livingstone," he said, "you certainly are a great judge of men!"

The next morning, old man Marshall woke with a lightness at his heart that had been long absent. His old friend had returned. New friends had come into his life and welcomed him kindly. As eager as a boy, he ran to the window. In the harbor lay the pretty yacht, the stately warship. The flag that drooped from the stern of each caused his throat to tighten, brought warm tears to his eyes

While he was dressing, a bluejacket brought a note from the admiral. It invited him to tea on board the warship, with the guests of the Serapis. His old friend added that he was coming to lunch with his consul, and wanted time reserved for a long talk. The consul agreed gladly.

At 9 o'clock, through the open door of the consulate, Marshall saw Aiken, the wireless operator, signalling from the wharf excitedly to the yacht, and a boat leave the ship and return. Almost immediately the launch, carrying several passengers, again made the trip shoreward.

Half an hour later, Senator Hanley, Miss Cairns, and Livingstone came up the water front, and entering the consulate, seated themselves around Marshall's desk. Livingstone was

"I understood the Serapis was disabled," he explained.

"She is," answered Hanley. "So's the Raleigh. At a pinch, the admiral might have stretched the regulations and carried me to Jamaica, but the Raleigh's engines are knocked about, too. I've got to reach Kingston Thursday. The boat leaves there Thursday for New York. At first it looked as though I couldn't do it, but we find that the Royal Mail is due today, and she can get to Kingston Wednesday night. It's a great piece of luck. I wouldn't bother you with my troubles," the senator explained pleasantly, "but the agent of the Royal Mail here won't sell me a ticket until you've put your seal to this."

He extended a piece of printed paper.

The face of the consul had grown grave. He accepted the paper, but did not look at it. Instead, he regarded the senator with troubled eyes.

"It is most unfortunate," he said. "But I am afraid the Royal Mail will not take you on board. Because of Las Bocas," he explained. "If we had only known!" he added remorsefully. "It is most unfortunate."

"Because of Las Bocas?" echoed Hanley. "You don't mean they'll refuse to take me to Jamaica because I spent half an hour at the end of a wharf listening to a squeaky gramaphone?"

"The trouble," explained Marshall, "is this: If they carried you, all the other passengers would be held in quarantine for ten days, and there are fines to pay, and there would be difficulties over the mails. But," he added hopefully, "maybe the regulations have been altered. I will see her captain and tell him—"

"See her captain!" objected Hanley. "Why see the captain? He doesn't know I've been to that place. Why tell him? All I need is a clean bill of health from you. That's all he wants. You have only to sign that paper."

Marshall regarded the senator with surprise.

"But I can't," he said.

"You can't! Why not?"

"Because it certifies to the fact that you have not visited Las Bocas. Unfortunately, you have visited Las Bocas."

The senator seated himself, and stared at Marshall curiously.

"It's like this, Mr. Marshall," he began quietly. "The President desires my presence in Washington, thinks I can be of some use to him there in helping to carry out certain measures to which he pledged himself before his election. Down here, a British steamship line has laid down local rules which, in my case anyway, are ridiculous. The question is, are you going to be bound by the red tape of a ha'penny British colony, or by your oath to the President of the United States?"

The sophistry amused Marshall. He smiled good-naturedly and shook his head.

"I'm afraid, senator," he said, "that way of putting it is hardly fair. Unfortunately, the question is one of fact. I will explain to the captain—"

"You will explain nothing to the captain!" interrupted Hanley. "This is a matter which concerns no one but our two selves. I am not asking favors of steamboat captains. I am asking an American consul to assist an American citizen in trouble, and," he added, with heavy sarcasm, "incidentally, to carry out the wishes of his President."

Marshall regarded the senator with an expression of both surprise and disbelief.

"Are you asking me to put my name to what is not so?" he said. "Are you serious?"

"That paper, Mr. Marshall," returned Hanley steadily, "is a mere form, a piece of red tape. There's no more danger of my carrying the plague to Jamaica than of my carrying a dynamite bomb. You know that."

"I do know that," assented Marshall heartily. "I appreciate your position, and I regret it exceedingly. You are the innocent victim of a regulation which is a wise regulation, but which is most unfair to you. My own position," he added, "is not important, but you can believe me, it is not easy. It is certainly no pleasure for me to be unable to help you."

Hanley was leaning forward, watching Marshall closely.

"Then you refuse?" he said.

"Why?"

Marshall regarded the senator steadily. His manner was untroubled. The look he turned upon Hanley was one of grave disapproval.

"You know why," he answered quietly. "It is impossible."

In sudden anger Hanley rose. Marshall, who had been seated behind his desk, also rose. Hanley spoke; his tone was harsh and threatening.

"Then I am to understand," he exclaimed, "that you refuse to carry out the wishes of a United States senator and of the President of the United States?"

In front of Marshall, on his desk, was the little iron stamp of the consulate. Protectingly, almost caressingly, he laid his hand upon it.

"I refuse," he corrected, "to place the seal of this consulate on a lie."

There was a moment's pause. Miss Cairns clasped her hands unhappily and stared at the floor. Livingstone exclaimed in indignant protest. Hanley moved a step nearer and, to emphasize what he said, tapped his knuckles on the desk. With the air of one confident of his advantage, he spoke slowly and softly.

"Do you appreciate," he asked, "that, while you may be of some importance down here in this fever-swamp, in Washington I am supposed to carry some weight? Do you appreciate that I am a senator and that you are preventing me from serving my people?"

Marshall inclined his head gravely and politely.

"And I want you to appreciate," he said, "that while I have no weight at Washington, in this fever-swamp I have the honor to represent the United States, and as long as that consular sign is over my door I don't intend to prostitute it for you, or the President of the United States, or any one of those eighty millions."

Of the two men, the first to lower his eyes was Hanley. He laughed shortly, and walked to the door. There he turned, and indifferently, as though the incident no longer interested him, drew out his watch.

"Mr. Mashall," he said, "if the cable is working, I'll take your tin sign away from you by sunset."

For one of Marshall's traditions, to such a speech there was no answer save silence. He bowed, and, apparently serene and undismayed, resumed his seat.

But Miss Cairns was not deceived. Under the unexpected blow, Marshall had turned older. His broad shoulders seemed to stoop. In sympathy, her own eyes filled with sudden tears.

Miss Cairns rose and walked to the door. There she turned and looked back.

"I am sorry," she said. And both understood that in saying no more than that she had best shown her sympathy.

An hour later the sympathy of Admiral Hardy was expressed more directly.

"If he comes on board my ship," roared that gentleman. "I'll push him down an ammunition hoist and break his damned neck!"

Marshall laughed delightedly. The loyalty of his old friend was never so welcome.

"You'll treat him with every courtesy," he said. "The only satisfaction he gets out of this is to see that he has hurt me. We will not give him that satisfaction."

But Marshall found that to conceal his wound was more difficult than he had anticipated. When, at tea time, on the deck of the warship, he again met Senator Hanley, and the guests of the Serapis, he could not forget that his career had come to an end. He was made aware of it by the sad, sympathetic glances of the women; by their tactful courtesies; by the fact that Livingstone, anxious to propitiate Hanley, treated him rudely; by the sight of the young officers, each just starting upon a career of honor, and possibly glory, as his career ended in humiliation; and by the big warship herself that recalled certain crises when he had only to press a button and warships had come at his bidding.

At 5 o'clock there was an awkward movement. The Royal Mail boat, having taken on her cargo, passed out of the harbor on her way to Jamaica, and dipped her colors. Senator Hanley, abandoned to his fate, observed her departure in silence.

Livingstone, hovering at his side, asked sympathetically:

"Have they answered your cable, sir?"

"They have," said Hanley gruffly.

"Was it—was it satisfactory?" pursued the diplomat.

"It was," said the senator, with emphasis.

Far from discouraged, Livingstone continued his inquiries.

"And when," he asked eagerly, "are you going to tell him?"

"Now!" said the senator.

The guests were leaving the ship. When all were seated in the admiral's steam launch, the admiral descended the accommodation ladder and himself picked up the tiller ropes.

"Mr. Marshall," he called, "when I bring the launch broadside to the ship and stop her, you will stand ready to receive the consul's salute."

Involuntarily, Marshall uttered an exclamation of protest. He had forgotten that on leaving the warship, as consul, he was entitled to seven guns. Had he remembered, he would have insisted that the ceremony be omitted. He knew that the admiral wished to show his loyalty, knew that his old friend was now paying him this honor only as a rebuke to Hanley. But the ceremony was no longer an honor. Hanley had made of it a mockery. But without a scene, it now was too late to avoid it. The first of the seven guns had roared from the bow, and, as often he had stood before, as never he would stand again, Marshall took his place at the gangway of the launch. His eyes were fixed on the flag, his gray head was uncovered, his hat was pressed above his heart.

For the first time since Hanley had left the consulate, Marshall fell into sudden terror lest he might give way to his emotions. Indignant at the thought, he held himself erect. His face was set like a mask, his eyes were untroubled. He was determined they should not see that he was suffering.

Another gun spat out a burst of white smoke, a stab of flame. There was an echoing roar. Another and another followed. Marshall counted seven, and then, with a bow to the admiral backed from the gangway.

And then another gun shattered the hot, heavy silence. Marshall, confused, embarrassed, assuming he had counted wrong, hastily returned to his place. But again before he could leave it, in savage haste a ninth gun roared out its greeting. He could not still be mistaken. He turned appealingly to his friend. The eyes of the admiral were fixed upon the warship. Again a gun shattered the silence. Was it a jest? Were they lauching at him. Marshall flushed miserably. He gave a swift glance toward the others. They were smiling. Then it was a jest. The face of Livingstone alone betrayed a like bewilderment to his own. But the others, who knew, were mocking him.

For the thirteenth time a gun shook the brooding swamp land of Porto Banos. And then, and not until then, did the flag crawl slowly from the mast-head. Mary Cairns broke the tenseness by bursting into tears. But Marshall saw that every one else, save she and Livingstone, were still smiling. Even the blue-jackets in charge of the launch were grinning at him. And then from the warship, unchecked, came, against all regulations, three long, splendid cheers.

Marshall felt his lips quivering, the warm tears forcing their way to his eyes. He turned beseechingly to his friend. His voice trembled.

"Charles," he begged, "are they laughing at me?"

Eagerly, before the other would answer, Senator Hanley tossed his cigar into the water, and, scrambling forward, seized Marshall by the hand.

"Mr. Marshall," he cried, "our President has great faith in Abraham Lincoln's judgment of men. And this salute means that this morning you are our new minister to The Hague. I'm one of those politicians who keeps his word. I told you I'd take your tin sign away from you by sunset. I've done it!"

Girls Throw Off Tyranny of Rodents

By HELEN HARRIS

GIRLS, rats and mice!

Is such a combination possible? Has the new woman, the "modern girl," the American flapper become immune to the tyranny of the rodents that used to chase them to safety on a chair?

Out at the University of California a half a dozen pretty bobbed haired girls work in a literal den of rats and mice. The creatures crawl over their arms and into their pockets. And these bewildering young women do not scream. They merely brush the rats aside and continue their work.

As long as desks have occupied offices and hosiery has been made of silk, the feminine world has had one common horror and abhorrence—a tiny scuttling bit of fur called a mouse, or perhaps a more obviously disagreeable scuttle, namely a rat.

Vaudeville actors and comic sheets have worked this weakness overtime in their various witty sallies. In fact, the story has been handed down for such a long period of time it has actually become a tradition, and at the sight of the small offender, fair maidens young and sylphlike or fat and forty, immediately scream and leap to safety.

In most cases this is done in a decidedly mechanical sort of way, and has thereby given rise to comment and discussion among the sterner sex.

What is the reason for this inborn loathing quite as poignant as the instinct between the proverbial cat and dog?

In the anatomy building at the University of California under Dr. Evans I have found a half dozen girls, young and quite attractive enough to be entertaining different sorts of attention from that of rats, and yet they have chosen to give hours each day to this most unusual occupation. One of the girls, Miss Harriet McCurvy, took me through the two large rooms, the walls of which are lined with hundreds of small wire cages reaching to the cealing, and housing eighteen hundred rats.

I have never seen so many rats! Rats of every size and color, from wee hairless babies to old sires. Some of them were white with pink eyes, and they were not really very different from so many tiny rabbits.

All sorts of interesting experiments are going on. The girls prepare certain foods, leaving out specified ingredients and noting the effects in contrast to other rats fed with different combinations.

Of course there have been rat colonies in this country before where hitherto men have worked with these animals in preference to a more agreeable sort. The blood corpuscles being not unlike a human's blood, affords valuable tests in the way of finding medical cures for many complicated diseases. Several of these places are in the east but one which has been familiar to us for the past twenty years is at the Leland Stanford university.

There are many excellent reasons why rats, of all creatures, should be chosen for this work. Rats are unbelievably hardy. Nothing seems to kill them unless it is mal-nutrition. This condition is sometimes brought on purposely by diet tests.

The little ones can be handled with amazing roughness with apparently no ill effects. Quite unlike the young of most animals, which usually die with even an over amount of careful handling, these lusty youngsters generally survive an accidental dropping now and then.

They multiply with appalling rapidity; a litter every six weeks, and being born to captivity they are rather tame and easy to handle. All these points are extremely important when choosing animals for labratory work.

The girls keep them in immaculate cages, clean wood shavings on the floor, white china foodcups and scientific watering and feeding, so it is little wonder they give a more agreeable aspect than their venomous brothers of the water front.

Perhaps this feminine repulsion has been born of the instinctive shrinking we all have at the suggestion of any filthy or disease bearing animal coming in contact with us. These rats are, of course, entirely free from any such menaces, which would tend to remove a portion of the repugnance. But even bearing this in mind many of them are on certain diets that make their fur separate and take on a mangy appearance and one would think decidedly repellant to touch. But not at all! They

Young women students at the University of California shatter tradition by nonchalance with which they grab rats bare-handed at laboratory where creatures are propagated scientific girl workers seem utterly devoid of antipathy. And in a most efficient, systematic manner they carry on the work prescribed by Dr. Evans.

It is quite a different matter looking on all this through stout wire netting, but Miss Helen Heavey and Miss Mildred McKay do not limit their interest to any such barriers. They pick the rats up, often having a tussle as the animal squirms and squeaks, and proceed to weigh, measure and test them.

All this is done with only a pair of fair hands, that scorn the use of tongs. The experiment is purely one of nutrition. Dr. Evans feels that this study will some day have human application.

As a certain phase of biological chemistry the matter of fertility and sterility has been a question debated in vain by generations from the simplest to the most complex mentalities. Not that it will not continue to worry people, because it doubtlessly will for a long period of time, but this much is certain, having been solved. There is a certain combination of foods which Dr. Evans uses that can and has rendered the rat absolutly sterile; and then a curative combination has been supplied and the rat has again become fertile. It is only a beginning, to be sure, in rectifying the great mystery, but a very vital start.

It is diverting to watch these girls at their laboratory duties. They are all clad in white and for the most part are bobbed haired. They cheerfully clean cages, feed and water the rats. Their movements are quick. Taking care of hundreds of rats each day seems in no way to affect their dispositions. The rats are marked by tiny nicks made in their ears when they only a week or so old. Each has its own individual sign that corresponds to its specified chart.

Every day each of the eighteen hundred rats is taken from its cage. They are handled about six at a time and carried in a large tin tray to the laboratory table. This is equipped with scales and microscope. Each rat is weighed, measured and has its blood tested before being returned. One girl does this while another writes the results down on dozens of charts, which are kept as a nurse's record for her patient and with the same care. It might be noted that while one rat is being attended to the other five are running about at random, poking their noses into the pockets of the girls' aprons and often crawling up on their arms. These are merely pushed aside and the weighing and testing go on.

The food is prepared by one group of girls who work under a dietitian. Each rat has a number on its chart to correspond and in this way perfect order and system is carried on. The diets for sterility are what is known as pure rations, consisting of varied proteins, fats and carbohydrates. These have been conceived after long study and experimenting. Other girls attend to the breeding cages. Still other girls manage the summing up of the statistics.

Rats are found in all parts of the world now and differ strangely in breeds. He was a stocky, thick-skulled, short-tailed little beast in Britain. From India came the long-tailed, powerful variety that practically exterminates all other varieties in his vicinity and has proven such a peril in carrying plague. Their natures are naturally fierce and cunning, and they are always the rovers.

I asked one brown-eyed miss what were her feelings and fears when she first began the work.

"Oh, a certain feeling of repugnance," she laughed. "But you get over that shortly."

Another remarked that it had never occurred to her to be afraid.

A third looked at me curiously and said, "Why be frightened over anything so harmless?"

PHILIPPINE ISLAND TAX ON HEIRS

If you are a very rich man don't go over to the Philippines to die, unless you want to play a scurvy joke on your heirs.

If, for instance, you die in Manila, leaving an estate of $10,000,000 to relatives in the United States, it might easily happen that none of them would ever get a cent.

The Philippine government and the government of the United States, between them, impose death and inheritance duties which amount to 104 per cent of the total value of the estate. And four individual states of the Union stick inheritance taxes of their own on top of that.

What the heirs might finally get out of that big windfall are bills for something more than the estate amounted to—and that after the $10,000,000 has been all eaten up by the two big governments. Total taxes equal 234 per cent.

It is, in fact, fast getting to be more expensive to die than to keep on living. A man who wants to leave his heirs a good-sized estate is obliged nowadays to select his securities and his place of demise with great discretion.

A bank director died recently in Boston, leaving $3,000,000. The federal government and no less than seventeen different states bit big pieces out of the wad. The total taken in inheritance taxes was $691,000. But that is only 23 per cent, and many people will agree that is not too much.

Now consider what happens to smaller estates. A man died in Arkansas—an old bachelor—and left his estate of $100,000 to an old aunt, who had been a mother to him.

The state of Arkansas started the ball rolling by taking out an inheritance tax of $17,400. The national government was satisfied with a modest slice of $500.

The estate was mostly composed of stocks in five companies, organized in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Illinois. So those four states collected $6385 in inheritance taxes on those stocks. The total inheritance tax paid by the $100,000 estate was $24,375—a trifle over 24 per cent.

Even if an estate is very small the complicated inheritance tax laws of the several states often result in putting the executor to great expense. It is frequently found impossible to transfer stock left in an estate without first satisfying the authorities of one or more states that the stock is not taxable. In one case on record it cost $13 in fees to job holders to make certain there was no inheritance tax on a single share of stock worth $40. In another officially recorded instance an executor had to get waivers from the tax authorities of six widely separated states before he could sell the stock of a single corporation.

All the states but Alabama and Florida and the District of Columbia now collect inheritance taxes. The rates vary from 1 per cent to 40 per cent in certain cases. Over in the Philippines they rise as high as 64 per cent.

So the least costly place to die for a very rich man is Alabama, Florida or the city of Washington. Maryland isn't so expensive. There is a flat rate of only 5 per cent.

To distribute an estate among the heirs just before the death of the owner will not work, for the courts have decided that in such cases the property so transferred must pay inheritance taxes. If one gives away his property years before his death, but lives on the income, the inheritance taxes must still be paid.

Some states provide a reward for informers who bring to their attention estates which might otherwise escape death and inheritance duties. And others have regular attorneys who study the assets of every considerable estate in the courts. It is not easy to beat the law.

There is now growing up a new class of experts whose job it is to show men with property to leave behind them how to avoid as many of these taxes as possible.

One suggestion is that rich men pick out a good state to live—and, especially, to die—in. Colonies of rich tax-dodgers in Alabama, Florida and Washington city may, therefore, be expected.—Baltimore Sun.

Curing Deafness by Radio

By ANDREW COCHRAN.

RADIO can be used to cure deafness in mild cases and partially restore the hearing in even sever cases where the cardrum has not been destroyed.

Such is the statement of Dr. Hayward G. Thomas of Oakland, who declares that the principal of applying vibration to the ear to stimulate the hearing is an old one.

The prescription is simple enough. Apply earphones to the auditory organs and listen to the loudest and most raucous concerts, speeches, bedtime stories and propaganda sermons for two or three hours. Take the treatment once or twice daily for a year or two and if you are not a total wreck at the end of the period, you will then be able to hear all the uncouth noises about you just like a normal person.

Father can no longer plead deafness when mother calls for someone to bring in coal or fix the chimney. If he does, the family may tie him to a chair with the earphones on his head. Sister will have to find some other excuse for not helping with the dishes than, "I didn't hear you call, ma. Brother out on the lot playing baseball will have to hearken to the dinner call or he may be placed in the family radio cell.

Thus the new discovery promises to turn our well-ordered society topsy-turvy.

The worst hardships will be worked on the moving picture comedians, who depend upon the funny old fellow with the ear trumpet for a lot of their stock hokum.

Seriously speaking the use of radio is being heralded as something that may eventually reduce deafness in the United States by from 50 to 80 per cent.

Deafness generally starts in childhood, according to Dr. Thomas. Tonsils, adenoids, the appendix, measels, whooping cough, scarlet fever cause a catarrhal condition which impairs the very fine mechanism of the ear until by the time he has reached middle age, he is "hard of hearing." When he reaches this stage, he drifts into the habit of not trying to hear. Like any other part of the body, when the organs of hearing are not used, they soon become useless. So deafness develops.

How can radio remedy this?

In order to answer that question, you must understand something of the construction of the ear. Most of us are familiar with the principle of the telephone transmitter. Just inside the mouth of the transmitter is a thin diaphram, which vibrates as you speak against it. These vibrations are conveyed electrically along a wire to a place many miles away and are reproduced on another diaphram, which vibrates with just the same frequency as the one stimulated by your voice.

Now just inside the ear also is a diaphram, which vibrates when sound strikes it, like that in the telephone transmitter.

But instead of the sound being carried into the head electrically, the action is mechanical. Three bones, called "hammer, anvil and stirrup" perform this function. The outer diaphram of the ear vibrates, it moves the "hammer," which strikes the "anvil" and this moves the "stirrup." The stirrup is attached to a second or inner ear drum or diaphram upon which the original voice vibrations are magnified by the action of the three bones. This inner ear drum communicates its movements to the "Organ of Corti," a bundle containing thousands of live nerves, which connect to the brain through the highly important auditory nerve.

Thus when someone speaks to you, the sound waves from his throat travel through the air until they strike the ear drum or diaphram, the drum vibrates, causing the hammer to hit the anvil, the anvil to move the stirrup and the stirrup to communicate this movement somewhat strengthened to the inner ear drum. This ear drum sends the same stimuli into the "organ of Corti," which forwards it through the auditory nerve to the brain.

Now when mucous is secreted into this mechanism because of colds or a catarrhl condition, it clogs up the apparatus. Sometimes the process is slow and takes place over a period of years. The hammer, anvil and stirrup become stuck together. The ear drum loses its resiliency. Deafness follows.

Because of the delicacy of the construction of the interior of the ear, surgeons cannot pry around inside of it and scrape the connections clean. Medical men finally decided that the only way to remedy the condition was to cause the hammer, anvil and stirrup to work in response to loud sounds. Vibrators were developed. Very frequently they hurt the ears. It was impossible to give the treatment over a long period of time.

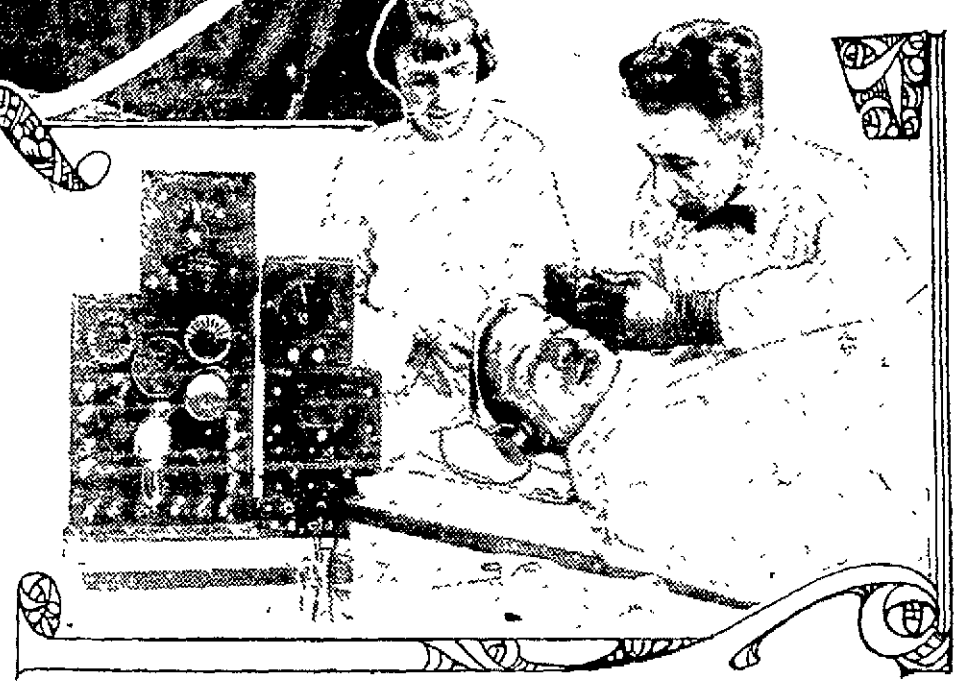
If Father pleads that he cannot hear when Mother requests him to bring in the coal the members of the family may tie him to a chair and adjust earphones to make him reasonable

Then came the radio. Loud radio signals coming in over ear phones, started the three little bones to jiggling back and forth. Jazz tunes "jazzed 'em up," just like they do the nervous systems of our moderns. It was the best exercise in the world for the ear, doctors discovered. It wore the mucous off the connections and limbered up old joints.

"One of the biggest advantages of radio in this respect," says Dr. Thomas, "is the ease with which the cure can be applied. Very few people would sit for long hours with a vibrator on their head but thousands are glad to use the earphones over long periods of time when they can get a good concert or an instructive lecture.

"The fine part of it is that the cure can be taken right in the home with the regular radio equipment, without additional expense and with the minimum of discomfort to the patient.

"The principle involved has proved so successful indeed, in treating deafness that some of our big electrical manufacturers are turning out instruments costing $2000 and $3000, with which to measure the extent of deafness and to cure it."



You don't have to shout at the old man above when you speak to him through a radio microphone. Although so deaf that he can hardly hear words yelled into his ear, he easily distinguishes the sentences spoken over the radio. Even in hospitals radio receivers are placed over the ears of patients, as shown below, for the purpose of stimulating the auditory apparatus.

MOVIES IN A DROP OF WATER

Inside the body of this slipper animalcule there is a very curious organ called the contractile vacuole. We do not know just what it is or how it works. Carpenter and Goldman have succeeded in getting motion pictures of it in action and these pictures are now being studied in an attempt to determine some of the secrets of its action.

It seems to have the duty of getting rid of waste products from the animalcule's body. It is not improbable that its curious contractile power is a forerunner in the evolutionary series of the contractile power of our stomach, a power so important to human digestion.

This vacuole may be seen as the dark spot on one of the photographs of the Paramecium reproduced on this page. What it does is this: Gradually it swells up inside the creature. It contains a watery fluid. Suddenly, after it has attained a certain size, it contracts violently and bursts through the skin of the animal. But this does no harm. The skin immediately heals itself. Then presently the vacuole begins to distend itself again with the watery fluid and the whole cycle is repeated.

When this cycle of expansion and discharge stops the observer knows that that particular animalcule is sick and about to die. His digestive system has got out of order, and with the water-drop creatures indigestion is a fatal disease.

The simplest form of digestion in this microscopic world is that of the lowest creature of all, the jelly-like amoeba. These amoebas are creeping creatures not swimming ones. They crawl slowly along the bottom of the water or over the surfaces of twigs or roots that are submerged in it. And when they come to a particle of food they merely wrap their bodies around it.

In the amoeba whose portrait is reproduced here you can see a small arm being pushed out by the creature. The front of this arm is of clear, transparent jelly. Back of this, the main body of the creature contains many opaque granules that make the body more or less cloudy.

When the amoeba wants to swallow a food particle he merely pushes out two of these arms. They meet on the far side of the food particle and engulf it. Then the living matter of the amoeba digests it. If it proves to be something indigestible the amoeba is not especially concerned. His body flows on and leaves the useless particle behind.

This amoeba is the simplest living animal. He is extremely simple even when compared with his more educated companions in the water-drop world, the hydra and the slipper animalcule.

Nevertheless he possesses the beginnings of the great gifts of life that we enjoy. His creeping ability is the beginning of muscular movement; his recognition of food is the beginning of the senses; his utilization of the food after it has been engulfed inside his body is

Ride for Nickel

While New York boasts of the longest ride for a nickel over fourteen miles of subways, it also has the shortest ride for the same sum, and incidentally the most expensive bit of transportation to be found anywhere, not excluding toll bridges.

There may be some dispute as to whether the municipal ferries pay their way with a 5-cent fare, but there is no doubt that there is one ferry that turns in a handsome profit at that rate.

This is the ferry from the end of Emmons avenue, Sheepshead Bay, to the nameless and uncharted paths of Plum Beach. During the summer, it is estimated by persons living in the vicinity, there are some fifteen hundred inhabitants on Plum Beach. They cannot be called residents, because they are squatters or campers. These latter designations are derived from persons in the vicinity, most of whom become rather taciturn when questioned regarding details of their occupation of Plum Beach.

However, whatever their status and regardless of whom they pay rent, for several months every summer the greater portion of these inhabitants pay 5 cents a day each way for a ferry ride that in low tide does not extend further than fifteen feet. When the tide is low it is not at all, but a walk from one end of the ferry—a rowboat—to the other. During high tide there is a ride, with an oarsman as the motive power, of perhaps one hundred feet.—New York Times.

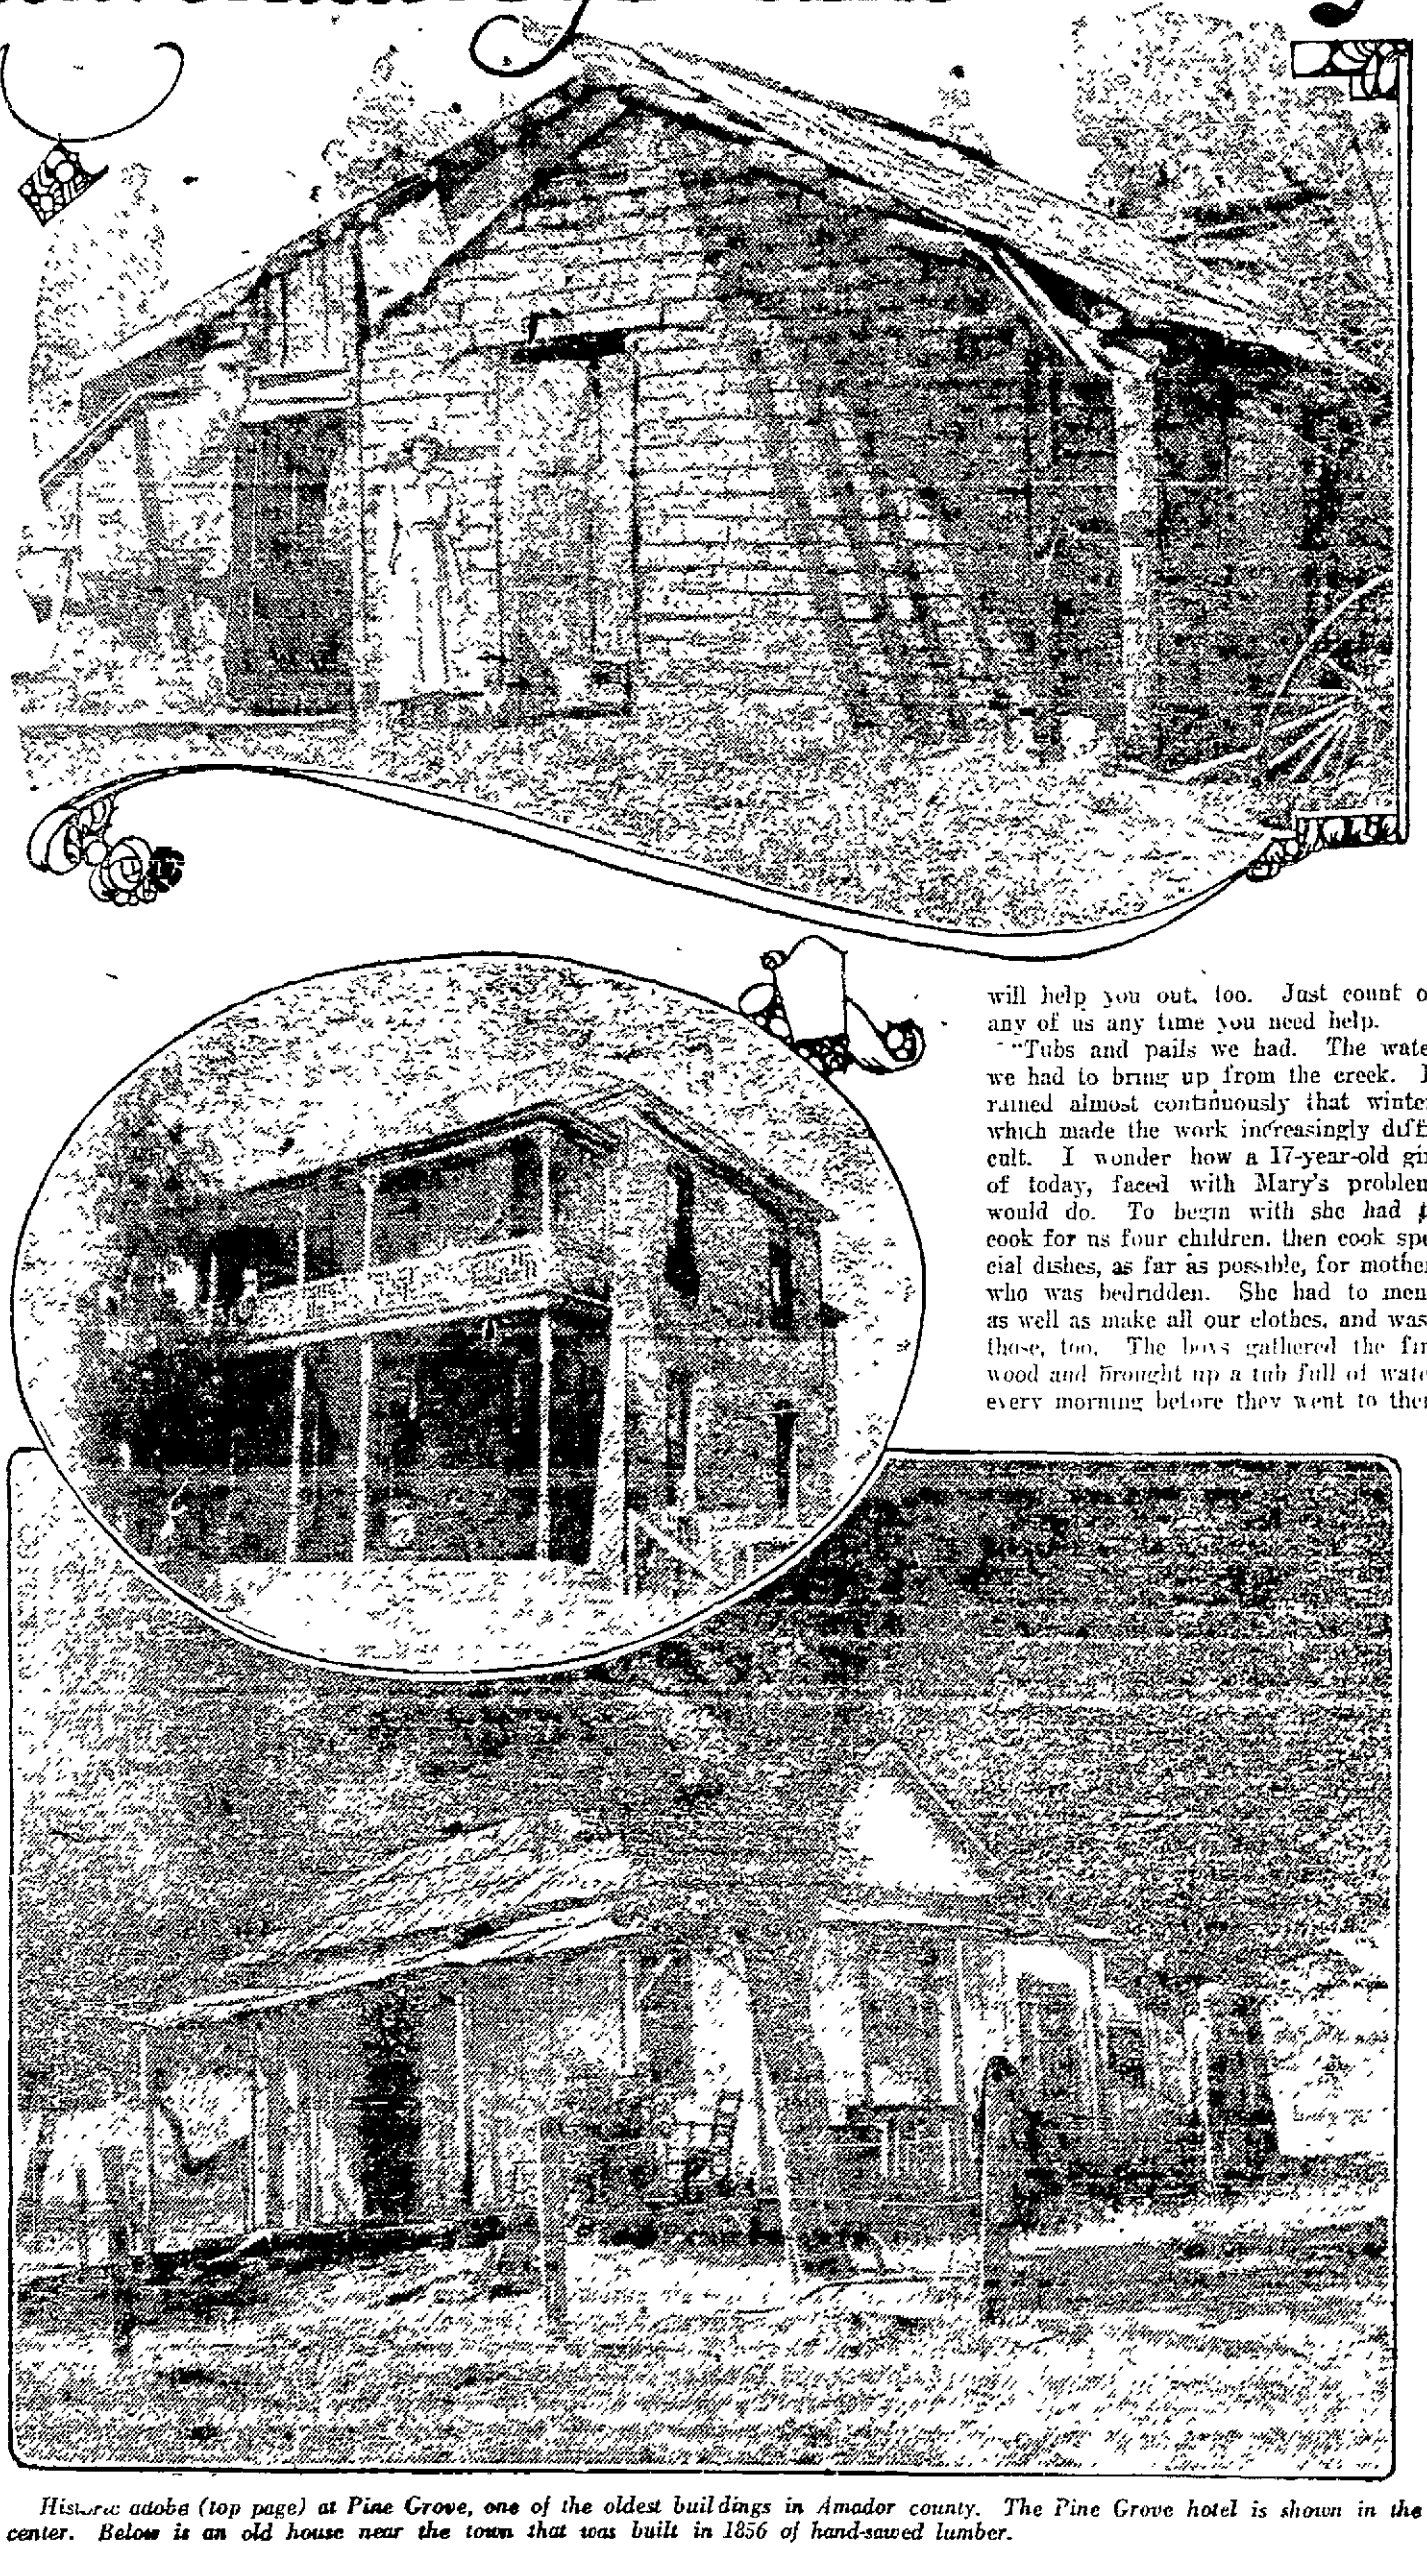
Further Adventures of Delia Lowry

By Harry C. Peterson



"YOU wouldn't think to look at me that the miners would walk from five to ten miles just to get me to wash their handkerchiefs and then pay me 50 cents apiece for each one I washed, now would you?"

Delia Lowry leaned back in her chair and laughed at the recollection. "But you see, little 6-year-old girls with stringy pigtails hanging down their back were not very plentiful in Hangtown in '49; in fact I was the only one and the whole IT, but I didn't realize the fact then, for the getting of money was a serious problem with what was left of the Caleb Luttrell family that winter."

It was my second evening's visit with Mrs. Lowry at Pine Grove, up in Amador county, she was resuming her story where she had left off the night before. On that first trip across the Plains her mother had been very ill, the trip had been one of great hardships, and they were not yet in California when a little baby was born; born at a time when medical attendance was impossible; born during a period of great mental anguish on the part of the mother trying to bear up under the double load of trying to take care of her little children as the tired oxen plodded slowly along towards their destination; mental anguish intensified by the constant danger of attack by Indians, and physical torture that only a springless prairie schooner bumping along over rocky ground could inflict under such circumstances. Every possible consideration was shown the expectant mother, all but one—that train of ox teams had to be constantly on the move from daylight till dark and often far into the night. That was a condition that none could help, none could alleviate, for it was nearing winter and the cruel Sierra were yet to be scaled. It is not surprising that the baby died at birth, that the mother continued suffering agonies for months afterwards. The young father, Caleb Luttrell, did everything in his power to help ease her sufferings. All day long he trudged alongside the slowly moving oxen, at night he prepared camp, rustled up sage brush and buffalo chips with which to make the fire and cook food for her and the little children; food that was fit only for strong healthy people, not invalids. Far into the night he looked after her comfort, getting but a couple of hours' rest, and often not that.

Coming over the Sierra he was exposed to the heavy rains and the exhaustion of trying to get his wagons through the great rocky defiles. When he arrived at Placerville he had already contracted a severe cold. Physically he was unable to weather the attack of pneumonia that laid him low the minute he had brought his family safe through to Hangtown. Winter was upon them, they had no money to pay for rooms at the old El Dorado Hotel, which in itself was but a large log cabin.

That night the father was put to bed there: that night word went out among the miners that a family had just arrived from the east with father and mother both very ill, that they needed a house to live in, but no houses were there that they could get.

Daylight the next morning found scores of miners busy chopping down trees, making shakes, and gathering cobble stones. Within forty-eight hours they had that house built and moved the stricken family in. It was a log cabin, but at that time one of the best in the diggings. The little family of two girls and two boys with their sick parents were moved in and everything possible done for them, but the father passed away the next day.

A mother with four young children, unable to scarcely lift her head from the pillow, in a strange land lacking conveniences of any kind, almost destitute, faced a problem that few ever face these modern days of Community Chests and relief societies. Mrs. Lowry said:

"After father was buried we gathered together in our little cabin, four sobbing children trying to comfort mother, four sobbing children trying to be brave in the face of what seemed overwhelming disaster. Father had been our all, he was ever cheerful, ever optimistic. He had fired our imaginations with the great wealth we should get once he began mining. Now he was dead. There were but my two brothers, one 15, one 17, and my sister, Mary, then but 16, and myself, a little lassie but 6 years old.

"We talked and we cried until far into the night. The future looked bleak and dismal, as bleak and dismal as the [illegible] and gusts of cold wind. My two brothers and Mary got over by the fire and we talked it over. It would take months before we could get words to our relatives in the east of our plight, and in the meantime we had to live. Charitable miners would have helped us out as they did others later, but father was born in Kentucky, and that Kentucky blood in us came to the front and we determined that we would see our way through some how.

"And here let me say a word for the gambler, and when I say gambler, I mean the men who played the game straight, or at least as straight as any gambling could have been in those days. I noticed that modern writers decry the virtues of these early men of fortune, that they claim that Bret Harte idealized his characters. Maybe he did in some cases but for everyone he mentions there were dozens who could have come up to his conception of them and did come up whenever the occasion made it possible. His money came easily, he was generally very [illegible] in time of need and would give his last dollar to help a destitute family. They were among the first to offer aid to us and I know that all the time we were in Placerville they very quietly and unobtrusively did all they could to help us four children to make good when they learned that we refused to accept charity as long as we could make a living by working.

"Sister Mary was not overly strong, but the trip across the Plains had toughened her up pretty well, as it had the rest of us youngsters. That night we decided that we would take in washing to start with. The next morning Mary went up town and talked to one of the storekeepers about it. He told her:

"Little girl, every man in this camp sympathizes with you and we admire your pluck. We are willing to help you in any way we can to get along. I will stake you to anything you may need to start with, and I guarantee that you will have all you can do, much more in fact, so don't over do it at the beginning. You send your brothers up here and I will see that they get something to do that will help you out, too. Just count on any of us any time you need help.

"Tubs and pails we had. The water we had to bring up from the creek. It rained almost continuously that winter, which made the work increasingly difficult. I wonder how a 17-year-old girl of today, faced with Mary's problem, would do. To begin with she had to cook for us four children, then cook special dishes, as far as possible, for mother, who was bedridden. She had to mend as well as make all our clothes, and wash those, too. The boys gathered the fire wood and brought up a tub full of water every morning before they went to their work. The rest of the water used every day Mary had to carry up pail by pail. The miners, the minute they learned what was up, came in with their shirts and handkerchiefs, not because they could not wash them themselves, but because they wanted to help us out. This we did not realize until later. The prevailing price was 50 cents for each garment, regardless of its size, and that was what Mary charged them. They paid it willingly, and many a shirt came back to our little laundry that hed scarcely even been soiled.

"I was helping Mary wash some handkerchiefs that first day when a bushy-faced miner came in. He looked at me for a minute, then tears came into his eyes, and he mumbled to himself, "Well, well!" and went away. Immediately after that every miner that came separated his handkerchiefs from his other laundry and handed them to me and said:

"Look here, little girl, you wash the handkerchiefs and for every one I will give you 50 cents."

"You can't imagine how many handkerchiefs those fellows had to have washed after that. I washed as many as I could, and when no one was around Mary washed the rest. Owing to the rain Mary had to hang all her washing in the cabin to get it dry. That made her work doubly hard, but she was a brave little girl and never flinched.

"The miners were so good to us. They would fix it with strangers to stop at the cabin, leave a few packages with the remark, 'Just look after these a couple of days, will you? If I am not back by that time, it means that I've gone on to some other camp and you give them to Sis.' 'Sis' was me. Some called me Delia, but most of them called me just Sis. Then the miners taught me how to look for gold. I used an old iron spoon and I dug out a lot of gold just from the crevices in the rocks. I particularly noticed that when a bunch of miners would direct me where to hunt for gold that I always found plenty of it right where they said they were sure I would find it. Then they would tell me what a lucky kid I was and wish that they could have such luck. Since then I have my suspicions that much of that gold was planted there for me to find.

"The miners took my two brothers in carry pay dirt up to their rockers for them. For this they gave each of the boys an ounce of gold a day. When not working for the miners they hunted for themselves and were very lucky. One day my brother Jasper was walking along the creek searching for a likely place when he spotted a glitter in a deep hole. He plunged right in and gathered up a whole handful of nuggets from one little spot.

"You must remember that we used no coin in those days, just gold dust; so when a miner came to pay for his laundry he would tell me, 'Sis, you get that saucer in there, will you, so I won't spill any of this stuff?' And then he would empty into the saucer enough gold to pay for his laundry and a lot more. They fudged on us every opportunity, but always in our favor. Not once in all that time did any man ever make an improper remark to sister Mary.

"I often wonder how we ever lived through that winter. Across our cabin Mary had strung all the clothes lines she could, and day and night these were full of damp shirts drying, day and night the air was thick with the odor of drying woolen cloth. I had special little clothes lines for all my handkerchiefs. On top of it all Mary had to do all her cooking over the fire in the fireplace, for we had no stove. Down near the creek the boys had fixed a place for heating water for washing when the weather was good. Otherwise Mary had to heat her wash water in the fireplace, too.

"When the miners built the house for us they had no way of getting boards for flooring, so all we had was a dirt floor, and sometimes this would be all muddy from the splashing wash water. We used to hoe this wet mud into a corner and when it was dry the next day we would shovel it back.

"The gamblers in Placerville, that is, the high-toned fellows, were very handsomely dressed, very aristocratic in their attitude towards the rest of the people, and usually kept by themselves when not gambling. Some wore very fancy shirts, black trousers and high hats; others wore a combination dress of red silk shirt, black trousers, fancy boots and a vivid red sash around their waists, something after the Spanish style. Some wore that outfit because they liked the color effect, but some wore it to attract the Mexican players to their places, for the Mexican loves to gamble and was easy prey for the American card sharp.

"By May the weather had begun to clear up and we knew that we had to get mother away from that damp cabin. It had cost a great deal to live there that winter, even with all the good things the miners had left with us, for flour sold at $1 a pound, and potatoes at $1 each. But we had been an industrious little family. In addition to what my two brothers had made packing pay dirt they had also panned out over $3000 themselves. Sister had saved a nice little sum from her washing, while my handkerchief fund was something to be proud of. We felt that the world was not such a bad place after all, but we did know that Placerville was no place for mother then, so when Mary received an offer to take us all to a hotel down the grade aways where she was to do the cooking, we packed up a few belongings and went down.

"Mother began to improve immediately, and by December she felt that she would be able to go back east, for that was what she was determined to do. The doctor said she could never stand a trip across the Plains again, but might last through an ocean voyage and probably get well. So we all packed up and took a stage to Sacramento and from there to San Francisco. We had expected to take a steamer from there, but just missed it, so we had to take the old sailing ship B. L. Allen. Captain Carter was the master. It was a slow, tedious voyage, that trip to the Isthmus, but it did wonders for mother. By the time we reached the Isthmus she was able to cross and on the other side we took the steamer Sarah Lewis with Captain Kellogg as master.

"On the way up yellow fever broke out, and the captain and many of the passengers died. It was a ship of horror until we reached New York, and yet we all escaped the fever and were well when we landed. Mother, whom we were sure would never reach San Francisco alive, lived until she was 86.

"We stayed in the east until 1854, then we simply could not hold back another day, and in April we started out for St. Joseph again with our ox team. The boys were older, I was eleven; we had already had one experience crossing, we had roughed it in California, and we felt proud of our distinction. The train we joined was much larger than our first one. It was much better organized, and by this time the trails or roads were well known. Mary had bought a horse for me and I rode that horse from the time we left Missouri until we landed in California. I refused to ride in a wagon. Absolutely under no conditions would I break my intention to be able to say that I rode all the way horseback.

"Crossing the desert this time was different in many respects. The first time we crossed we had great difficulty in finding landmarks or signs that would guide us, but on this second journey we found plenty of them; grim, horrible reminders of the tragedies that had occurred along the way. Hundreds upon hundreds of bleaching skeletons of oxen and horses were scattered all along the line. When we came to Utah we made a big detour to avoid going near Salt Lake City, for the Mountain Meadow massacre was then the one topic of conversation on the Plains. But the Indians did not bother us except to beg food, which we gave them. As we had left early in the spring we landed in Placerville in good season. Sad memories of that place sent us on farther down the line to Diamond Springs to a ranch where we stayed all winter. In the spring we went to Pleasant Grove, where sister and I cooked in the hotel run by the Wright brothers. Then they leased the hotel to us and we ran it until May, 1856, then we started for Amador county.

"We had heard that mining was much better there, so we struck out for Volcano with our wagons. We had arrived just at the top of the hill leading down into that town when we met three miners. They said that Volcano was pretty well worked out, that Pine Grove was a better place to go, and after we had one look at that steep hill we were willing to turn our horses and go over to Pine Grove. There we decided to settle down. We got some lumber from Clough's mill and built a little home, took up a claim and began to mine. Then mother opened a little store next to where Mrs. Mason lives now. She ran the store two years or more, then got the notion that she Photographs of the so-called horse-hair snakes (above) and of the cabbage snakes (below), both greatly enlarged, the former taken by Miss Mary E. Potter and the latter by Lee A. Dollinger for Guide to Nature.

By FRANK A. LEACH.

IN the days before the automobile displaced the horse, and watering-troughs were necessary adjuncts of roadhouses, it was a common thing to find horse-hair snakes during the summer months and early fall in those receptacles. It was the common belief then that these so-called snakes were mere sections of tail and mane hairs from horses, that had fallen into the troughs, which after a continued immersion in water were imbued with life, or as the common saying was, "changed to snakes."

In color, shape and general appearance, they closely resembled pieces of horse hair, twelve inches and more in length. While not very active the snakes, squirmed and slowly moved about clearly showing possession of life. When one was taken out of the water for examination, so little was found, without the aid of a magnifying glass, to distinguish it from a horse hair, it is not surprising that its origin was credited to transformation.

So strong was the faith of some people in this theory, we frequently heard of experiments in the attempts to produce the snakes by putting horse hairs in bottles of water. It will be seen later why all such experiments were failures. Some individual who could not accept the miraculous transformation idea, advanced the theory that pieces of horse hair after lying in the water for a length of time exposed to sunlight, accumulated in its tissue a mass of microscopical form of insect life, that gave to the horse hair the appearance of animation.

Biologists, however, knew that both were wrong; that the transformation theory was inconsistent with all known laws of nature, and that the other idea had no foundation, for the "snakes" never were horse hairs, or any other kind of hairs that they were nothing more than a peculiar form of worm life, which passed the last stage of its existence in water.

While making a study of the life and habits of the hair worm they found that it was when passing the last stage of its existence in water it produced its eggs for future generation of the worms. The eggs upon hatching gave forth a larva, maggot-like in form, which found its way into the body of a water beetle, grasshopper, cricket and other insects and even spiders, where it flourished, feeding upon the fatty substance of its hosts, and in the course of time undergo a metamorphosis, or change from the larva form to that of the hair like shape, commonly seen in watering troughs.

In this mature form the worm does not appear to feed at all, in fact there is no opening or mouth in the anterior end of the thing. It remains coiled in the body, or more properly stated among the viscera of the insect, that serves as a host, until a favorable opportunity is presented to reach and make its habitation in water. This may be a watering trough, or pond. As many as one to five of the "Hair Snakes," of a length of three to twelve inches, have been found to occupy the abdominal part of a grasshopper and frequently to nearly equal the weight of the host after removal. Although I cannot state it from personal observation I have found it recorded in Packard's "Study of Insects," that regardless of these relative masses of parasites with which the grass-hoppers are infected, they show about as much activity in jumping about as those not infected.

The career of the hair worm in water is a short one, as might be inferred from the fact that it does not feed at all, and could not, for it has no mouth as already stated. During this period it mates, eggs are laid in great numbers in string-like form, and then enfeebled it soon dies.

Earlier authorities writing on the life history of these remarkable parasites, apparently assumed that the hair worms were swallowed in its larval stage by the insect that became its host, but since it has been established that the larva is equipped at its anterior end with a most complete boring device, supplemented with hooks, for forcing its way into the body of the host. In this procedure the hooks play an important part, while the boring or piercing part of the device is being operated, as they are flexible and retractile and therefore used for holding and parting the tissue.

There are several kinds of hair worms, other than the one just described, some which deposit their eggs in the ground, and the earth is their natural habitat. The larvae infests the bodies of insects and I cyonud, seeking water in which to lay its eggs passes through the same stages of existence as the horse hair worm. The cabbage hair worm belongs to this group. They are hair like in form but of a lighter color than the frequenter of the watering trough besides the two ends of the cabbage worm taper more to a point. The family name of these worms is Mermithidae, while the horse-hair worm belongs to the family known as Gordius.

Biologists shatter belief which was held in the days before the auto that filaments sloughed from Dobbin's mane or tail into the watering trough ultimately became imbued with life

Representatives of the hair-worm groups are to be found in many parts of the world, and the true character and the general habits of life have long been known to scientists, and were recorded in the earlier works published on insect life. Nevertheless for some strange reason the public mind has not accepted their findings and seems to prefer the transformation theory, possibly for the reason that without the knowledge of the biological impossibility, the facts and circumstances under which the "Snakes" are seen, seem to point so strongly to transformation.

It was established years ago among scientists that not even the lowest forms of life including bacteria, and such as are only visible under the microscope, are able to come into existence except through the agency of parent forms.

A few years ago Dr. H. G. May of the Rhode Island State College made a study of the life history of two species of the hair snakes, and recently gave the result in an article in the "Guide to Nature." He collected quantities of them and watched them for months. He saw them mate, and saw them deposit their eggs in long white strings. He watched these eggs until they hatched and produced larvae which he placed on grasshoppers and saw how they forced their way into the abdomens of their unfortunate victims. The infested hoppers were kept under observation and the development of the larvae into fully formed hair worms of varying length of from three to twelve inches, was followed from the beginning to the end, and he says: "Nowhere was it necessary to call in the horse hair to account for the adult worm."

The two species that were studied by Dr. May were the gordius robustus and paragordius varius. The former is the larger of the two sometimes reaching the length of two feet. A year's time is occupied in rounding out its life cycle. About half the time or more is spent in the free state in the water without eating. The remainder of the time, excepting the short egg period, of a week or so, is passed in the bodies of the hosts. Dr. May found that the life cycle of the other species, paragordius, was shorter than in the case of the gordius, as it was capable of producing two generations in a year.

must go back east again to see her mother. For some reason, probably on account of the horror of that yellow fever ship, she made up her mind to go back over the Plains. We went down to Sutter Creek with our wagons, then on to Drytown and up to Placerville. There we found that the snow had not all melted off the mountain road so we had to wait here awhile. When we did get started we found that the snow was melting too fast, that the roads were torrents of water and mud.

"We had but the three wagons, but at Placerville several men had a pack train they were taking back across the Plains so we tied up with them. It was a risky thing to do, but we did not realize it. Going over the Sierra was an awful job, with the mud, slush and rain, but we finally got across. We reached Salt Lake City and stopped over there. It was just a little place then, indifferent houses, shade trees in the street, with little creeks running down each one.

"Finally we got home to Urban. Mother bought the little store there and ran it. The postoffice was already in the store so they threw that in when they sold it and I was postmistress. Then the war came on, so we stayed there till 1865, when mother felt that she simply must get back to California. We would have come across the Plains, but immigrant trains were not so plentiful then, so we went to St. Louis, for I think mother really wanted to see a locomotive before she died. Anyhow we took the train from there and arrived in New York. We were lucky there in getting a good steamer to the Isthmus, and from there to San Francisco.

"Things had certainly changed in San Francisco since 1850. All the places were new to us, it was now a large city. We took a boat to Sacramento and from there we went by stage to Latrobe and on to Jackson, then back to Pine Grove, where we had started from years before. We were so glad to get back that we immediately built a new home right next to where we live now, and mother lived with us until she died.

"In the meantime I married Lowry and he mined out this immense hole you see extending down nearly half a mile through our old orchard. In the early days Pine Grove was a solid mass of pine trees. The Pine Grove Hotel was run by Ben Leonard, father of Ben Leonard of Sacramento. The old school house was right in front of the cemetery, just across the road from here. It was built in 1857. At first we had only one teacher, and very few pupils.

"In 1871 I felt I wanted to go back east again, so went to San Francisco and took a steamer to the Isthmus and up through New York and out to my old home. It did not take long before I got the California fever again, so I went to St. Louis and reserved a berth on the new Central Pacific Railway train. It was an awfully tedious trip combing out. It seemed to me that the old ox team and wagon was not much rougher than that first railroad track. Maybe it was because I was tired. Anyhow I was glad to get back to Pine Grove again.

"And now, supposing we have some cookies and coffee?"

In looking this over it seems somehow that I have missed one of those trips across the Plains, but one more or less does not matter. I asked her if she wouldn't like to go across again, and she said she really would like to. I queried, "How?"

"Oh, by airplane I guess."

WOMAN COMMENTS ON CRUELTY OF WOMEN TOWARD WOMEN

That women are unjust to women is an ancient cry. But there has never been any different answer to the question, "Why?" Women are unjust to women because they don't trust them, and because they fear them, and they have always had ample reason for that mistrust and fear.

Even the injustices to which women in the workaday world are subject from colleagues of their own sex, the cattiness of forewomen and manageresses, the refined bullying of certain hospital matrons and hotel housekeepers, the slave-driving mistresses who want the arts of the chef, the manners of a duchess, the gumption of a field marshal and the energy of a pack mule, all told in the same domestic for a few dollars a year; the back-biting, the jealousies, the enmity and the petty rivalries and utter snobbishness to be found flourishing like ugly weeds in every layer of feminine society—all these pale into utter insignificance before the stupendous cruelty of woman to woman where hearts and men are concerned.

Let us face the naked facts and put sentimentality and all popular but lying fallacies anent the inherent saintliness and gentleness of what is really the unfair sex on one side. Woman's greatest enemy after she gets a husband is woman.

Men have been, and are, responsible for much of the unhappiness that enters into the lives of single girls, but it is women in the main who ruin the happiness of wives. For every woman who tries to make a shining success of her married life, there are a dozen women in the offing who are convinced they could do it a lot better if they were given the chance. And some of them stop at nothing to secure that chance.

If the secret history behind most of the unhappy stories of women who have been forced to leave their husbands, or who have been deserted by them, were revealed to the public, the story would be astounding—astounding because it would tell of the appalling prevalence of the girl-thief of married love, the feminine cuckoo who is fouling another woman's love-nest, the pirate on the matrimonial seas who doesn't care what hopes she wrecks and what honor and peace she shatters forever.

I know of a score of such cases, I have heard of scores more, and I have read of hundreds like them. Nor are all these women the lurid vamps so unfaithfully portrayed on those cheap-novelettes-in-de-luxe-bindings which we call films. They do not flit like beautiful birds of paradise across the horizon of happily-married men, dazzling their good sense with mysterious perfumes, intoxicating them with rose du tendre kisses, blinding them with their charm and magic to all other bonds but worthless ones.

We wish they did. They would be so easily sorted out. Alas, the thief of love can be a commonplace girl in an office with a gift for petting and soulful sympathy; she can be the woman wearing a transformation who lives next door and who invites you both in for mah jongg and chicken sandwiches, subsequently helping herself to your husband's chicken heart.—Jane Doe, Continental editor of the London Mail.

"Alphonse" By Fannie Hurst

WAITER KNEW HIS JOB AND PATRONS

JEAN ALPHONSE has been in America TWENTY-ONE YEARS.

He is a waiter

He wears a false, reversible shirt-front and his suits are usually bought second-hand, but his wife Nettie keeps them excellently pressed and every morning sponges out the spots. It is not that Alphonse is an awkward waiter and drops things, but at the rush hour with the long line of men darting in and out of the pantry doors and standing in line for their "orders" to come through the window, bumps do take place and rich sauces and highly colored gravies do leave grease spots.

Alphonse has been a waiter in The Superba Hotel for eighteen years. He has quite a clientele of his own. Patrons often ask the head waiter for "Alphonse's table," and telephone reservations come in for "Table for six tonight at 8, Alphonse, please."

He is a bald little Frenchman, who only uses his worn-out accent for professional purposes, and has a quick turn-up of waxed mustache and a servile bow that represents CUNNING PSYCHOLOGY on Alphonse's part.

When Alphonse bows a patron down the gleaming silver and damask, portered and bellowered jungle of the ornate Superba dining room, the hotel guest is already beginning to get his money's worth. Alphonse's bow is to the bank notes in his patron's pocket, to his position in the community and to the ERMINE PELTS on the BACKS OF HIS WOMEN.

Alphonse is A GOOD WAITER.

The hours are long and difficult. The Superba does not discourage hip flasks, neither is it above serving cocktails in demi tasses. The cuisine is excellent, the dance floor perfection and the Fiji jazz band the best in town. But, as Alphonse puts it, one job is about as hard as another and his work, while long and hard and exacting, does give him a splendid chance to OBSERVE HUMAN NATURE.

Alphonse is somewhat of a wag, in his way. When Alphonse serves the ultra social gum-drop magnate, T. K. Longsterth, with his favorite cup of jellied turtle soup and sherry, you might think that his whole soul was concentrated on the quivering perfection of the greenish contents of that cup. A large part of it is. Alphonse is too good a waiter not to be concerned with just the jellied rightness of a cup of turtle consomme and sherry.

Jean Alphonse is a waiter in the Superba Hotel, with a home out in the suburbs where his wife Nettie and his two sons live.

Rich and fashionable people telephone ahead of time to reserve "Alphonse's table." He has been in America for twenty-one years, but he uses his WORN-OUT ACCENT for professional purposes. He despises, often, the manners and morals of many of his patrons, but he bows servilely to the BANKNOTES in their pockets, and to the ermine pelts on the backs of the women with them.

Alphonse is a good waiter.

But he says to his sons, "See to it that you behave yourselves like decent, SELF-RESPECTING PEOPLE and NOT like the SO-CALLED UPPER CLASSES."

But—Alphonse could also tell you that Longsterth's right hand under the table is tightly clasped in Miss Cissie Madpaugh's of the "Oh, La-La! Review" and that when Miss Cissie withdraws her hand a black pearl as large as a pebble will gleam there, where none was before. Later when Longsterth's chin is beginning to sag down over his shirt front and Miss Cissie's pretty eyes have begun to take on that look of the yolk of egg running into the white, it will be Alphonse who averts the accident of young Longsterth, who has just entered with Miss Teasie Syrup of the Vanities, finding himself seated directly opposite the spectacle of his father and Miss Cissie.

Oh, Alphonse could tell you tales! And he is enough of a STUDENT OF HUMAN NATURE to put his two and twos very neatly together and out of them deduce a philosophy of life that has made him quite the sage of the community out in the edge of the suburbs where he owns a little home.

Yes, Alphonse lives in the suburbs. It is somewhat difficult catching trains and ferries at 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning, but Alphonse says that the FIRST WHIFF OF AIR on the ferries atones for the long hours of breathing in smoke and fumes.

His work at The Superba keeps him in touch with the lives and habits and preferences of the rich, but he says his little suburban home helps to keep him IN TOUCH WITH NATURE, too.

Indeed, his work at The Superba keeps him so minutely in touch with the habits of the rich that Alphonse probably knows more about the famous younger generation and the so-called smart set and the alleged four hundred than any man, sage or wit in the city.

For almost twenty years he has lighted their cigarettes, refilled their glasses, dug out their lobster claws, chilled their champagne, de-heated their artichokes and steadied their departures.

Mrs. Alphonse makes bead sautoirs of beautiful minute workmanship and around Christmas holidays Alphonse carries home more orders from his patrons than she can fill.

The Alphonses refer to the socially supreme Bertie Grosbecks as the "Berties" when they chat among themselves out home in the suburbs, and one night when the famous Bertie Grosbeck himself was so unfortunately addled after a dinner party to twenty that no one in all The Superba was able to pry his clasp from around the neck of Alphonse, there was nothing for Alphonse to do but ride home with Bertie in the Grosbeck limousine and spend the remainder of the night in Bertie's Pompeiian bedroom trying, with the aid of a valet and two butlers, diplomatically to untangle Bertie's affectionate clasps.

The next day Bertie, duly contrite, sent Alphonse a $50 check and a gift of one dozen bottles of Scotch!

Alphonse pocketed the $50 and traded the case of Scotch for a really handsome Regalia graphophone.

The joke of that transaction will always cling to him. A case of Scotch for a graphophone!

Alphonse takes it with a good-natured shrug of his shoulders and his waxed mustache. He does not trouble to explain, but HERE IS THE WHY OF IT:

In the little home out in the suburbs Alphonse has two sons growing up. One of them is learning a trade in a vocational school and the older one is already an apprentice automobile engineer.

For months the family has been wanting a Regalia graphophone instead of the little old table one that squeaks.

Nettie is a great one to try and keep the boys home evenings. She likes them to have in their friends. So, often as not, there is gayety in the front room evenings and Nettie making sandwiches and the rug is rolled back for dancing.

Of course Alphonse isn't home except one evening a week, but then he joins in the fun with gusto and whenever the young folks get a little heady with the joy of the dance and Nettie's excellent brew of grape-juice lemonade, Alphonse admonishes his sons something like this:

"Easy, boys! You are carrying on as common and as vulgar-like as if your name was Grosbeck or Longsterth. You're Alphonses, you are! See that you live up to it and behave yourselves like decent, self-respecting people and not like the SO-CALLED UPPER CLASSES."
